g. V. 15. A buſie-body] What the ἀλλοτριοεπίσκοπος here ſignifies, will beſt be gueſt by obſerving firſt, that it is here joined with other great and groſſe ſins, Theft, Murther, Evil-doing; ſecondly, by comparing it with another word of near ſignification, κακοεργία, 2 Theſſ. 3. 11. (againſt which the Apoſtle exhorts, 1 Theſſ. 4. 1.) This crime is either of a lower or higher ſort; the firſt is idleneſſe, the ſecond improves it into ſedition. Againſt the former the Apoſtolick doctrine did proceed by way of cenſure, that they were not to be acknowledged in the Catalogue of thoſe poor that were to be relieved by the Church out of the publick ſtock, but rather under the title of the ἄτακτοι diſorderly perſons, uſed as thieves (with whom they are here placed) which were to be ſold as ſlaves, forced to labour, and ſo taken off from their idleneſſe and medling with other men's matters. Thus among the Ægyptians idleneſſe was a capital crime; among the Lucani, he that lent money to any idle perſon was to looſe it; among the Corinthians the ſlothfull were delivered to the carniſex, ſaith Diphilus. Another higher then this there was, of undertaking to have the charge of thoſe that do not belong to them; a fault which at this time was very obſervable among the Jewiſh Zelots, who pretending to and promiſing themſelves a perpetual immunity from all power of men (as the onely children of God, which were not therefore to be under any man, particularly under Heathens, but to enjoy an αὐτονομία or immunity) would force all men to join with them againſt the Romans, that is, againſt the publick peace, calling themſelves the εὐεργέται καὶ σωτῆρες benefactors and ſaviours of the nation, and plundering all that would not be as active and ſeditious as themſelves. Such as theſe were very rife at the time of writing this Epiſtle, and might juſtly be here ranked with thieves and murtherers, being moſt eminently both of theſe, under pretence of zeal to the Law, and making all men perform their duty.

h. V. 17. For the time—] The ὅτι here will moſt conveniently be joined with the δοξάζητε, v. 16. as the matter of the Chriſtians joy, and occaſion of his glorifying God, that this is the ſeaſon of judgments beginning at the houſe of God. For there being two parts of God's κρῖμα or judgment, the one tolerable, the other intolerable, the one for advantage of the ſufferer, the other for the greateſt diſadvantage, the one here called ἀρχὴ κρίματος, the beginning, or τὸ πρῶτον, firſt part, of the judgment, the other τὸ τέλος, the end, or tail of it, the one aſſigned to pious men, the οἶκος Θεῦ houſe of God, the other to the impious, obdurate, ἀπειθοῦντες diſobedient (ſee c. 3. g.) it muſt needs be look'd on as an happy condition, and that which is matter of joy and not of ſorrow to any, that they have their part in the former of theſe, and not in the latter of them. What the τὸ τέλος the end here is, may perhaps be queſtioned, whether any vengeance in this life, or that greater in another life. But the anſwer is eaſie: it belongs primarily to the vengeance that here ſhould light upon the obdurate Jewes, their utter exciſion now approaching, ſtyled τὸ τέλος πάντων the end of all things, v. 7. in compariſon with which the perſecutions that now fell on the perſevering Chriſtians from their hands were very light and ſupportable; but this not to exclude, but to be the entrance on that ſad arrier, the dregs of that bitter cup in another world. What is here addded of the δίκαιος μόλις σώζεται, the righteous ſcarcely eſcaping, is thaken from Prov. 11. 31. where that which is in the Hebrew הן צדיק בארץ ישלם, and is from thence rightly rendred by our Engliſh, behold, the righteous ſhall be recompenſed on the earth, is by the Septuagint (by miſtake, as it is probable, of בארץ for ſome other word) rendred δίκαιος μόλις σώζεται, the righteous hardly (that is, not without ſome difficulties and perſecutions) eſcapes; where, as the recompence on earth, which the righteous meets with, is the puniſhments and afflictions which befall him in this life, ſo the σώζεται ſaved, muſt be the temporal preſervations here, or immunity from afflictions, and μόλις σώζεται hardly ſaved, his bearing ſome ſharp pungent part of them, but thoſe not comparable with that other part of God's cup of trembling, which expects the ungodly both here in a remarkable deſtruction, and in another world.

1. THE Elders which are among you I exhort, who am * also an elder, and a witnesse of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that † shall be revealed:]

1. The Bishops of your several Churches (see note on Act. 11. b.) I exhort, who am my self employed here at Rome to govern the Church, one that attended Christ at his crucifixion, and was also at his Transfiguration present at that discourse concerning the glory that should be consequent to his death (see 2 Pet. 1. 16.) the remarkable destruction of his crucifiers, and deliverance of his faithful disciples (see note on 2 Thess. 1. 6.)

2. Feed the flock of God which is among you, † taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind;]

2 Take care of your several Churches, and govern them, not as secular rulers by force, but as pastors doe their sheep, by calling and going before them, (Psal. 80. 1.) that so they may follow of their own accord; nor out of consideration of the gain which may be made by receiving the contributions of the Church put into your hands, as secular rulers again make gain of their government, but so ruling them that they may obey your doctrine and example chearfully;

* having dominion over your charges † becoming γινόμενοι

3. Neither [a] as * being lords over God's [b] heritage, but † being ensamples to the flock.]

3. Not making those advantages of them that are under you which the Procurators or secular governours doe of their Provinces, but contenting your selves with the portion belonging to you, and walking Christianly and exemplarily before them.

4. And when the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.]

4. And when Christ, which is your ruler and governour, as you are rulers of other men, shall come to judgment, you shall assuredly receive from him a crown, which is not made of such fading materials as those in the Olympick games, but one that fadeth not, a crown of glory (see note on 1 Cor. 9. 25.) a reward of your good (that is, eminently good) work, or office, 1 Tim. 3. 1. See note a.

5. And in like manner all inferiours must live obediently under their Bishops, and so must all of you be subject to those that are set over you (see note on Jam. 4. h.) putting on humility as your badge; Or, and so must all of you put on humility as your badge: For God, saith Solomon, setteth himself against the haughty and disobedient, but is very favourable to the meek and obedient.

6. Humble your selves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in * due time:]

6. Submit your selves therefore in all obedience to all those that are placed over you by God, that he may in that great season of retributions, both here in the time of visitation (see note on c. 2. 9.) and hereafter in the day of doom, exalt and reward your humility.

7. Casting all your †care upon him; for he careth for you.]

7. And whatsoever difficulties ye have to wrestle with, be not anxiously solicitous about them, but referre all to God's guidance, either to avert or enable you to support, for he hath a particular care of you, and will not let any thing befall you, which is not really best for you.

8. Be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary the devil, as a roaring Lion, walketh about seeking whom he may devour:]

8. Observe carefully all the rules of sobriety and vigilance, or diligence; for the devil, that upon all occasions indicteth and accuseth you before God, is alwayes watching advantages to get you into his power and reach, and useth all means to that end, as a Lion doth roaring, to fright and amaze, and so catch his prey:

9. Whom resist * stedfast in the faith; knowing that the same afflictions † are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world.]

9. Whose temptations can bring you no hurt but by your yielding to them, and therefore it concerns you to resist him with all constancy and fidelity, making use of the shield of faith, Ephes. 6. 16. to repell all his assaults, that being the tryed instrument of overcoming the devil as well as the world, 1 Joh. 5. 4. and for your encouragement to constancy, you cannot but know that you are not the only sufferers in the world, but that the Christians at Rome, v. 13. and in other places, suffer in the very same manner that you doe.

10. But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a while, * make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you.]

10. But the same God of all mercy and consolation, who, by revealing Christianity to you, hath advanced you to a capacity and (if you be not wanting to your selves) to the possession of his eternal glory through the sufferings of Christ, by his special providence restore you to a peaceable quiet condition of serving him, after these your dispersions are over (see note on 2 Cor. 13. c.) and by that means confirm you to hold out to the end.

11. To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.]

11. And his holy name be for ever blessed and magnified by us all. Amen.

12. By Silvanus † a faithful brother unto you, (as I suppose) I have written briefly, exhorting and testifying that this is the true grace of God wherein * ye stand.]

12. I have written this short Epistle to you by Silvanus, I take it, a worthy and faithful person, perswading you thus to persevere, and assuring you that this which I now preach to you is that faith which was at first received and believed by you, wherein ye have continued so long.

13 The Church that is at Babylon [d] † elected together with you, saluteth you, and so doth Marcus my son.]

13. The Church which is at Babylon (that is, Rome, parallel to Babylon in many things) which is your partner in the faith, saluteth you, and Marcus one of my first converts, or children in the faith.

14. Greet ye one another with a kisse of charity. Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. Amen.]

14. Let that kisse, the token of charity, be from me begun to you all, (see Rom. 16. c.) I salute and wish all prosperity to all the Christians among you. So be it.

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Κατακυριεύειν

V. 3. As being lords] κατακυριεύειν is κατακρατῶν, saith Phavorinus, to have and exercise dominion. What this is, wil appear by that place of the Gospel, Mat. 20. 25. where 'tis explained by the practice of the heathen rulers, Kings or Emperors over them, who doe ἐξουσιάζειν, and κατακυριεύειν (both to the same sense) act as κύριοι lords, masters of their people; and that not only by dominion over their persons, but over their estates too, so far as to maintain all their state out of the peoples purses by way of tribute and taxes. This is the meaning of διακονηθῆς there, ver. 28. to be served or benefited by their subjects, the same that

Xenophon means by ὠφελῆσθαι ὑπ' ἀλλήλων, Praf. to Κύρ. Παιδ. being profited by them: and Callicratides the Pythagorean in his book of the felicity of families, intimates the same by his definition of despotick government, ἀ τῶ ἰδίω συμφέροντι ἀρχοισα, ἀλλ' ἀ τῶ ἀρχομένων, that which respects the rulers own profit, and not the subjects. For this is the manner of the Kings of the nations (and consequently will be so of their King, if they will have one) 1 Sam. 8.11. to receive tributes and the like from their subjects, and to be maintained by them in all their splendour and greatnesse that belonged to them, all the pomps and expences of their families and courts being fetched out of their subjects purses and persons. Which consideration would, saith Samuel, make them think their present estate under the θεοκρατία (being governed by God immediately) much better to them, v.18. And that is the meaning of the καλακυριεύειν, to behave themselves after the manner of these, to use their power in order to their own profits and greatnesse (like those *Neh.*5.5. where the word ἐξουσιάζειν is used.) And this is here forbidden the governours of the Church, they may not make this their manner of ruling, to exercise this power over their flock, but to give them examples of all kind of Christian vertue, and so neither to be πλήκται strikers, imperious, masterly persons, ruling roughly and harshly, and in ostentation of their power, nor αἰσχροκερδεῖς, covetous, griping, making advantage of Ecclesiastical power to squeez gain out of men. Which two things are so severely interdicted the Ecclesiastical ruler, 1 *Tim.*3.3. & *Tit.*1.17. and perhaps are intended here also, v.2. the first by οὐκ ἀναγκαστῶς not forcibly, in an Active sense, not using violence toward the flock, and the latter by the αἰσχροκερδῶς not making filthy gain, that is such as the use of their power over the flock brings them in, over and above that proportion which by the Church is allotted for their maintenance.

b. Ib. Heritage] Κλῆροι may here be the several provinces over which each of the Governours (mentioned together in the Plural v.1.) are placed. So Act. 1.25. κλῆρον διακονίας καὶ ἀποστολῆς, the lot of ministry and Apostleship, is that charge or portion assigned by lot to Matthias, whither he was to goe and officiate and preach the Gospel: From which division then made among the Twelve at their setting out on their travails to plant the Gospel, they and all others ordained by God to be Apostles or Bishops, had afterward their provinces to govern, ποιμαίνειν and ἐπισκοπῆν to rule as Pastors and Bishops, v.2. when they were converted to Christianity: As among the Romans, the Province which such a Proconsul was to administer or govern, was his lot or κλῆρος, according to which Κλησαχία in Phavorinus is rendred δεσποτεία Lordship. In relation to these Provinces among the Romans, over which Procurators, or Prætors, or Proconsuls were set, or to which they were advanced, as to a Magistracy or preferment, and raised great wealth there from their Provinces (as Cicero tells us of Verres and the Prætor of Sicilie) it is, that here the Apostle commands the Bishops not to bear rule as they do over their Provinces (that is, by force, and with griping and squeezing wealth out of them, that is καλακυριεύειν τῶν κλήρων, and ἀναγκαστῶς, and αἰσχροκερδῶς, see Note a.) but to rule them as Pastors do a flock, going before, and so conducting them, which is here the meaning of τύποι γινόμενοι τῆς ποιμνίου becoming examples of the flock, after the manner of the sheep in those parts, where the Pastor going before, the sheep hear his voice and follow him, and that, as it is here, ἑκουσίως and προθύμως willingly and chearfully.

V.5. Clothed] What ἐγκόμβωμα signifies, is particularly set down by Julius Pollux, Ὀνομασ. l.4. c.18. in these words, Τῷ δὲ δούλων ἐξωμίδι ἱματίδιόν τι περίστιγμα λευκὸν, ὃ ἐγκόμβωμα λέγεσθαι ἢ ὀπίβλημα, Upon the servants coat is added a little white garment called by this name; by which it appears to be a habit peculiar to servants, and by what Hesychius and Phavorinus say, (Ἐγκομβωθεὶς, δεθείς, it signifies being bound, and again Ἐγκόμβωμα, δεσμὸς a band,) it appears to be some kinde of girdle or belt; and agreeably Hesychius and Phavorinus explain Κόμνυμαι by ἐγκόμβωμα ἢ ζῶμα Αἰγύπτιον, an Ægyptian girdle. This as it is a belt, or girdle, is an embleme of obedience, and much more so as that girdle was proper to servants; and so 'tis here used by the Apostle to denote humility to those that are placed over them, as their badge by which they may be known to be servants of Christ. That it is no barbarous word, see Photius Epist. 156. who cites out of Epicharmus ἐγκεκόμβωλαι, and ἐγκομβώσαιτο out of Apollodorus, Ἀπωμίαν πήξασα δισπλῶ ἄνωθεν ἐπεκομβωσάμην, I girt it upon me: which agrees with the notion of a belt which we have given of it.

c. Ἐγκομβώσασθε

V.13. Elected together] Ἐκλέγειν to chuse and ἐκκαλεῖν to call or cull out, are in effect all one, and agreeably ἐκλεκτὴ chosen, and ἐκκλησία Church, are so too, noting the society and assembly of Christians, as they are separate from the world, and in that respect said to be called, or picked, or culled out of it. Thus I suppose the word is used in Ignatius's Epistle to the Trallians, or by the interpolator, if that be not the original reading, where speaking of Bishops he saith, χωεὶς τούτων ἐκκλησία ἐκλεκτὴ οὐκ ἔστιν, Ecclesia non est cœtus evocatus, aut peculiaris, that is, in effect the Church is not a Church of such as it ought: And so it must be understood by those words which follow in Videlius's copy; and if they were not written by Ignatius, seem to be a Scholion to explain them, and as such, to be added to them, ἐ σωμάδεσισμα ἁγίων, ἐ ζωαγωγὴ ὁσίων, not a collection of Saints, not an assembly of pious men. And then ζωεκλεκτὴ will signifie that Church which was planted together with them, their sister-Church; see Note on 2 Joh. a. That S. Peter was now at Rome when he wrote this Epistle, in the second year of Claudius, is collected by Baronius, and accordingly Βαβυλὼν here will be resolved to signifie Rome, (see Euseb. l. 2. c.14. and Jerom. De Scriptor. Eccl. in Marco) so called, either διὰ τὸ σεμνὸν, because of the great splendor of that city, saith OEcumenius, or else because of the great confusion of Idolatry which S. Peter found there, (see Rev. 18. Note a.) And so the Church in Babylon, the Christians in that heathen city of Rome.

2. 2SECOND EPISTLE GENERAL

a. Διατίθεις Πέτρ.

THat this ſecond Epiſtle of S. Peter was not at firſt received in the Church of Chriſt with ſo univerſal an agreement and conſent as the former, may be concluded from Euſebius and others of the Antients. But that either it was not received into the antient Canon, or not acknowledged to be written by that Apoſtle, is the too haſty affirmation of ſome few later writers. For the confirming of which, becauſe the poſthumous Annotations of the moſt learned and judicious Hugo Grotius (a perſon which hath deſerved ſo extremely well of this laſt age) have offered a ſpecial argument, it will not be amiſſe briefly to conſider it. It is this; Peter, as all know, died under Nero; but this Epiſtle, as it is there ſuggeſted, at leaſt the third Chapter of it, was written after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. This is attempted to be thus proved: becauſe no Chriſtian ever believed that the end of the world would come till after the deſtruction of the Jewiſh ſtate (but that ſoon after that it would come, was the opinion of many;) whereas, ſaith the objection, the writer of this Epiſtle arms his readers with patience in expectation of the laſt day, if it came not ſo ſoon as they expected. Hereupon the concluſion there is, that Simeon, the Biſhop of Jeruſalem next after James, is probably to be deemed the writer of this Epiſtle, who lived after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, till Trajan's time, and then was crucified. To make this good, theſe inconveniences are preſently foreſeen, which this opinion muſt neceſſarily fall upon. One from the beginning of the Epiſtle, where he is ſtyled Simon Peter, (which cannot belong to Simeon Biſhop of Jeruſalem, who was not called Peter) and Ἀπόστολ& Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, which as little belongs to Simeon, whoſe predeceſſor James in his Epiſtle ſtyles himſelf no more then δοῦλ& a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt. A ſecond from c. 3. 15. where he calls the Apoſtle Paul ἀγαπητὸς ἡμῶν ἀδελφὸς, our beloved brother. To theſe inconveniences the onely expedient that is there offered is this conjecture (Puto titulum fuiſſe, &c.) that the word Πέτρ& Peter ſhould be left out in the Title, and ſo likewiſe the word Apoſtle, and ſo the form be reduced to that of James and Jude, Συμεὼν δοῦλ& Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, Symeon the ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt; and ſo likewiſe that the words rendred, our beloved brother, were not in the antient Copies. But of this there is not pretended any colour of authority from any antient Copie, but onely. Credo ita comperturum ſi quis antiquiora quàm nos habemus Epiſtolæ hujus exemplaria invenerit. I believe that he which ſhall meet with more antient copies then thoſe which we now have, will find it thus. Which as it is an acknowledgment that no copie which we now have favours this conjecture, and ſo that it is deprived of all authority or probable ground, ſo it is an evidence of the infelicity and great injury done to learned men, whoſe notes and all their moſt ſudden conjectures, which never paſt the Authors review, or ſecond, maturer thoughts, are indifferently put together, and ſet out by others after their death. For it is not imaginable that that moſt judicious learned man, who was ſo great a maſter of reaſon, and ſo ſeldome or never aſſumes to put off any opinion of his own upon his own Puto and Credo, thoughts and beliefs, or conjectures, ſhould thus leave out words and expreſſions upon his own phanſie, without any pretence of any one Copie to aſſiſt him. This will be yet more ſtrange, if it be remembred firſt, that ch. 3. 1. this is ſaid to be a ſecond Epiſtle, written much to the ſame purpoſe with the former, which is very agreeable to S. Peter's being the Author of it, the former being wholly bent to fortifie the Chriſtian ſufferers in their conſtancy againſt the baits and ſeductions of the Gnoſticks, but can no way be competible to Symeon the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, of whom no records of thoſe times tell us that he ever wrote any, and of whom it is not by thoſe Annotations pretended that he wrote two Epiſtles. Secondly, that ch. 1. 16, 17. there is a whole paſſage which cannot poſſibly belong to Biſhop Symeon, but ſignally doth belong to the Apoſtle Peter, that of having been on the holy Mount with Chriſt, and hearing thoſe words, This is my beloved ſon, &c. which certainly belongs to the Transfiguration, Mat. 17. where only Peter and James and John were preſent with Chriſt. And it is as ſtrange, which on thoſe verſes is ſaid in thoſe Annotations, firſt, that theſe words muſt not be referred to the Transfiguration on Mount Tabor, but to that other paſſage, Joh. 12. 28. (whereas H. Grotius in thoſe Annotations (which are known to be his) on Mat. 17. diſtinctly applies the words to that on Mount Tabor.) And ſecondly, that when the voice Joh. 12. 28. was in the other words, ἐδόξασα καὶ πάλιν δοξάσω, I have glorified, and will glorifie again, it is there ſuggeſted, that the words, This is my beloved ſon, &c. were put in by ſome ſcribes who took the Epiſtle for S. Peter's. For which again there is not the leaſt proof offered from any Copie antient or modern: So unhappy are all thoſe conjectures in this matter, and ſo injurious to him whoſe name they have aſſumed to give them authority. 'Tis true, there is ſome ſhew of proof offered there, that the phraſe, holy mountain, ver. 18. cannot belong to mount Tabor, being uſed by the Hebr. only for the mount Moriah where the Temple was. But that argument is of ſmall validity, becauſe though Moriah be ordinarily ſtyled Ὄρος ἅγιον the holy mountain, and no other vouchſafed that title by the Jewes, becauſe of God's preſence peculiar to the Temple, which gave it the title of holineſſe; yet it is certain that other places, where God hath appeared to be preſent by his Angels, have by the Jewes and God himſelf been acknowledged and ſtyled holy (as when Moſes γῆ ἁγία is commanded Act. 7. 33. to put off his ſhoes, for the place where he ſtands is holy ground) and it is evident that that glorious appearance, and cloud, and voice at mount Tabor were evidences of this preſence, which might therefore, by analogie with the Sacred ſtyle, denominate it an holy mountain. To this purpoſe it is farther evident that S. Jude ver. 18. ſpeaking of the ſcoffers that ſhould come in the laſt time, walking after their own luſts, cites that prediction from the Apoſtles of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ver. 17. where it is reaſonable to believe that this Epiſtle ch. 3. 3. is referred to, (as indeed a great part of the argument of this Epiſtle is there made uſe of:)

for in it thoſe very words are met with, (and are not ſo in any other Apoſtolick writing) Knowing this firſt, that there ſhall come in the laſt daies ſcoffers, walking after their own luſts. From all theſe premiſes conſidered, it is abundantly clear, that if there be truth in this Epiſtle, (which they that acknowledge it a place in the Canon, and onely queſtion its being written by S. Peter, cannot well be allowed to doubt of) or if S. Jude ſay true, then S. Peter was the Author of it: For there are not greater and ſurer evidences of any Epiſtles being written by the acknowledged Author of it then are theſe forenamed, the title of Simon Peter, the addition of an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, the mention of a former Epiſtle, the having been with Chriſt on mount Tabor, the being called an Apoſtle of Chriſt by S. Jude; all which in all copies ſtand unmoved, to ſecure the authority of this Epiſtle, and to convince us of the Author of it. As for the argument taken from the time of S. Peter's death before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, &c. it is void of all force. For, (to grant all the former parts of it, that S. Peter died under Nero, that that was before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, that all Chriſtians expected that deſtruction before the end of the world;) Firſt, it doth not follow, that if this Epiſtle were written by Symeon, it ſhall therefore fall to be after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem: for James the firſt Biſhop was put to death, and ſo Symeon ſucceeded in that See, 8 years before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and 5 years before the death of S. Peter. Secondly, it is not true which is ſuggeſted in the argument, and on which one thing all the validitie of it depends, that this Epiſtle was written after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. And for the onely proof of that, taken from hence, that the Author of this Epiſtle arms his readers with patience in expectation of the laſt day, that is as farre from truth alſo, there being no word in this Epiſtle to that matter. One paſſage there is which referres to the end of the world, chap. 3. ver. 7. but not as approaching or conceived by any to approach: But the other paſſages of the coming of the day of the Lord as a thief, and the like, belong all to that judgment on the Jewes, expreſſed in like phraſes by Chriſt, Mat. 24. and by the Apoſtles in their Epiſtles, and not to the day of univerſal doom or deſtruction of the whole world, (ſee chap. 3. Note d.) Having thus anſwered the pretenſions againſt the Author of this Epiſtle, it remains that we inquire of the time of writing it, which by c. 1. 14. may juſtly be concluded to have been a little before his death, and that in the time of his laſt danger before his Martyrdome, from the evident approach whereof, or revelation concerning it, he affirms himſelf to know that the time of his putting off this his tabernacle, that is, his death, ταχινὴ ἐστι, is very ſuddainly to come, very near at hand. That Peter and Paul from ſeveral parts of their travails came to Rome about the twelfth of Nero, to defend, and comfort, and confirm the Church that was perſecuted there, hath been reaſonably concluded by Chronologers. And in this year, Anno Chr. 67. about the beginning of October, they are both thought to be caſt into priſon, and ſoon after put to death. And then this is the moſt probable time for the writing this Epiſtle; which being ſo near the warre, on which followed the deſtruction of the Jewes, it is evident what occaſioned the writing of this Epiſtle (and S. Jude's, which being on the ſame ſubject muſt be dated about the ſame time) viz. the confirming the perſecuted afflicted Chriſtians in their expectation of that deliverance which they ſhould now ſhortly meet with, by the deſtruction of their perſecuters. The certainty of which he declares, as alſo the reaſons of its being thus long delayed, and the undiſcernibleneſſe when it comes, fortifying them alſo againſt the infuſions of the Gnoſticks, who took advantage of the continuing of their perſecutions ſo long, and much ſolicited and aſſalted the conſtancy of the afflicted Chriſtians; of whom he therefore warns them, and that by foretelling that they ſhould be ſoon deſtroyed alſo, and all that were corrupted by them.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. Simon, by Chriſt, whoſe diſciple I was, ſurnamed Peter, and by him after, with others, ſent by commiſſion to preach the Goſpel, to all the Jews wherever they are diſperſed, (ſee 1 Pet. 1. 1.) which have received the faith of Chriſt, (and in that reſpect are as valuable in Gods ſight as we the Apoſtles of Chriſt) that faith, I ſay, whoſe object is the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt our God and Saviour, either as that ſignifies his way of juſtifying men now under the Goſpel (ſee note on Rom. 1. b.) or as it may note his fidelity and juſtice in performing what he hath promiſed us in the Goſpel:

1. SIMon Peter, a ſervant and an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us, * through the righteouſneſſe of God, and our Savour Jeſus Chriſt;]

2. I ſalute you, and wiſh you all that felicity, which I promiſe my ſelf you will enjoy by the receiving of the faith, and by your experience and evidence of God's goodneſſe and faithfulneſſe to you in Jeſus Chriſt:

3. According as he of his goodneſſe, and by exerciſe of his controlling omnipotent power, hath afforded us all things that pertain to felicity hereafter, or to piety here, by means of our faith, and profeſſion or acknowledgment of Chriſt, who hath revealed himſelf unto us, and called us into his ſchool, by moſt convincing arguments of his authority and miſſion from heaven; firſt by that glorious act of the holy Ghoſt's deſcending upon him, and the angel ſaying from God [This is my beloved ſon, in whom I am well pleaſed,] (For that that is the meaning of the word Glory, ſee note on Mat. 3. k. Rom. 9. c.) ſecondly, by his miracles which he did among men here, and by his Apoſtles ever ſince:

8. For if these things be in † you and abound, they make you that you shall neither be * barren, nor unfruitful † in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.]

8. For the practice of these vertues, especially if they be in you in any eminent degree, will render you good and faithful servants of Christ, and such as becomes your Christian profession.

9. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see far off, and hath forgotten * that he was purged from his old sins.]

9. And he that falls back into any of those sins, contrary to those vertues, is like a purblind man that cannot see things that are at a distance from him, thinks (through this fault in his eyes, or forgetfulnesse in his understanding) that Christianity may give him liberty and licence, (as the Gnosticks say it doth) whereas it was not long ago that Christianity call'd him out of these pollutions, and wrought this purification upon him, which is directly contrary thereunto.

* the purification of his former sins, τὸν καθαρισμὸν τῶν πάλαι; † brethren, be ye the more diligent, μᾶλλον, ἀδελφοί, σπουδάσατε * or by your good works to make your consolation and election firm, for the King's MS. reads διὰ τῶν καλῶν ὑμῶν ἔργων βεβαίαν ὑμῶν τὴν κλῆσιν. † by no means miscarry ἵνα μὴ πταίσητε

10. Wherefore † the rather, brethren, give diligence * to make your [d] calling and election sure: for if ye doe these things, ye shall † never fall:]

10. This, brethren, must oblige and engage you to all care and diligence to make God's mercies in calling you to be Christians, and designing you deliverances, effectual to you. This must be done by your vigilancy over your selves, that you relapse not into those former sins from which you came out at your conversion to Christ: which if you do, you shall never miscarry, or forfeit that great benefit of being Christians, and of being that remnant that should now be delivered, when the rest of the Jews that believe not shall be destroyed. [d]

11. For so an entrance shall be ministred unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdome of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.]

11. For by this means you shall be capable of being the men of which the kingdome of Christ shall be made up, that kingdome which begins in the vengeance executed on the unbelieving impenitent Jews, and in delivering the believers, and shall last most gloriously for ever in subduing of enemies, and delivering of disciples.

* or, I will put, for the King's MS. reads μελλήσω ὑμᾶς-

12. Wherefore * I will not be negligent to put you alwaies in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth.]

12. The vastnesse of your concernments herein makes me thus solicitous to inculcate these things unto you: not that I think you ignorant in this point of doctrine concerning the method that shall be used by Christ in erecting his kingdome here on earth, viz. by coming in vengeance on the obdurate, and delivering the constant persevering Christians; for I am sure you have been taught it over and over again, and sufficiently instructed and satisfied in the truth of it.

† But δὲ

13. † Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance:]

13. But I think it not amisse, as long as I live in this world, or in this flesh, to be your remembrancer, and refresh these notions, stir up that knowledge which is already in you:

14. Knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me.]

14. Knowing that the time of my dissolution now suddenly approacheth, according as Christ, when he foretold of some that should survive this coming of his to the destruction of the Jews, (which now I speak of) gave an intimation to me that I should not, Joh. 21. 18, 22. and positively affirmed that I should be crucified, as ere long I expect to be.

15. * Moreover I will endevour that you may be able after my decease to have these things alwaies in remembrance.]

15. And therefore I being to dy before this comes to passe, but many of you likely to live to see it, it is my duty and purpose by this Epistle to fix it in you, that when I am dead and gone, you may remember this certain truth of Christ's kingdome, and coming to destroy the Jewish unbelievers and crucifiers, and to preserve and rescue the believers among them (see c. 2. 9.)

16. For we have not followed cunningly-devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and [e] coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty.]

16. For they are not phansies or deceivable arguments upon which we have grounded this doctrine concerning Christ's coming in power to the destruction of his enemies, and rescuing of believers, but the very things which we saw adumbrated, and heard discoursed on by Moses and Elias (see note on Mat. 17. a. and Luc. 9. 31. note c:) when I and James and John were with Christ on Mount Tabor, and saw the Majesty that was instated on him at his transfiguration, Mat. 17. [e]

17. For † he [f] received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the * excellent glory, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased.]

17. For at the time of his receiving that Majesty from the Father by way of vision, foretelling what should soon be instated on him, there was a voice which came out of that shining cloud, Mat. 17. 5. and with it these words, Thou art my beloved Son, &c. which signified God's design of instating the kingdome on him. [f]

† we also heard, ἠκούσαμεν * being ὄντες

18. † And this voice which came from heaven we heard, * when we were with him in the holy mount.]

18. And I also with James and John heard this voice which came out of the cloud, Mat. 17. 5. being then with him on that mount, where he was transfigured, and which by the evident presence of God by his Angels there became an holy place: see note on the Title of this Epistle.

19. And beſide theſe adumbrations by way of viſion in the mount, we have many prophecies in the Old Teſtament concerning this matter, which together with Chriſt's predictions Mat. 24. are yet a more firm, ſure, infallible argument to us then any other. And 'tis well done of you to ſtudy and obſerve theſe prophecies, which may ſtay your hearts in this ſtate of affliction and perſecution, until that day of your deliverance come, or till the forerunners of it, Luk. 21. 28. begin to ſhew themſelves unto you.

† And we have a more firm prophetick word, κ) ἔχομεν βεβαιότερον τὸν προφητικὸν λόγον

20. This being a principle known to all, that no Scripture-prophecie is without particular miſſion and appointment from God; that which the prophets there have foretold being not the ſuggeſtions of their own ſpirits, what they thought good, but what God inſpired and moved them to, by his Spirit's coming upon them.

21. For none of the prophets of any time have undertaken that office on their own heads, or propheſied their own fanſies or perſwaſions, but all the Scripture-prophets have been men called and ſent by God on his meſſages, and inſpired and inſtructed by the holy Spirit of God, every word which they have delivered. And therefore you cannot run any hazard in depending upon that which they have foretold ſhall come to paſſe in theſe, which they called the laſt days, Joel 2. 28,30, 31, 32. and in many other places.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Ἀρετὴ

V. 3. Vertue] The word ἀρετὴ vertue, beſide the ordinary known notion of it for probity of manners among men, as the generical word that contains all moral and Chriſtian vertues under it, (in which ſenſe it is uſed Phil. 4. 8.) doth in this Chapter ſignifie two things, very diſtant from one another, and both of them differing from this. In this verſe it ſignifies the power of God which he ſhewed in Chriſt, eſpecially the miracles which he was enabled to work: and ſo 'tis here joined with the glory; whether the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt on him and on the Apoſtles (which is ordinarily called Shechina and δόξα glory, ſee Mat. 3. c.) or whether the glory that ſhone in his works and doctrine be meant by it. So 1 Pet. 2. 9. ἀρετὰς καλέσαντος the vertues (in the Plural) of him that called us out of darkneſſe into this great light, that is, his miraculous power, divine actions and words together. But then in the 5th verſe of this Chapter, the word ſeems to have yet a third notion, and belonging there evidently to men, not God, as here, it cannot yet be fitly interpreted by that word Vertue, which is the general comprehenſive title of all vertues; for many of them are after named, as continence, patience, &c. and required to be ſuperſtructed upon this of ἀρετὴ vertue, which would not be ſo proper: but it ſeems rather to ſignifie (in that notion wherein both the Greek ἀρετὴ and the Latine virtus are often uſed) ἀνδρείζεσθαι, 1 Cor. 16. 13. manhood, courage, or fortitude, in adhering to Chriſt, Mat. 16. 24. which the Gnoſticks, againſt whom he armes them, would ſo fain rob them of now in time of perſecutions; ſo as in thoſe verſes of * Euripides, Fortitude is very uſefull againſt afflictions, a man may ſhew virtue in his death. For there fortitude and virtue are all one. And ſo to their virtue or courage they muſt adde knowledge, that is, that true Chriſtian knowledge, to which their ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις knowledge falſly ſo ſtyled was oppoſed; and to that, continence, contrary to their uncleanneſſe and filthyneſſe; and to that, perſeverance, &c. juſt as 2 Cor. 6. 6. after patience in afflictions, ver. 4. and purity, is γνῶσις knowledge: which again that it is ſet oppoſite to that pretended of the Gnoſticks, ſee the Context there, and Note a. on that Chapter.

b. Φθείρειν

V. 4. Corruption] φθείρεσθαι corrumpi ſignifies ſometimes to be debauched to ſin, particularly, and in the moſt eminent manner, to thoſe ſins againſt nature, abominable heathen luſts: ſo 2 Cor. 7. 2. οὐδένα ἐφθείραμεν we have corrupted no man, ſeems to relate to thoſe falſe teachers, the Gnoſticks among them, who did thus corrupt and ſeduce their diſciples. Agreeable to which is that ſpeech of Heraclitus in his Epiſtle to Hermodorus, Τίνι συμμοιχεύω; τίνι συμμαιμονῶ; τίνι συμμεθύω; τίνι συμφθείρομαι; ᾧ φθείρω, ὃν ἀδικῶ, & οὐδένα τῶν ἁπάντων, With whom have I accompanied in adultery, in murther, in drunkenneſſe, in corruption, or pollution? I corrupt, I wrong no man of them all. Thus was Socrates accuſed ὡς ἀπατεῶν, ὡς λυμεῶν, ὡς φθορεὺς τῶν νέων, as a deceiver, a debaucher, corrupter of youth; and this the ſumme of his accuſation, ἀδικεῖ Σωκράτης διαφθείρων τοὺς νέους, he wrongs and corrupts the young men. So in a narration of Hippolytus in * Palladius, of a Chriſtian Virgin put by the tyrannical Judge into a brothel-houſe, the debauch'd young men ſtrait came, βουλόμενοι ταύτῃ συνεῖναι φθορᾶς ὁμιλεῖν, to company with her for corruption, that is, to commit all filthineſſe with her. And ſo after he that freed her from that houſe is ſaid τῆς ἀτίμου φθορᾶς ἀπολλάξας to have delivered her from this diſhonourable or vile corruption. And ſo c. 11. 3. So perhaps διαφθείροντες τὴν γῆν, Rev. 11. 18. corrupting the earth, ſee Note c. So Epheſ. 4. 22. the old heathen condition is called the old man, φθειρόμενον κατὰ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας τῆς ἀπάτης, corrupted according to thoſe luſts of deceit, that is, the unnatural luſts of the heathen world, then brought into the Church by the falſe teachers, the Gnoſticks. So Jude 10. ἐν τούτοις φθείρονται, in theſe they are corrupted, noting their corrupt practices contrary to nature. Thus οἰκοφθόροι in Ignatius Epiſt. ad Epheſ. is by the Tranſlator rendred Maſculorum concubitores, and by Heſychius μοιχοὶ, and ſo παιδοφθόρος in the Epiſtle of Barnabas, in this ſenſe, ſo vulgar in other Authors. And thus it clearly ſignifies in this place, (and others of this Epiſtle) having ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ in luſt added to it, and τῆς ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, that is in the world, referring to thoſe unnatural Gentile practices. So φθορὰ corruption c. 2. 12. is all unnatural filthineſſe; ſee Note on Rom. 8. 1. and Note on 2 Pet. 2. b.

c. Γνῶσις

V. 5. Knowledge] The true notion of the word γνῶσις knowledge in this and many other places will be beſt diſcerned by obſerving that the word is uſed 1 Cor. 12. 8. as a peculiar χάρισμα or gift of the Spirit (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 1. c. & 1 Pet. 3. c.) and ſignifies the underſtanding of the word of God, that is, the Scriptures, in the diviner and more myſterious ſublime ſenſe, ſuch as the Judaizing Gnoſticks pretended to have an abſtract of, Rom. 2. 20. called there μόρφωσις γνώσεως, ſuch as to which the Jews pretend in their Cabala. So again c. 13. 2. where πᾶσα γνῶσις, all knowledge, is the ſame with εἰδῶ τὰ μυστήρια, know myſteries precedent, and differs from πᾶσα πίστις, all faith, in this, that πᾶσα γνῶσις, all knowledge, is that more ſubtile myſterious underſtanding of the Old Teſtament, and πᾶσα πίστις, all faith, is all kind of Chriſtian faith, even that that hath the gift of miracles annexed to it. So again ver. 8. where

Πᾶσα γνῶσις

Εἰδῶ τὰ μυστήρια

where 'tis mention'd as an extraordinary gift, and joined with tongues and prophecyings; so c. 14. 6. revelation, knowledge, tongues, prophecie: and from thence it comes to signifie κοινῶς the more exquisite knowledge of Christ and the mysteries of the Gospel, as Col. 2. 3. the hidden treasures of knowledge; which is also intimated by κλεῖδα τῆς γνώσεως, the key of knowledge, Luk. 11. 52. that knowledge which is lock'd up. So Rom. 11. 33. γνῶσις Θεοῦ, the knowledge of God, Βάθος of which there was such a βάθος profundity, and chap. 15. 14. πᾶσα γνῶσις the knowledge of all mysteries. That this is it that is spoken of 1 Cor. 8. 1. appears by Φυσιοῖ that which is affirmed of it, that it doth φυσιοῦν, puffe up, for so knowledge of mysteries is of all things most apt to doe. So ver. 10. that knowledge which another looks on in thee with that reverence, and on occasion of which he, being not able to discern so subtilly, comes to sin and perish by reason of thy having and using it,

Γνῶσις δόξης Θεοῦ. v. 11. So 2 Cor. 4. 6. the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, that is, the understanding of that great mysterie wherein God exhibited himself to us in the person of Christ incarnate. So when we read περίσσευσαν abounding, or ὑπερέχον excelling joined with it, Ephes. 3. 19. and Phil. 3. 8. From these notions of the word it is that the Gnosticks of those times took their names, pretending to all secret mysterious understanding of the Old Testament, and grounding all the filthy passages of their doctrine upon several places so interpreted by them after their own polluted phansies, as may be seen in Epiphanius. This is men-

Ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις tioned by the Apostle under the title of ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις knowledge falsly so called, 1 Tim. 6. 20. by them called γνῶσις knowledge, and the γνωστικοὶ knowing persons, but, saith he, ψευδώνυμοι very falsly so styled by them, and so 'tis acknowledged by Theophylact. And according to this it is that the Apostle Barnabas in his Epistle (those fragments of it that are come to us) setting himself distinctly against these Gnosticks, that out of the mystical interpretation of the Old Testament brought in many damnable doctrines, (not only the necessity of continuing Circumcision, &c. but the lawfulnesse of all abominable unnatural filthinesse, and withall the denying of Christ's coming really in the flesh) sets up another γνῶσις, or mystical exposition of the Old Testament, and in that whole Epistle interprets many places of Scripture to the maintaining of Christianity against them. And hence I conceive it is that in this Epistle, which is so wholly designed as an antidote against the Gnosticks (as the Epistle of S. Jude also is) and particularly against their abominable filthy practices, the word γνῶσις knowledge is used, not for that χάρισμα or gift of mysterious knowledge, but for the true saving Christian knowledge, in opposition to that pretended to by the Gnosticks, and therefore it is here encompassed with virtue on one side, meaning by it courage and constancy in the Faith (see Note a.) so opposite to their doctrine of compliances, and ἐγκράτεια continence on the other side; and the adding of these one to another, courage to their faith, and continence to their γνῶσις knowledge, is by him advised to, on purpose to testifie and demonstrate their having forsaken the φθορὰ ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ ver. 4. those abominable lusts, ἐν κόσμῳ, so used in the heathen world, and brought into Christianity by the Gnosticks.

V. 10. Calling and election sure] What is meant d. Κλῆσις by κλῆσις calling, hath been said at large Note on Mat. 20. c. the mercy of God in making them Christians; Ἐκλογὴ and so what by ἐκλογὴ election, Note on 1 Pet. 2. c. that peculiar favour of being the remnant to whom the promises of deliverance belonged, and in whom they should be fulfilled, when the rest of that people, remaining obdurate in their sins, should be destroyed. All the difficulty remaining is to determine what is meant by βεβαίαν ποιῆσαι, to make either or both these Βεβαίαν ποιῆσαι firm, or sure. And first, that this referres not to the assuring our selves of either, that is, to our being confident that we are called or elected, to our acquiring any certainty of belief or firmnesse of hope in our own minds that we are in the favour of God, which is ordinarily styled certitudo subjecti, the certainty of the subject, may appear by this, that there is in this verse no mention of either faith or hope, or any thing in us, but only of calling and election, which are acts of God's favour without and concerning us. The King's MS. reads it indeed with some change, διὰ τῶν καλῶν ὑμῶν ἔργων βεβαίαν ὑμῖν τὴν παράκλησιν καὶ ἐκλογὴν ποιῆσαι, by your good works to make consolation and election firm to you, where consolation doth more sound to that sense then calling could doe. But of that reading it is observable, first, That the antient Latine, that appears to have read the first part of it as it is in the King's MS. διὰ τῶν καλῶν ἔργων, by goods works, doth not acknowledge the latter, but retains κλῆσιν calling, with the other ordinary Copies; secondly, That the word Calling is oft in other places joined with Election, but Consolation never, which is a farther prejudice against this reading; thirdly, That if παράκλησιν consolation were retained, yet it must necessarily signifie that consolation as it is afforded by God, not as it is in us, his real goodnesse to us, not our apprehension of it; so that it may agree with ἐκλογὴν election, which we know is God's electing or preferring of us, or the favour done to us by God, without any intimation of our apprehensions. Secondly, this phrase cannot refer to the promises of God, so as to signifie our making them sure or firm, for they are certainly and immutably so already, and it is God, not we, that is to make them so, by performing them to us. It remains then that by this phrase βεβαίαν ποιεῖσθαι to make firm, must be meant that which through the grace of God is in the Christians power by care and diligence to doe, viz. to qualifie themselves with a capacity of receiving the benefit and fruit of these mercies and favours of Christ, to remove the hindrances which will keep them from being actually beneficial to us, and so to render them firm, that is, effectual to the good of our souls. And all the promises of God being conditional, and our performance of that condition being from us required, that the favours of God bestowed on us, his calling and election, may be effectually such to us, really for our advantage, not our woe, the only way to make them effectual to us is our discharging our parts, performing the condition; and to this it is that our diligence is here required, which cannot be available in any thing else. That this is the meaning of the words may appear by the like phrase, Rom. 4. 16. εἰς τὸ εἶναι εἰς τὸ εἶναι βεβαίαν τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν παντὶ τῷ σπέρματι, that the promise may be firm to all the people, which no way re- βεβαίαν τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν ferres or looks to their confidence or perswasion of it, nor to the firmnesse of the promise only, but to the benefit and fruit and effectualnesse of it to them: so Rom. 15. 8. Christ became a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, that is, to make good God's promises to the Jews, εἰς τὸ βεβαιῶσαι τὰς ἐπαγγελίας τῶν Βεβαιῶσαι τὰς ἐπαγγελίας πατέρων, to make the promises of the fathers firm, that is, effectual, to exhibit and perform them to them. So Heb. 2. 2. If the word which was spoken by Angels, that is, the Law given to Moses, be firm, that is, were performed, failed not of the effect, (without any reference to their perswasion of it,) for so 'tis expressed by what follows, and every trangression and disobedience received a just reward, that is, the breaches of that Law were actually punished. And accordingly here their diligence in making their calling and election firm, is taking care that the mercies of God toward them in calling, and chusing, or preferring them before others, may prove effectual to them, that is, that they may obtain that benefit which was deſigned them by God in theſe mercies, and which they certainly ſhall obtain if they perform what is required of them. Thus in a like phraſe, to apprehend, or lay hold on, eternal life, 1 Tim. 6. 12. is but the interpretation of, fight the good fight, going before, the only way to the obtaining of that βεβεῖον or reward (like that in the Olympick games) which is given to none but conquerors, being the contending νομίμως, according to the laws of the agones, fighting and overcoming, which is expreſs'd Phil. 3. 12. by διώκω εἰ καταλάβω, I purſue, or run, if ſo be I may obtain.

e. V. 16. Coming of our Lord] That παρουσία Χριστοῦ the coming of Chriſt ſignifies the remarkable deſtruction of the impenitent Jewes, and deliverance of the believers among them, hath been often ſhewed (ſee Note on Mat. 24. b.) and particularly that 'tis called his coming with power, Mat. 24. 30. that is, as a King or mighty perſon. Agreeably to that is here the power and coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, δύναμις καὶ παρουσία, in this ſenſe of his coming to diſcriminate between the perſecuters and diſciples, ſo that one ſhould be taken, and the other left, Mat. 24. 40. the obſtinate obdurate Jewes to be utterly deſtroyed by the Roman Eagles, as by Chriſt's executioners, and the faithful among them delivered out of that ruine. And to that doth the Context here, and almoſt all the reſt of this Epiſtle, direct thoſe words; ſee ch. 3. 1, and 4. All the difficulty will be, how that which here immediately follows, but were eye-witneſſes of his majeſty, can belong to this particularly. To which I anſwer, that the word μεγαλειότης is there ſet to expreſſe that majeſty which was by way of viſion repreſented and inſtated on Chriſt at the time of his Transfiguration on mount Tabor, at which Peter was preſent as an αὐτόπτης or eye-witneſſe. This is clear from v. 17. by the voice that came out unto him from the magnificent glory (that is, from that ſplendid cloud, Mat. 17. 5. Mar. 9. 7. and Luc. 9. 35. and that glorious appearance of angels, called his glory, Luc. 9. 31, 32.) This is my beloved ſon, &c the very paſſage that is there mentioned. Now this Transfiguration was meant by Chriſt to give Peter and John ſome image and ſhadow of (a kind of parable to expreſs) this coming of Chriſt in this glorious manner againſt his crucifiers, and for the reſcue of all perſevering diſciples. This appears by theſe two circumſtances; firſt, by the paſſage immediately precedent (with which the ſtory of the Transfiguration connects in all the three Goſpels where 'tis mentioned,) viz. that he that will ſave his life, that is, forſake Chriſtianity, to avoid the preſent preſſures, ſhall loſe it, that is, ſhall be deſtroyed in that παναλεθρία: but he that will loſe his life for Chriſt's ſake, that is, venture the utmoſt danger rather then fall off from Chriſt, ſhall find, or ſave, it, that is, be thus delivered, at Chriſt's coming to execute vengeance on thoſe perſecuters: which are the very words again uſed by Chriſt in the deſcribing of that coming of his to the deſtruction of the Jews, Luc. 17. 33. And farther, that he that ſhall be aſhamed of Chriſt, of him ſhall Chriſt be aſhamed, when he ſhall come in his own glory, and his Fathers, and the holy Angels, that is, when he comes in this kingdome of his (not onely at the day of doom, but) peculiarly within the ſpace of the life of ſome by-ſtanders, as all the Goſpels agree in that place, and as at another time Joh. 21. Chriſt ſaith particularly of S. John, who lived to ſee it. Of which that he might give them ſome eſſay, he had three of them up to the mountain, and was transfigured before them, gave them ſome glimpſe of that future glorious coming of his. The ſecond circumſtance to make this appear reaſonable, is the buſineſſe of the diſcourſe which was betwixt Moſes and Elias and Chriſt at that time, which appears by Matthew and Mark to be the approach of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, from that queſtion of the diſciples Mat. 17. 10. and Mar. 9. 11. Why then ſay the ſcribes, that Elias muſt firſt come? who, ſaith Malachi, was to come before that great and dreadful day. This S. Luke more particularly mentions, c. 9. 31. ἔλεγον τὴν ἔξοδον αὐτοῦ ἣν ἤμελλεν πληροῦν ἐν Ἱερουσαλήμ, they ſpake of his exodus, which he was ready to perform at Jeruſalem. What this Ἔξοδος was hath there been ſaid, ſee Note on Luc. 9. b. viz. Chriſt's going out of this world, as Moſes went out of Ægypt, Heb. 11. 22. (which one ſtory gives that title of Exodus to that ſecond Book of Moſes ſo called) and to this is that great day of the Lord reſembled Jude 5. being attended firſt, with the deſtruction (as of the Ægyptians there, the oppreſſors of him and the people of God, and after of the Iſraelites themſelves that believed not, Jude 5. ſo) of the Jews here, the crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecuters of Chriſtians, and withall of all vicious abominable Chriſtian profeſſors, that turn the Goſpel into licentiouſneſſe; and ſecondly, with the deliverance of God's people, as there of the children of Iſrael, ſo here of all the true Iſraelites, the faithful diſciples of Chriſt, that ſtick cloſe to him in deſpite of perſecuters and ſeducers. In reſpect of which as Moſes was their σωτὴρ, ſaviour or deliverer, and a God of vengeance to Pharaoh, &c. and as ſaviours are ſaid to judge, Obad. 21. ſo is this coming of Chriſt, the coming both of a King and of a Saviour, to deſtroy enemies and deliver friends. Which being the matter of Elias and Moſes's diſcourſe with Chriſt, at which S. Peter himſelf was preſent (& by thoſe very perſons ſomewhat was adumbrated alſo, Elias being he that called for fire from heaven to conſume, and Moſes he that thus delivered the Iſraelites out of Ægypt) S. Peter here may very well mention it, as a demonſtrative evidence, by which he was able to make known unto them this power and coming, v. 16. that is, this powerful regal coming of Chriſt that now we ſpeak of.

f. V. 17. Received——] What is meant here by λαβὼν παρὰ Θεοῦ πατρὸς τιμὴν καὶ δόξαν, receiving from God the Father honour and glory, will eaſily be gueſſed both by what hath been ſaid Note e. and eſpecially by the μεγαλειότης, majeſty of Chriſt, of which they are ſaid to have been eye-witneſſes. For this verſe being by the 38, for, annex'd as a proof to the former, it muſt follow that the honour and glory which Chriſt received here, v. 17. is that majeſty which they ſaw, v. 16. That ſurely ſignified the dignity royal that there, by way of viſion or prophecie, he was inſtated in, this Commiſſion ſent him from heaven, as it were, by the hands of two great men, Moſes and Elias, who alſo talk'd with him on this ſubject. and told him what ſhould befall him, firſt in his paſſage to this kingdome, and then how it ſhould be exerciſed by him upon his crucifiers. And then this muſt be the meaning of his receiving honour and glory here, that is, this kingdome being thus (in viſion) inſtated on him; a ſolemnity of which is that which follows, φωνῆς ἐνεχθείσης τοιᾶσδε, this, or ſuch a voice being brought to him, or delivered out of the magnificent glory, (that is, out of the bright ſhining cloud (ſee Note on Mat. 3. c) that appeared in that viſion) This is my beloved ſon, &c. ſignifying God's purpoſe of ruling the world by him, devolving the government of all upon him. Some place of miſtake here may be, by confounding together this ſolemnity and this majeſty, from thence imagining that this voice from heaven was the τιμὴ καὶ δόξα honour and glory which he received. But this is a miſtake, it being firſt evident, that there were two things here mentioned of this viſion, one the object of their ſight, of which they were αὐτόπται eye-witneſſes, the other, of their hearing, or which ἠκούσαμεν they heard. And the former of theſe was in ſeveral phraſes, the μεγαλειότης majeſty, and τιμὴ καὶ δόξα honour and glory, that was veſted on him; the latter the proclamation, as it were, before him, when, when in vision he enters on this office: And of this it it said, ver. 18. ἡ φωνὴ αὕτη ἡμεῖς ἠκούσαμεν, This voice also we heard, as before they had seen the majesty or honour and glory, making these, two disparate things, as the lightning and the thunder, the one to the eye, the other to the ear, but both proofs of the same matter (the argument or subject here in hand) the kingdome which Christ had at his resurrection entred on, and should now shortly actually exercise it in the destroying of his crucifiers. That λαὸν here in the Nominative hath no Verb following to govern it, is after the manner of these Hebraizing writers, and in the construction must be set as if it were λαβόντα, the Genitive taken absolutely.

g. V. 19. Day-starre] The word ἡμέρα day, for Christ's coming in vengeance on his crucifiers, hath been interpreted formerly. See Note on Heb. 10. 2. Rom. 13. 12. and so most particularly here it signifies, ἡμέρα διαυγάζουσα, the shining forth of that day that had been before but obscurely prophesied of. Then for the word φωσφόρος, that is a known star, which, as a πρόδρομος or harbinger to the day or Sun, ushers him into our Hemisphere. Proportionable to this are the particular remarkable passages which Christ foretold, as the immediate harbingers before this coming of his, such as are mentioned Luc. 21. 28. which when they begin to appear, then, saith he, lift up your heads, take comfort, διότι ἐγγίζει ἡ ἀπολύτρωσις ὑμῶν, for, or because, your redemption draweth near. And so the Lucifer or morning-star shall signifie the immediate forerunners of this day, which till it come, they must content themselves with the darker prophecies, and sustain themselves by that means. And if the addition of ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν in your hearts, wherein the Phosphorus is said to arise, be thought to resist this interpretation, the account of that is ready; First, that the rising of the Phosphorus here not being literally to be understood, was by this addition very fitly confined to the Metaphorical notation, in our hearts being opposed to in the heavens: Secondly, that our hearts being the seat of practical judgment, by which we ponder and consider, this morning-star, signifying the forerunners of that eminent famous day, will then be said to arise in our hearts, when we by consideration of the predictions come to take notice of them as such. As the faithful are in story said to have done, when seeing the Roman armies to have begirt Jerusalem, they from thence concluded, according to Christ's words, that the destruction thereof was nigh, and thereupon, as soon as they had the advantage of the siege being raised, they fled out of the city to Pella, and there continued.

h. V. 20 Interpretation] Ἐπίλυσις here seems to be an Agonistical word, to signifie the starting, or watch-word, or signe, upon which the racers set out or begin their course. The place from whence they set out is called ἀφετήρια, where when they set out, they are said to be let loose, and this is literally ἐπιλύειν. To this is the sending of Prophets here compared, who are said to run, Jer. 23. 21. Ezech. 13. 6, 7. They run, and I sent them not, that is, οὐκ ἐπέλυσα I gave them no watch-word to run, as in the Psalmist, God gave the word, great was the company of preachers. When any undertakes to prophesie without Gods sending, this is ἰδίας ἐπιλύσεως, of his own starting, and this is here denied of the Prophets of the Old Testament; for, as it follows, οὐ θελήματι ἀνθρώπου ἠνέχθη ποτὲ, it was never brought by the will of man, that is, 'twas never ἰδίας ἐπιλύσεως, of their own incitation, but holy men, φερόμενοι ὑπὸ πνεύματος, carried by the Spirit, ἐπιφορούμενοι, inspired and carried by God, did prophesie, &c.

CHAP. II.

Paraphrase.

1. BUt there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, * even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.]

1. But as among those prophets sent and incited by the holy Ghost, c. 1. 21. some false ones also slily crept in; so also now according to Christ's prediction Mat. 24. 11. shall there be false teachers among you, viz. the Gnostick Christians, bringing into the true faith, under pretence of greater perfection, most destructive doctrines of liberty and licentiousnesse, and that count it an indifferent thing to deny Christ in time of persecution, (see 1 Pet. 2. 21. and note on Rev. 2. b.) and forswear him who redeemed them, that are thus unlike him, as not to venture any danger for him who dyed for them, and do also by this means most imprudently incur the dangers which they desire (and pay so dear) to avoid, by complying with the Jews, come to speedy destruction with them, according to that of Christ, Mat. 16. 25.

2. And many shall follow † their pernicious ways, by reason of whom * the way of truth shall be evil spoken of.]

2. And these carnal doctrines of theirs shall have many followers, Mat. 24. 11. and thereby the glorious pure Gospel of Christ shall be much defamed, when Christian professors shall live such filthy lives.

† or filthinesse, for so many antient Copies, the King's MS. and that in Magdalen Coll. Oxon. read ἀσελγείαις * or the glory of the truth, for the King's MS. reads ἡ ὁδὸς

3. And † through covetousnesse shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgement now of a long time lingreth not, and their damnation slumbreth not.]

3. And with cunning discourses shall they circumvent you, and gain you to all filthinesse, (see note on Rom. 1. i.) which shall within a while be most signally punished with utter destruction here, and damnation attending it.

† with feigned speeches they will gain you to inordinate lusts, ἐν πλεονεξίᾳ πλαστοῖς λόγοις ὑμᾶς ἐμπορεύσονται

4. For if God spared not the Angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness * to be reserved unto judgment,]

4. For if God, when the Angels rebelled against him, punished them severely, and having decreed them to eternal hell, cast them presently out of heaven into the abysse, a kind of dungeon or dark prison, there to be reserved, as condemned malefactors, to the day of judgment, the time of their execution,

* or to keep them punished unto judgement, for the King's MS. reads εἰς κρίσιν κολαζομένους τηρεῖν

5. And spared not the old world, but † saved Noah a the eighth person, a preacher of righteousnesse, bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly,]

5. And if he punish'd the whole world of sinners in Noahs time, bringing a deluge on them, and onely preserved Noah (with seven more) who warned them to amend their abominable lives, or else that vengeance would befall them,

6. * And turning the cities of Sodome and Gomorrha into ashes, condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto them that after should live ungodly,]

If, I ſay, all theſe examples of vengeance on wicked obdurate rebels and carnal perſons, (the patterns of the crucifying Jewes and lewd Gnoſticks) and withall the deliverances afforded to the righteous in theſe paſſages of ſtory, be conſidered, we may then ſure learn from hence, how ready and able God now is to reſcue the perſecuted conſtant Chriſtian out of the perſecuters hand, and to reſerve the perſecuters themſelves, and all wicked livers that join or comply with them, by cutting them off here, to eternal perdition in another world: ſee note on Rom. 13. b.

9. The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reſerve the † unjuſt unto the day of judgment to be puniſhed;]

10. Of this ſort eſpecially are the Gnoſticks, whoſe character it is to commit all filthineſſe, and to deſpiſe all kind of authority of magiſtrates or maſters (1 Tim. 3. 6.) a bold inſolent ſort of men, that can without any trembling or fear ſpeak contumeliouſly of the Apoſtles themſelves, ſee note on Jude b.

But theſe men, like beaſts ruled only by their natural or brutiſh appetites, without any reaſon to reſtrain and temper them, which are good for nothing but (as vultures to tear and pollute, ſo theſe) to ſpoil and debauch all they come near, venturing to ſpeak reproachfully of all that they doe not underſtand, and ſo conſequently of the myſteries of Chriſtianity, taught by Apoſtles, but deſpiſed by them, (ſee Jude note d.) ſhall be deſtroyed in their beſtial ſinnes,

13. And ſhall receive the reward of unrighteouſneſſe, as they that count it pleaſure to riot in the day-time: ſpots they are and blemiſhes, † ſporting themſelves in their own c * deceivings, while they feaſt with you,] † rioting ἡγούμενοι τρυφὴν * perhaps, love feaſts

d. 14. Their eyes are ſo filled with unlawfull objects, that they can receive nothing elſe, nor ever take them off from beholding them, they corrupt young new-converted Chriſtians, and have their hearts, as their eyes, alwaies buſied with baſe filthy thoughts, perſons fit for nothing but a curſe;

f. 17. Theſe take upon them to be fountains of all deep knowledge, but have no drop either of truth or good practice among them; they pretend to be ſublime above other men, but are only like clouds in the air that darken the skie, but never diſtill into rain, and thoſe driven impetuouſly by every wind, be it never ſo black or dark, from one vicious helliſh doctrine and practice to another: and to theſe black ſouls is reſerved in the juſt judgment of God eternal darkneſſe and blackneſſe.

For attributing divinity to Simon and Helena, and exalting them idolatrouſly above the God of Iſrael, (ſee note on Jude i.) they entice and catch again, bring back to all manner of carnality and filthineſſe thoſe who had not long ſince gotten out of the heathen beſtiality, (ſee note on Jude b.) and really given them over.

And this upon pretence of giving them liberty, whereas they are themſelves the greateſt ſlaves in the world, to wit, enſlaved to all baſeneſſe and filthineſſe (ſee note on c. 1. b.) for the title of victory giving dominion, they muſt needs be ſlaves of thoſe luſts which have conquered them, to whom they have yielded themſelves captives.

And this is ſo far from being extenuated by the privilege of their being Chriſtians, that it is become the greater and more dangerous guilt by this means; for certainly they that have been converted from all their heathen ſins by accepting of the faith of Chriſt, and then again relapſe and return to them, this latter eſtate of theirs, this Chriſtian heatheniſme, is worſe then their bare heatheniſme at firſt.

But now their condition is a most profane unclean state, best signified by a dogge and a swine, two most unclean profane creatures, which among the Jewes stood interdicted both for sacrifice and food, and are both observed proverbially for this quality, that the dogge when any thing lies upon his stomach, which causes him to vomit, when that trouble is over, he presently licks up again what he had before vomited up, (see Prov. 26. 11.) and the swine, when she is washed never so clean, takes pleasure to tumble again in the next mire she comes to. g.

Annotations on Chap. II.

V. 5. The eighth person] Why the word ὄγδοος the eighth is here prefix'd to the mention of Noah, might be matter of some inquirie, were it not so ordinary and proverbial among all writers, Jewish as well as Heathens, to expresse the persons that were saved in the Deluge, by this style, the eight. Hence the very mountain whereon the Ark rested is found to be expressed and called by this style, Themanim, that is, הר שמנה the mountain of the eight. So Georgius Elmacinus, Hist. Saracen. lib. 1. cap. 1. Heraclius went thence, פי קרית תמנין, to the town so called the town of the eight, from תאמן octo, which is there rendred Themaninum, and ascending to the hill גורי, it should sure be read, גרדי Gordi (so those mountains are called promiscuously Cardiei, Cordyei, Cordueni, Gordi, Cordæi, Curdi) he saw the place of the Ark, the highest of all that region. So Geographus Nubiensis, Mons ימנין Jemanim (it should be תמנין Themanim) idem qui Algode (it should be אלגורדי Algordi, that is, Gordiæus) in quo requievit navis illa, Navis Noæ, cui pax, the hill Themanim, which is also called Algordi, on which the Ark rested, the Ark of Noah——So Agathias, Ἀμφὶ τὰ Καρδύχια ὄρη, οἷς κώμη Θαμανῶν, about the Cardian mountains, at the town called Themanim, that is, the eight.

b. Ἅλωσις Τετηρημένα εἰς ἅλωσιν

V. 12. Made to be taken] The word ἅλωσις, catching, is here in an Active sense, to prey, or take, or catch, and not to be taken, and γεγεννημένα εἰς ἅλωσιν made for taking are creatures, beasts or birds of prey, vultures. So Job 24. 5. לטרף (rendred by the Greek εἰς ἅλωσιν to catch) is in the Chaldee Paraphrase expressed by rising up early to their prey. So φθορὰ is also here in an Active sense, and so εἰς φθορὰν to, or for the corrupting, or defiling, or polluting of others. In reference to which it is that the creatures which are caught and torn by wild beasts, the θηριάλωτα, are by the Law counted unclean or polluted, Lev. 17. 15. (see Excerpta Gemaræ tr. Sanhedr. c. 1. §. 7.) and ordinarily by the Rabbines set to signifie all forbidden meats, as if the lungs of any thing have a hole in them, they call it טרפה, that which is torn by wild beasts, saith Elias Levita in Thisbi, p. 139. And so these vicious, lustfull, filthy Gnosticks, that, like the Sodomites, force and corrupt all that come in their way, and by making them their prey, doe also defile and pollute them (as those creatures that are torn by wild beasts are accounted polluted) are here said to be γεγεννημένα εἰς ἅλωσιν καὶ φθοράν, like those land-vultures, born to take and pollute, and nothing else, and I suppose are noted by ἅρπαγες forcers, snatchers, ravishers, 1 Cor. 5. 10. See Note h. on that Chapter.

c. ἐν ἀπάταις

V. 13. Deceivings] That which is read here ἐν ἀπάταις, in deceits, may not improbably be mistaken by the scribe for ἐν ἀγάπαις αὐτῶν, in their Christian feasts, instituted in order to maintaining of Charity, but defiled by the luxurie of carnal Gospellers. Thus it is read in Jude v. 12. (which in most things is agreeable with this second of Peter) and that verse in the other parts of it is directly parallel to this, there σπιλάδες spots, as here σπίλοι καὶ μῶμοι, spots and blemishes; there συνευωχούμενοι, feasting together, as here in the same word, and so probably also in this word, which differs so little from ἀπάταις, that it might be easily mistaken for it.

d. Μοιχαλὶς

V. 14. Full of adulterie] Μοιχαλὶς signifies distinctly an adultresse (not adulterie) and the phrase of, having eyes full of her, is very agreeable to that of the Rhetorician cited by Plutarch De verecund. who discribing an impure unchast person, (an ἀναίσχυντον one without shame) rhetorically said of him, ὃ κόρας ἀλλὰ πόρνας ἐν τοῖς ὄμμασιν ἔχει, that he had whores in his eyes in stead of κόρας, which is an equivocal word, and signifies both a maid (or virgine, opposite to πόρνη whore) and the pupilla oculi, the apple of the eye also, and is therefore made use of in that Rhetor.

e. Βεὸρ

V. 15. Bosor] The name Bosor here is Beor in the Old Testament; the Hebrew being בעור, and the Chaldee pronouncing the ע by S. and accordingly the Arabick translation reads here the sonne of Beor, the same that (as here, so Jude 11. Rev. 11. 14.) is made use of, to exemplify the *Heretick*s that were thus easily crept into the Church, the Gnosticks so often spoken of. As for the fitnesse of representing this heresy by ἡ ὁδὸς τῆ Βαλαὰμ, the way of Balaam, three things may especially be observed. First, that he being a Prophet of the true God did yet join in Idol-worship with the King of Moab, Num. 22. 41. being taken up with him into the high places of Baal, and 23. 2, 14, 29. building altars, and offering up sacrifices there. And this was remarkable in the Gnosticks, (whose whole Divinity was a mixture of Christian and Jewish with Heathen doctrine) they made no scruple, for the saving or gaining any thing to themselves, to join with those who offer'd sacrifice to Idols. Secondly, that he complied and joined in faction with the Moabites and Midianites, the enemies of God's people, was very willing to assist them to his uttermost, and when God permitted him not to curse Israel, yet he associated with the Midianites, as appears Num. 31. 8. where he is found with them in the battail. And the same was signally observable of the Gnosticks, who alwaies complied with the persecuters of Christianity, whether Jews or Heathens, and were the bittereſt enemies the Orthodox Christians had. Thirdly, that he gave counsel to the King of Moab how to corrupt and bring a Curse upon the Israelites, by enticing them into uncleanesse in the matter of Peor, Num. 25. 1. and 31. 16. And the same did the Gnosticks, corrupting all that could be wrought on by their unclean doctrines and practices: see Note on Jude f. And as they were parallell in their sinne, so were they in their ruine also. When the Midianites were destroyed by Israel, Num. 31. Balaam also the sonne of Beor they slew with the sword, v. 8. And so when the Jewes were destroyed by the Romans, the Gnosticks that complyed with them, were found among them, and destroyed also.

ἡ ὁδὸς τῆ Βαλαὰμ

V. 17. Tempest] Λαῖλαψ is by Hesychius rendred καλαιγὶς and ἀνέμου ζωοφόρου. What καλαιγὶς notes is by him best expressed elsewhere, ὁπηρεφὴς ἀνέμου ζοφοδοῦς the violence of a strong wind. To this Phavorinus adds ζόφος μετὰ ζωοφόρου ἀνέμου, darknesse with a violent wind:

And so it is here fitly set to signifie that black wind, as it were, of dark heathen errors and practices, by which these νεφέλαι clouds, to which Saint Jude addes ἄνυδροι empty, waterlesse clouds, the Gnosticks, are driven and carried about, to which therefore is apportioned ὁ ζόφος τοῦ Σκότους, the blackness of darkness for ever, in the end of the verse.

V. 22. Sow that was washed] The Hebrew word for a swine חזיר is deduced from חזר rediit, reversus est, returning, to note this quality of the swine taken notice of by this proverb, of returning to the mire again. g.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. III.

1, 2. I have now written two Epistles to you, both to the same purpose, to be remembrancers to you whose minds remain yet untainted, of that which you cannot but have heard, being prophecied of Christ (see a testimony out of Lactantius in note a. on the title of the Epistle to the Romans) viz. that within a short time there should come a notable destruction upon the unbelieving or impenitent Jewes, and all the polluted Christians among them, and a remarkable deliverance of all the persevering Christians, the one an act of Christ as Lord, the other as Saviour or deliverer.

1. THis second Epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stirre up your pure minds by way of remembrance:

2. That ye may be mindfull of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandments of * us the Apostles of the Lord and Saviour;] in the Old Testament very frequently, Jo[illegible] and by Christ, Mat. 24. and by us Apostles of Christ (see a testimony out of Lactantius in note a. on the title of the Epistle to the Romans) viz. that within a short time there should come a notable destruction upon the unbelieving or impenitent Jewes, and all the polluted Christians among them, and a remarkable deliverance of all the persevering Christians, the one an act of Christ as Lord, the other as Saviour or deliverer.

a. 3. But before this come, there is one thing to precede, a very remarkable defection of many from the Christian profession, see 2 Thess. 2. 3. according to what was foretold by Christ Mat. 24. 12. and those that thus forsake Christ, shall betake themselves to all unclean practices; and therefore this is now to be expected.

3. Knowing this first, that there shall come in * the last daies [a] scoffers, walking after their own lusts,

b. 4. And they that do thus forsake the faith, shall, as a ground of it, pretend that they perceive themselves cheated by those prophecies, which have promised and foretold this coming of his (see c. 1. and Mat. 24. b.) which, say they, is so far from being performed, that all things stand unchanged, in the same constant form, from the beginning of the world till now, save onely that all the men that have lived upon the earth (father Adam, Noah, Abraham, &c.) are dead, and others now live in their steads among us. But for any thing else, say they, things have gone in a setled constant course ever since the creation, without any discernible or observable change.

4. And saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for † [b] since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation.]

c. d. 5, 6. To these I answer, and first for the latter of these (see note on Mat. 7. b.) These Atheistical scoffers, that suppose or affirm that there hath been no considerable change since the creation, do not consider what a change there was once in Noahs time, the whole world destroyed with a flood, for the sins of impure impenitent sinners, such as these who now object thus; for the heavens being created at the beginning, and the earth so framed, that there was abundance of waters within the globe thereof, and it self placed in the midst of waters, in the clouds round about, God being pleased in the creation so to dispose of it, in order to the punishing of wicked men, at length the windows of the heavens, that is, the clouds, were opened, and the fountains of the great deep broken up, Gen. 7. 11. and by this means the whole earth was covered and drowned by waters.

5. * For this they [c] willingly are ignorant of, that † by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the [d] earth standing out of the water and in the water:

6. Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished.]

* For they that are of this mind, are ignorant

† there were heavens from of old & the earth consisting of water & in the midst of water by the word of God, ἦσαν οὐρανοὶ ἔκπαλαι καὶ γῆ ἐξ ὕδατος καὶ δι' ὕδατος συνεστῶσα τῷ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγῳ

e. 7. But the world which now is, by the same appointment of God, is now secured that it shall be drowned no more, (God having given his promise for it, Gen. 9. 11.) nor suffer any other kind of destruction but by fire, which is the punishment to be expected by abominable men.

7. But [e] the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.]

8. This answer being first given to the latter part of the Atheist's objection v. 4. [that all things continue as they were since the creation] I now proceed in the second place, (by way of regressus, ordinary in Scripture, see note on Mat. 7. b.) to answer the former part proposed by way of question, [Where is the promise of his coming? that is, Sure Gods promise in the Old Testament repeated by Christ Mat. 24. of his coming to punish the obdurate Jews and Gnosticks, and delivering the pure persevering believers, is not performed.] And my answer is this, That you may be mistaken in reckoning of times, in thinking that what the prophets have foretold of the latter days, the times of the Messias, must be instantly performed, as soon as Christ is gone to heaven, or else 'twill not be performed at all. In this matter it must be considered who it is that makes the promise, v. 2. an infinite God, and then though forty years (for example) is a very great time among us men, whose lives are so short, yet with God, who is infinite, a thousand years is no considerable space, but a very short and small duration, Psal. 90. 4. and therefore though the prophecie be not yet fulfilled, about three or four and thirty years after Christ's departure from us, yet it may, and will most certainly, and that within few years now.

8. But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.]

9. As for any slowness in performing his promise of coming, which they that expect and desire to reap a sudden fruit of it in their deliverance, or that others, which would corrupt them, and make them fall off through despair of it, are apt to charge upon God, it is meerly a mistake in them; for it is not thus deferred out of want of kindness to the persevering Christians, but out of abundance of patience and long-sufferance to the worst, and an earnest desire that they may all amend and be delivered, without which amendment, whensoever this coming shall be, all are infallibly destroyed: see Act. 3. 19. note a.

9. The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, (as some men count slackness) but is long-suffering † to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.]

† for, for your sake, for the King's MS. reads δι' ὑμᾶς

f. g. 10. But this judgment of Christ so remarkable on the Jews shall now shortly come, and that very indiscernibly, (see Luk. 17. 20 1 Thess. 5. 2.) and the temple shall be suddenly destroyed, the greater part of it burnt, and the city and people utterly consumed: see note d. and Mat. 24. 30. & Act. 2. 19, 20.

10. But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in which the heavens shall passe away † with a great noise, and the elements † shall [g] melt with fervent heat, and the earth also and the works that are therein shall be * burnt up.]

* consumed κατακαήσονται

11. Seeing then this destruction shall thus involve all, and now approacheth so neer, what an engagement doth this lay upon us to live the most pure strict lives that ever men lived?

11. Seeing then that all † these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness?]

12. Looking

† hastning the coming ἀπεδόμενα τὴν

12. Looking for and † hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat.]

12. Looking for the coming of Christ for our deliverance, and by our Christian lives quickening and hastning God to delay it no longer (see v. 9.) that coming of his, I say, which as it signifies great mercy to us, so it signifies very sharp destruction to the whole Jewish state, see note d.

* But δ

13. * Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousnesse:]

13. In stead of which we look for a new, a Christian state, in which all provision is made by Christ for righteousnesse to inhabit, according to the promise of Christ, concerning the purity that Christ should plant in the Evangelical state, see note d. and Rev. 21. 1. and note a.

14. Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless:]

14. This therefore being your expectation, you must in reason use all diligence to keep your selves from all pollution, spot or blemish, from indulging to any of the carnal invitations that are now soliciting you, and so to continue till this coming of his, that you may then be found acceptable before him, and that then you may reap the profit of it, that all may be prosperous with you:

15. And account that the long-suffering of our Lord is † salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul also, according to the wisdome given unto him, hath written unto you;]

15. And resolve that the end of God's delaying this judgement, this execution so long, hath been (see v. 9.) on purpose to bring in and increase the number of convert Jews, those to whom this deliverance is promised, according as S. Paul hath also said, Rom. 2. 4, 5. and especially Rom. 11. to which this place seems to refer, (see the sum of that Chapter at the conclusion of the Paraphrase of it.)

16. * As also in all his Epistles, speaking in them of these things, † [h] in which are some things hard to be understood; which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction.]

16. And indeed in most, if not in all his Epistles, hath he said somewhat of this matter, concerning this famous day of vengeance on the obdurate Jews, and deliverance of the faithfull, and deterring that day of destruction on the former, on purpose (v. 15.) to gather in as many of the latter as he could. So Rom. 9. 29, 33. Rom. 10. 8, 9, 10, &c. Rom. 11. 5. Rom. 13. 11, 12. 1 Cor. 1. 7, 8. and chap. 3. 13. 1 Thess. 2. 16. and chap. 5. 1, 2, 3, 9. and 2 Thess. 1. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. and chap. 2. 1, 2, 3, 8. and 1 Tim. 4. 1. and chap. 6. 14. In which matter some things there are concealed by God purposely from the knowledge of men and angels, as the punctual time of the coming of it, &c. from whence some unskilfull unsetled Christians have taken occasion to fall off from the faith of Christ, and to ruine themselves by so doing. This they do by deductions from some places of Scripture, wrested by them (as it is ordinary with them to wrest and distort the writings of the prophets, &c.) but it is through their ignorance and ungroundednesse on the Christian faith that they doe so. h.

17. Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also being led away * with the error of the wicked, fall from your own stedfastnesse.]

17. You therefore, my brethren, whom I have thus timely warned and instructed, ought to make this prudent use of my admonitions, to take all care that ye be not insnared by the filthy unnatural practices of the Gnosticks (see note on Jude b.) and so apostatize from the faith.

18. But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

18. But daily increase in the true profession of the Gospel, and in the knowledge and practice of the pure doctrine (in opposition to the Gnosticks knowledge falsly so called, 1 Tim. 6. 20.) delivered to us by Christ our eternal God and blessed Saviour, who must be for ever praised by us. Amen.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Ἐμπαῖκ)

V. 3. Scoffers] Ἐμπαῖκ) scorners here, and Jude 18. is answerable to the Hebrew לֵצִים, very frequent in the Old Testament, which denotes the highest degree of defection from and renouncing of piety: so Psal. 1. 1. of the three degrees of ungodly men the לֵצִים irrisores, scoffers or scorners, are the last. By these therefore are fitly here noted the Christians, which at this time in great numbers fell off to the Gnostick-heresie, and by so doing complyed and joined with the persecuting Jews, and fell into all the villany in the world express'd here by κατὰ τὰς ἰδίας αὐτῶν ἐπιθυμίας πορευόμενοι, walking, that is, going on habitually, as in a course, according to their own desires, or, (as when there was no King in Israel) every one doing that which was right in his own eyes, without any restraint of law, of nature, or Christ, &c. Of these S. Jude saith, that the Apostles of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ had foretold they should come in the last time; by the last time, or days, meaning there and here, the time immediately preceding the destruction of the Jews, (as hath been often shewed.) And so; as Christ had foretold Mat. 24. 11. that at that point of time many false prophets should arise, and deceive many, and again that many should be scandalized, or fall off from Christ, v. 10. and the love of many, that is, their zeal to the faith of Christ, grow cold, v. 12. so the Apostles of Christ in their preachings and in their Epistles had also frequently foretold this, 2 Thess. 2. 3. that this coming or day of Christ, v. 1, 2. was not to be ἐὰν μὴ ἔλθῃ ἡ ἀποστασία πρῶτον, unless the apostasie first come, this apostasie of the many Christians to the foul Gnostick-heresie, and v. 5. ὑμᾶς μιμνῄσκω, do you not remember that when I was with you I told you these things? So 1 Tim. 4. 1. the Spirit saith expresly, that is, Christ, and his Apostles by their prophetick spirit every where, that in the last times ἀποστήσονταί τινες τῆς πίστεως some shall apostatize from the faith, προσέχοντες πνεύμασι πλάνοις giving ear to impostor-spirits, the very interpretation of Christs πλανήσουσι πολλούς, that these false teachers should deceive many, and these described in the following words, as those that had cast off all laws, forbidding to marry, &c. and so walking after their own unnatural lusts. And to these he refers again 2 Tim. 3. 1. But know this, &c. By all which it appears, that these that were thus foreseen that they should fall off at this time, and so mentioned here v. 2. were the Gnostick-hereticks, and those that were seduced by them; and so this weight there will be in the word πρῶτον, first, that as these were to apostatize thus before that coming of Christ to the destruction of the Jews, so now in the discourse of it begun purposely v. 2. this was the first thing to be set down; & that is the full meaning of, Τοῦτο πρῶτον γινώσκοντες, Knowing this first. Ἀποστήσονται τινες πνεύμασι πλάνοις. τοῦτο πρῶτον γινώσκοντες.

Παιζόμενοι κατὰ τὰς ἰδίας ἐπιθυμίας.

Ἐφ' ᾧ.

Πάντα διαμένει οὕτως ἀπ' ἀρχῆς

V. 4. Since] Ἀφ' ἧς, à qua, or à quo, may be taken in respect of time, as an Epocha from whence the writer takes his rise, from such or such a time, excluding what was before, and including all since. But it may also referre to matters as well as to time, and then it notes no more then the excluding or excepting that which is named, and including all that is not named, and will then best be rendred, unlesse it be, or except that. That this must be the notion of it here, and not the former, is evident by what follows, that all things remain in the same manner from the beginning of the creation, where the creation is an Epocha of a farre longer date then that of the death of the Fathers. Besides it would be hard to define what fathers are here meant, if that were the meaning of it: For it cannot be appliable ſo to Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, the fathers of the people of the Jewes; for to confute this ſpeech of theſe ſcoffers, the Apoſtle draws his proof from the times of the Flood, which was long before them, which would not be a good way of arguing againſt them, if they had dated their obſervation no farther then the times of Abraham; for they might well acknowledge a change in the Deluge, though none ſince Abraham. But in the other notion the matter is clear, From the creation of the world, ſay they, there hath been no change in any material thing, ſo as to be fit to deterre men from complying with the Jewes, for the avoiding of perſecutions, ſo as to make men fear that Chriſt will now come in any eminent manner to deſtroy the Jewes or Gnoſticks, or to perſevere in hope that he will deliver the perſecuted Chriſtians out of their hands. One change they acknowledge there hath been in the world, ſome men have ſlept with their fathers, and others have lived in their ſtead, a ſucceſſion of fathers and ſons to repleniſh the world, men have not been immortal, the fathers have died, and given way to their children: But except this (which is an unconſiderable matter, not pertinent to the point in hand) all things elſe, ſay they, have continued in the ordinary conſtant courſe, without any diſcernible interpoſing of God's providence to puniſh one, or to relieve another. This ſure is the Atheiſts objection, occaſioned by the delay of Chriſt's coming to deſtroy the Jewes. And this it is which is punctually confuted in the following verſes; and ſo that muſt in all reaſon be the notation of ἀφ' ἧς which is moſt reconcileable with this.

c. θέλοντες V. 5. Willingly] The word θέλοντες ſeems here to be taken in a ſenſe not ordinary in other places, for being of opinion or affirming, perhaps with this addition of aſſerting it magiſterially, without any reaſon rendred for it, but a Sic volo, &c. So I will, I command, my will is my reaſon. Thus in Latine we are wont to uſe it, Qui hoc volunt, they that will this, for, they that are of this opinion; and thus ἃ βέλομαι 2 Cor. 1. 17. the things that I will, that is, which I teach, or affirm. See Note e. on that Chapter. And ſo τοῦτο θέλοντες, they that will this, are they that are of this mind, that affirm this.

d. Ib. Earth ſtanding out of the water] The meaning of this fifth verſe will be beſt diſcern'd by conſidering it as preparative to the ſixth: For the one thing that was here to be affirmed and proved for the confuting of that Atheiſtical aphoriſm, v. 4. that There was no ſuch thing as puniſhment inflicted on wicked men, or deliverance for the godly, to be expected from any overruling power of heaven, all things going on in a conſtant courſe from the beginning of the world to that time, was this, that the whole world was once drowned for the ſins of the inhabitants, and that is ſaid v. 6. But to prepare for this, here is, in this verſe, a deſcription of the frame of this lower world in the firſt creation, as it was formed πρὸ τῆς Θεοῦ λόγῳ, by the word of God, that word by which he ſaid, Let there be light, and there was light; let there be a firmament, and there was ſo, and God ſaw that it was good, that is, all that he did was deſigned for ſuch uſes as he in his wiſdome thought agreeable. And that is thus deſcribed, οὐρανοὶ ἦσαν ἔξωθεν there were heavens from of old, that is, in the beginning the heavens were created, and ſo the earth alſo, Gen. 1. 1. the earth ſo formed that, whenſoever God pleaſed, it might be drowned without creating any new thing. For thus it was framed; The very globe of the earth conſiſted of a great quantity of waters, called the abyſſe or deep, Gen. 1. 1. ſo great as to cover the face of the earth, till God put it into one place, that drie land might appear, Gen. 1. 9. And this is it that now makes the whole body of the Ocean, and all other rivers in the world, and beſides great quantities of water in the bowels of the earth, breaking forth in fountains, that flow perpetually, and maintaining with ſupplies all the rivers and ſeas in the world. And this may fitly own the expreſſion that is here uſed of the globe of the earth, that it is ἐξ ὕδατος καὶ διὰ ὕδατος συνεστῶσα made up of water, hath abundance of water in its compaſſe, which is the water which Gen. 1. 7. is called the water under the רקיע or expanſion, that is, under the body of the aire, and ſo makes up, as the Philoſophers ſay, one globe with the earth. And ſo this part of the frame of the earth did competently prepare it for drowning, it being evident, that there was ſo much water in that globe of the earth as, till it was put into receptacles and cavities, it cover'd the face of the earth, no drie land appeared, Gen. 1. 9. But beſide this, there was great ſtore of waters in the clouds, which is called the waters above the expanſion, Gen. 1. 7. the lower region of the aire being between them and the earth, and when God is pleaſed to looſen thoſe clouds, which is called opening the windows of heaven, then the rain falls, and adds to that ſtore of waters which was in the globe of the earth already. And theſe clouds encompaſſing the earth on every ſide, the earth is here alſo ſaid to be συνεστῶσα διὰ ὕδατος, placed in the midſt of the waters, for ſo the Prepoſition διὰ by is ſet to render the בתוך in the midſt, and ſo 'tis uſed by this Author, 1 Pet. 3. 20. διεσώθησαν δι' ὕδατος, they were ſaved in the midſt of water, and ſo σωθήσεται ὡς διὰ πυρός, he ſhall be ſaved, but ſo as in the midſt of fire, 1 Cor. 3. 15. So in Herodotus διὰ νήσων is among, or in the midſt of, Iſlands. And ſo this part of the frame being added to the former, the clouds and cataracts encompaſſing the earth, and impendent over it, the earth was aſcertain'd to be drown'd and ſwallow'd up, whenſoever God ſhould let looſe theſe cataracts upon it, as in the Deluge he did, Gen. 7. 11. and ſo there is the foundation of the δι' ὧν by which, v. 6. this frame and diſpoſition of Gods, that the earth ſhould have ſo much water in its own boſome, and ſuch clouds of water encompaſſing it, was the means by which the old world being drowned by water periſhed: and ſo this is the clear meaning of the place.

e. οἱ οὐρανοὶ καὶ ἡ γῆ V. 7. Heavens and the earth] The phraſe οἱ οὐρανοὶ καὶ ἡ γῆ, the heavens and the earth, are here ſet to ſignifie the whole compages of this Sublunarie world, and all the creatures that are in it, all that was deſtroyed by the Flood, and is now ſecured from periſhing ſo again, and is reſerved for fire, by which it is (by perpetual tradition) believed that the world ſhall finally be deſtroyed. The Hebrews have no one word to ſignifie this, but ordinarily uſe שמים וארץ the heavens and earth. And ſo the heavens, and elements, and earth, v. 10, and 12. which would literally denote the world, ſignifie figuratively the whole city of Jeruſalem, Temple and palace, towers and buildings of the city, not one ſignified by one, another by another, but all by all together, and proportionably to that, the new heavens and new earth are a Chriſtian people, ver. 13. And ſo 'tis ordinary in other expreſſions in that language; as, his body, his fleſh, and his bones, Eph. 5. 30. ὀστέα, σάρξ, ὄντα signifies him, and no more: and ſo in other authors, the body and the ſoul are ſet ſeverally, when yet they ſignifie nothing diſtinct, but the whole man together. See A. Gellius, l. 3. c. 1. And ſo the evening and the morning ſignifie the natural day: ſee Note on Mat. 12. n. So the Elders, high Prieſts and Scribes every where in the Goſpels, ſignifie the Sanhedrim; and ſo in like manner the phraſe Father and mother, and wives and children, and fields, &c. ſignifies this one thing, poſſeſſions or comforts of life, and muſt ſo be rendred in the groſſe, and not in the retail, or elſe the true meaning of ſome places in the New Teſtament will not be intelligible. As Mar. 10. 30. when 'tis ſaid that he that leaves father and mother, &c. ſhall receive an hundred-fold more in this life, houſes and brethren and ſiſters and mothers: for 'tis clear enough that he ſhall not receive an hundred mothers; but as all theſe ſeverals put together denote the comforts and poſſeſſions of this life, ſo it is to be expected that the promiſe of God will be performed to thoſe that part with any thing for Chriſt's ſake. See Note on Epheſ. 5. h. and Col. 1. c.

f. ῥοιζηδὸν

V. 10. With a great noiſe] Ῥοίζου, δινώσεως, ὁρμῆς, τρόχου· Ῥοιζηδὸν, ζοφοδεῶς, μὴ ἦχος, ſaith Phavorinus: ſo that it ſignifies ſwiftly as well as with a noiſe. And that the former is the meaning of it here, is probable, becauſe 'tis added to the coming of that day as a thief, unexpectedly, and in order to that is this of ſwiftneſſe, not that other notion of μὴ ἦχος with noiſe; for thieves in the night do not willingly do ſo, or if they doe, loſe the advantage of the night, that is, the ſecrecie of it.

g. καυσούμενα λυθήσονται

Ib. Melt with fervent heat] The deſtruction of Judæa is here, ver. 10, and 12. deſcribed by diſſolution, or conſumption, by fire, and ſo Iſa. 9. 5. & 66. 15, 16. & Mal 4. 1. & Joel 2. 3, 30. where that deſtruction is deſcribed; ſo 2 Theſſ. 1. 8. In flaming fire taking vengeance (which that it belongs to that matter, ſee the Context of that place, and Note b.) ſo Heb. 10. 27. πυρὸς ζῆλος a burning of fire to conſume the ἀντικείμενοι, all that obdurately ſtand out againſt Chriſt, and that belonging to this matter alſo, as will appear by comparing v. 25. and v. 37. ſee Note a. on that Chapter; and ſo perhaps 1 Cor. 3. 13, 15. And this either firſt, figuratively, after the manner of Prophetick ſtyle, wherein fire, and burning, and melting ſignifies deſtruction and utter deſolation: or elſe ſecondly, in relation to the Zelots, and that πύρωσις raiſed by them, the fearfull combuſtion and conflagration within the nation and city, the fire of ſedition and contention, which was ſo great an inſtrument of deſtruction among them, killing vaſt multitudes at once, Joſeph. de Bel. Jud. lib. 7. c. 14. rifling the palace and all the wealth of the city (being at that time carried thither) and many other particulars of that kind in that ſtory: or elſe thirdly, in reference to the exact truth of the fact (of which this is a literal deſcription) the burning of Jeruſalem mentioned by Joſephus, l. 7. c. 14. where 'tis ſaid of the Romans that they fired all unto Siloa; and again in the ſame Chapter that the Sicarii, the other faction in the city, contrary to the Zelots, got into vaults, from whence they fired the city more then the Romans, and murthered them that eſcaping the flames fled into the caves; and again, c. 16. The Romans being entred fired houſes, and, ſaith he, many things that were fired were quenched with the blood of the ſlain, with which the ſtreets of the city flowed; and again, All the night long the fire encreaſed, and in the morning Sept. 8th. all was on fire, and c. 17. they fired the outward parts of the city. Then for the burning of the Temple particularly, that is ſet down l. 3. c. 9. firſt of the dores, where the ſilver plate being melted firſt, the flame quickly fired the wood, and from thence increaſed to the next porch, and that day and all the next night the fire encreaſed, till Titus cauſed the army to quench it: But as it follows, the ſentence of God had already determined that it ſhould be conſumed with fire; and ſo it was on Auguſt 10. of which he pronounceth, Now the fatal day was come after many years, the phraſe ſo uſual in the New Teſtament, the day, and the coming of that day. And c. 10. a ſouldier without command caſt a firebrand into the golden gate, and preſently it ſet a flaming; and when Titus came violently in to quench it, no body would hear him, but cried the more to ſet it on fire, and neither his commands nor intreaties would ſerve turn, but it was (abſolutely againſt his will) burnt down, and no help for it, ſaith he, becauſe the deſtinies had ſo determined, that is, the counſel and decree of God, teſtified by predictions. What is here thus expreſs'd by S. Peter, is ordinarily conceived to belong to the end of the world, and by others applied to the end of this world, & the beginning of the Millennium or thouſand years. And ſo, as S. Peter here ſaith v. 16. many other places, in S. Paules Epiſtles, and in the Goſpel, eſpecially Mat. 24. are miſtaken and wreſted. That it doth not belong to either of thoſe, but to this fatal day of the Jewes, ſufficiently appears by the purport of the whole Epiſtle, (ſee Note a. on the Title of it, and on ch. 1. Note e. and g.) which is to arm them with conſtancy and perſeverance till that day come, and particularly in this Chapter, to confute them who object againſt the truth of Chriſt's predictions, and reſolve it ſhould not come at all; againſt whom he here oppoſes the certainty, the ſpeedineſs, and terribleneſs of its coming. That which hath given occaſion to thoſe other common miſtakes, is eſpecially the hideouſneſs of thoſe judgments which fell upon that people of the Jewes, beyond all that ever before are related to have fallen on them, or indeed on any other people; which made it neceſſary for the Prophets which were to deſcribe it, (and who uſe tropes and figures, and not plain expreſſions, to ſet down their predictions) to expreſſe it by theſe high phraſes of the paſſing away, and diſſolving, of heaven, and earth, and elements, &c. which ſounding very tragically are miſtaken for the great, finall diſſolution of the world. What is firſt literally, and then figuratively meant by the heavens and earth, hath been ſaid Note d. As for the addition of the στοιχεῖα elements annex'd to the heavens, that is no more then will bear due proportion to the ἔργα ἐν αὐτῇ the works therein, which are join'd with ἡ γῆ the earth. By one is meant all that is in the earth, the creatures that inhabit there; and by the other is meant all that is in the heavens, צבאם the hoſt of them, Gen. 2. 1. for ſo the Hebrew word, coming from צבא a military word, for ſtanding, or moving, in rank and order, is anſwerable to the Greek στοιχεῖα, which comes from στίχω, which bears the ſame ſenſe. And ſo Wiſdome 7. 17. στοιχεῖα elements are in the Chaldee, cited by * Rabbi Moſes ben Nachman, מזלות Planets, or ſignes in heaven, which are ordinarily call'd the hoſt of heaven; and ſo Juſtin Martyr, Apol. 1. uſes ἔναντια στοιχεῖα for the Sun, Moon, &c. which are appointed by God for the increaſe of fruits, and changes of ſeaſons. So in Theophilus ad Autol. the Sun and Moon, &c. are oft call'd στοιχεῖα elements: Only the word heavens being an equivocal word, uſed either for the ſuperior heavens, whether Empyreal, or Æthereal, or for the ſublunary heavens, the air, (as the word World is either the whole compages of the ſuperiour & inferior, or elſe onely of the ſublunary lower world) we may here reſolve, that the οὐρανοὶ and στοιχεῖα, heavens, and hoſt or elements thereof, are literally the ſublunary aereal heavens, and all that is therein, clouds and meteors, &c. fowls and flying creatures; and ſo fit to join with the earth, and the works that are therein, &c. and both together prophetically, or figuratively, to ſignifie the whole people of the Jews, which are ſometimes call'd οἰκουμένη the habitable world, Iſ. 10. 23. (compared with Rom. 9. 28) and 13. 5, 9. & 24. 1. and Luc. 21. 26. and Rom. 10. 18. and, which is all one, the heavens and earth, Hagg. 2. 6, 21. Iſ. 51. 15, 16. and c. 34. 2, 4, 5. See Note d. Or if it be underſtood of the Æthereal heavens, and the Planets or ſigns therein, it will then be parallel to the Sun, Moon and Stars, Mat. 24. 29. (agreeable to the Prophetick ſtyle Iſ. 13. 10. and 34. 4. Ezech. 32. 7. Joel 2. 10, 31. and 3. 15.) and ſo again will fitly expreſſe the city and Temple, the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical ſtate of the Jews, or the ruling part of both, the Prieſts and the Sanhedrin, as the people are decyphered by ἡ γῆ the earth, and the works therein; and all theſe these together are the whole nation, the πανολεθρία, or total final destruction whereof is here described.

h. ἐν οἷς — V. 16. In which] In this place the King's MS. reading ἐν αἷς in which in the Feminine gender (which if it be true, then it must refer to the Epistles fore-mentioned) but other Copies, and the printed ones generally reading ἐν οἷς in the Neuter, which cannot agree with Epistles, but with περὶ τούτων of these things, it is not certain which reading must be adhered to. That which seems to me most probable is, that the ordinary reading should be retained, ἐν οἷς, &c. and that tender'd, among which things some are hard to be understood, &c. If this be the sense, then Saint Peter doth not at all give this character of any parts of S. Pauls Epistles, that they are δυσνόητα hard to be understood but that among those things (of which S. Peter is now a treating, and of which, saith he, S. Paul hath written in all his Epistles, and generally the Prophets of the Old, and the Apostles of the New Testament, v. 2.) ἔστι δυσνόητά τινα some are hard to be understood, &c. What the things here spoken of are, hath been cleared by the Paraphrase of this, and the former Epistle, viz. in general, the coming of Christ to destroy his crucifiers and deliver the pious Christians out of their persecutions. This is apparently spoken of by the Prophets and by Christ, and by the Apostles, both in their preaching (see Note a. on the Title of the Epistle to the Romans) and in their Epistles, written but a little before it was to come. That it was so long deferred, was matter of some trouble to some, and objection against the truth of these predictions, v. 4. to which this Apostle here answers, v. 9. that the reason why God doth make some stay in this matter, is that men may have time to repent, and reform, and escape this vengeance, which when it comes, will come so suddenly and unexpectedly as to surprize many that look not for it, v. 10. and that he repeats again, v. 15. bidding them count the long-suffering of the Lord (that is, this deferring his judgments) salvation, that is, a means designed by God to bring men to repentance. And for this particular it is that he cites S. Paul, as concurring with him in this account of the reason of Christs delaying his coming, adding onely this of S. Paul, that in all his Epistles he hath spoken of these things, that is, said a great deal concerning this coming of Christ. Having gone thus far, he passeth his observation of the then present temper of men, and behaviour in this matter, that there were some giddy, unsetled Christians, which upon occasion of some things not so clearly revealed by those that have foretold this coming of Christ, have fallen into pernicious errors. What things those were which are here said to be δυσνόητα hard to be understood, and what dangerous errors drawn from thence, will perhaps be hardly defined by us at this distance. That Cerinthus, by misunderstanding some of these predictions, came to think that Christ should have a temporal kingdome upon earth, where men should enjoy all carnality, see Note on Rev. 2. a. and he and his followers may be thought to be these ἀστήικτοι here, the unstable Christians that distorted these predictions. Or because it is added of the same men, that they doe distort other scriptures also to their own destruction, it will not so fitly be restrained to Cerinthus, but more generally be spoken of the Gnosticks, who by a strange liberty which they used in expounding the Scriptures of the Old Testament (calling it γνῶσις knowledge of mystical senses) brought in most damnable doctrines of uncleanness, &c. And these sure are the men here spoken of, called unstable, because they fell off from the truth, and ἐμπαῖκται scoffers, v. 3. as that notes Apostates (see Note on Jude 18.) And having thus discovered who the men were, it will be more possible by the same clew to discover what the things were which are by S. Peter called δυσνόητα, hard to be understood. I shall here offer my conjecture. Our Saviour, when he foretells this his coming very particularly, Mat. 24. and defines the time so far, that it shall be certainly within the compasse of that generation, v. 34. (and in the life-time of some that were there present, Mat. 16. 28.) yet for the precise time of it, the day and hour, he pronounceth clearly that no man, nor angel, v. 36. (no nor the Son himself, Mar. 13. 32.) knows of that, that is, none but the Father. Accordingly he answers the Apostles Act. 1. 7. demanding whether he would then (after his resurrection) restore the kingdome to Israel, It is not for you to know the times and the seasons χρόνους ἢ καιρούς which the Father hath kept in his own power; that is, the day and houre in Matthew, the punctual time of this kingdome of God, this coming of Christ, God the Father had kept secret, revealed it neither to man nor Angel, neither should it be revealed to any. This I suppose is the meaning of 1 Thess. 5. 1, 2. that of the times and seasons, that is, of the very time which God in his wisdome had chosen for this remarkable coming of Christ upon his crucifiers, he needed not write, it being sufficiently known that it was to come as a thief in the night, that is, not to be discerned beforehand. In which place, that which is χρόνοι καὶ καιροὶ times and seasons, v. 1. is ἡμέρα Κυρίου the day of the Lord, v. 2. just as Act. 1. 7. ἡμέρα Κυρίου the times and seasons are all one with the day and hour, Mat. 24. 36. and so in stead of no mans knowing of it Mat. 24. and Gods reserving it in his own power, so that it is not for them to know it, Act. 1. 7. is there, the coming of that day as a thief in the night; by which may be concluded, that that phrase of that dayes coming as a thief in the night, is set to signifie the uncertainty when that day would be. And so Christ explains that phrase; if the good man of the house knew in what watch the thief would come, &c. intimating that the coming of a thief is supposed to be unknown to him that is to be robb'd by him. Now it is apparent that this saying of Christ's, in this sense, is here laid as the foundation of the discourse and words which here we are endevouring to explicate, But the day of the Lord ὡς κλέπτης ἐν νυκτὶ shall come as a thief in the night, v. 10. that is, But the punctual time of this coming is unknown, upon which he builds all watching, and caution, and continual expectance, v. 12. And having added what advantage the faithful Christians shall receive by this means, peaceable days of serving Christ, expres'd by new heavens and new earth, that is, a new world, wherein dwelleth righteousnesse, which therefore he adviseth all to wait for, (for that is the meaning of προσδοκῶμεν, προσδοκάω not προσδοκῶμεν, let us (not we doe) expect them, and depend on them according to his promise) he then gives them an account why 'tis thus long deferr'd, and adviseth all to make the right use of it, make it their season of repentance, v. 15. which being confirmed by S. Pauls authority, he hath no more to add on this matter but this, that the objection of the Apostates, v. 3. against the truth of Christ's promise of coming in this manner, was founded onely in the obscurity and unknownesse of some particulars in this matter, which very probably signifies that profess'd unintelligibleness of the punctual time of Christ's coming, which because no body would or could tell them when it would be, therefore they will not wait for it in purity and sobriety, and practice of such Christian vertues as were required to prepare them for it when it should come, but walk after their own lusts, v. 3. follow their own sensual courses, and perswade themselves that it will never come, that no such judgment is likely to come at all upon them, and so that day comes upon them unawares, and they perish in it with the crucifiers; and so are fitly said to detort these δυσνόητα, the uncertainty of the punctual time (and some other such particulars) to their own destruction, to perish remarkably by this means. This is no improbable meaning of these words, compared pared with v. 3. from whence the riſe of this diſcourſe was taken. And if it be here objected, that this particular of the day and hour was more then δυσνόητον, hard to be underſtood, God having kept it a perfect ſecret to himſelf, and ſo that this cannot be it which is here ſpoken of; I anſwer, that words of this nature are not ſo ſtrictly to be taken as to be thought to ſignifie no more then hard. For when it is ſaid of him that truſts in riches, that it is hard for him to enter into the kingdome of God, that which is expreſs'd by δύσκολον hard, Mar. 10. 24. is preſently interpreted to be impoſſible, not onely by the matter which is ſuch, but alſo by the ſimilitude of the Camel entring through the eye of a needle, v. 25. So when the Diſciples complain of an hard ſaying, Joh. 6. 60. it follows, who can hear it? that is, no man can poſſibly be ſuppoſed to eat the Son of mans fleſh, and ſo hard is impoſſible there alſo, that is, morally ſo, that which cannot be done without great impietie: and ſo δυσνόητα here in the forementioned interpretation are not abſolutely impoſſible to be known, becauſe God may, though he will not, reveal it; but which could not be underſtood, ſuppoſing that God (as Chriſt had ſaid) would keep it in his own power, and reveal it to no man.

3. Ιωάννου πρώτη

OF the Author of this Epiſtle, that it was John the beloved diſciple, the ſame that wrote the Goſpel and the Revelation, there hath never been any queſtion in the Church of God, which hath from all times ἀναμφισβήτως, without any doubt, received it into the Canon. That he begins not, as the other Apoſtles (all ſave only the Author to the Hebrewes) had done all their Epiſtles, with his name, and expreſſion of thoſe to whom he wrote by way of ſalutation, may moſt fitly be interpreted by his cuſtomary practice in his other writings, who in the Goſpel ſcarce ever names himſelf, but chuſes to uſe ſome circumlocution, as, he that ſaw, the diſciple whom Jeſus loved, he that lay leaning on Jeſus boſome, and the like, and begins his diſcourſe without one word of formality, or title, or preface, which all the other Evangeliſts had uſed. In what year of Chriſt this Epiſtle was written, is no otherwiſe certain then by what may be collected from ſome paſſages in it; as cap. 2. 18. where it ſeems to have been a little before the great deſtruction which befel the Jewes, called by other Apoſtles the day of the Lord, and the laſt day, but by him ἐσχάτη ὥρα, the laſt hour, or part of that day; and again the true light already ſhining, c. 2. 8. that is the Chriſtian bright ſtate turning out the Moſaical ſhadows, or typical ſervices, which was finally to be done at the deſtruction of the Temple, and now already was done in ſome part. And the ſame again appears by the Ἀντίχριστοι, many counterfeit Chriſts and falſe Prophets, that, in that v. 18. he ſaith were then among them, ſuch as Chriſt tells us were to be the immediate fore-runners of that deſtruction, Mat. 24. And accordingly the whole buſineſſe of the Epiſtle is to encourage them, chap. 1. 4. to confirm the faith and conſtancy of the Chriſtian profeſſors, who were now ſolicited vehemently by theſe ſeducers, and the Church torn aſunder in every place by the Gnoſticks, (the followers of Simon) who now denyed the reality of Chriſt's coming in the fleſh, and would no longer confeſſe a crucified Chriſt, or venture any perſecutions for that confeſſion. That it was called antiently the Epiſtle to the Parthians, is affirmed by S. Auguſtine, meaning thereby thoſe converted Jewes which lived beyond Euphrates, of which there were great multitudes, ſaith Joſephus, Ant. l. 18. c. 12. And to them it is not improbable it was written.

CHAP. I.

1. That which from the beginning of the world was in the decree and purpoſe of God (and was afterward foretold by him) but by us the Apoſtles of Chriſt heard from God ſpeaking from heaven, and really beheld and looked on by us, known and teſtified by all our ſenſes, concerning Chriſt and the Goſpel of Chriſt, ſhewing us the way to life eternal,

1. THAT which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have ſeen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled * of the word of life,]

2. (Which Chriſt and which Goſpel were revealed unto us viſibly and diſcernibly, of which I can teſtifie as an eye-witneſſe, and do therefore now declare to you Chriſt the fountain of eternal life, who from all eternity continued with the Father, and at laſt became man, and was clearly revealed to us)

3. What, I ſay, we know thus aſſuredly, that we make known to you, that you may partake with us in it, and that participation be of all others the moſt bleſſed deſirable participation, (ſee Act. 2. c.) a participation of knowledge and grace and immortality, and that with God himſelf through Chriſt Jeſus.

4. This Epiſtle and, in it, this teſtimony doe I write unto you, for your encouragement in the profeſſion of the Goſpel, which many Gnoſticks and falſe Chriſts are apt to ſhake you out of.

5. And this is the ſumme of the Goſpel preached by Chriſt, which we now teſtifie unto you, that all purity is required of you, that all God's commands are pure, and that there is nothing which hath any degree of impurity in it which God in Chriſt doth not now abominate, but on the other ſide, a farre greater purity now required then before, which may ſufficiently arm you againſt all the deceits of the Gnoſticks, which under the notion of Chriſtian liberty are apt to lead you into all the impurity in the world.

5. This then is the meſſage which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is [a] light, and in him is no darkneſſe at all.]

6. If we ſay we are partakers of his purity, or have any likeneſſe or conformity with him, and live in any impure courſe, as the Gnoſticks doe, we neither ſpeak nor act according to the Goſpel, which prohibits and interdicts all ſuch wayes as they daily and avowedly practice:

7. But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, † we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.]

7. But if we live pure lives, as he is perfectly pure, then we partake with Christ of his graces, and resemble him in his purity, (see v. 3. and v. 6.) and the death of Christ is beneficial (to us, who thus imitate his purity) to cleanse us from all the guilt of past sins, and present infirmities.

8. If we say that we have *no sin, we deceive our selves, and the truth is not in us.]

8. All these mens pretensions to perfection are a perfect cheating of themselves. Whosoever conceive, as the Gnosticks doe, (calling themselves, The perfect, &c.) that such actions as are done by them are reconcileable with perfection or innocence, they most miserably deceive themselves, and must know that they are so farre from any state of perfection, that they act quite contrary to the rule which the Gospel gives for the regulating of mens lives.

9. If we confesse our sins, he is faithfull and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousnesse.]

9. The only way is to repent and acknowledge what we have done amisse, and then God, having promised pardon to all humble penitents upon sincere reformation, is obliged in fidelity and justice to make good this promise to you, to free you from all punishment of sin; and no other course but this will render you capable of his mercy.

10. If we say that we have not sinned, we b make him a lyar, and his word is not in us.]

10. Nay they that live such lives as these men, and yet pretend to perfection, do not only lie, v. 6. deceive themselves, v. 8. but proceed farther, and make God a lyar, who having sent Christ into the world to reveal his will, to give certain rules of life, to define what is now sin, and what is not, hath universally defined such actions as are committed by these pretenders to perfection, to be horrible and damning sins; and therefore they that doe thus, and yet thus pretend, give God the lie, and manifest how farre they are from obeying his commands, living according to Gods will.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. φῶς σκότος

V. 5. Light] The word φῶς light is a figurative expression to signifie the most perfect, immaculate puri-ty; and σκότος darkness is directly the contrary, mixture of all impurity: The affirming of which concerning God, that he is perfect purity, without any mixture of impurity, is no such strange thing as that the Apostle should introduce it with so much ceremony as here we see made use of, That which we have ὃ ἀκηκόαμεν heard and seen, which we have looked on, and our hands have felt, v. 1. What we have seen, we declare, v. 3. and, This is that message which we declare, v. 5. That which all this solemnity was thought fit to introduce, was certainly somewhat either doubted of and questioned by the doctrines, or opposed and resisted by the lives of those to whom he writes. And that which seems most probable to be the full importance of it, is in the general to denote the great perfection of purity which is now commanded in the Christian law, and more particularly the great obligation that lies upon Christians not to make that profession or pretence or excuse for the favouring themselves in any degree of liberty or impurity. Christ came certainly from God to declare his will unto us; that God a God of all purity, and consequently his commandments which Christ came to reveale (like himself) made up of severe rules of purity: And then how contrary to all piety and Christianity must the Gnostick infusions necessarily be, which allow and practise all impurities, and make them a special part of their religion, and call themselves τέλειοι and γνωστικοὶ perfect and knowing men, beyond all others, and living in a sink of all uncleanesse, say they have not sinned for all this, ver. 10?

b. ψεύστην ποιοῦμεν αὐτὸν

V. 10. Make him a lyar] What it is to make God a lyar hath no great difficulty in it; it is certainly to deny the truth of that which God hath somewhere affirmed; and so 'tis used c. 5. 10. The greater question is, wherein the truth of this affirmation here is found- ἐὰν εἴπωμεν ὅτι οὐκ ἡμαρτήκαμεν ded, that if we say we have not sinned, we thus deny the truth of what God hath affirm'd, or give God the lie. The best way of deciding this, will sure be taken from the Context, where v. 6. the foundation of this speech is laid. There it is, If we say we have fellowship or partnership with God, and walk in darkness, we lie, and doe not the truth. There certainly we may discern who are the we that are here spoken of, viz. not the Apostle, and the pious Christians (for the first person doth not alwaies signifie so, but is used to personate any other that the Apostle would speak of: see Rom. 7. Note d.) but those that are supposed to walk in darkness, that is, to go on in unchristian sinnes, and yet to pretend partnership with God, that is, to a state of great innocence and perfection. These are certainly the Gnostick-hereticks, whose character that is, to live in all carnality and uncharitableness, &c. and yet to pretend themselves to be the most perfect men: Of those he there saith, that they lie notoriously, their foul actions and pretensions to perfection are very contrary, and they doe not the truth, they live contrary to that rule of life which as Christians they have received to live by. To these same persons he proceeds, ver. 7. to tell the positive truth, contrary to their lie, that if they walk in the light, that is, live Christian lives of purity and charity, then they may truly be said to have partnership with him, (as the King's MS. seems to have read ἀυτῶ, and not ἀλλήλων, and as is most agreeable with v. 6.) that is, to be blamelesse, pious, perfect men; and then for any frailties, or forsaken sins, the blood of Christ is accepted as a sacrifice of expiation for such. This is again said (both in the former and latter part of it, ver. 8, 9.) but with some little change of the phrase, which must be interpreted by analogie with the former. If we say, ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ ἔχομεν we have not sin, that is all one with the precedent, we have partnership with him; for sinlesnesse is that property of Gods which they pretended to be communicated to them: and then though there be nothing in that verse answerable to their walking in darkness, ver. 6. yet the persons being still supposed the same that are spoken of in both verses, the impious carnal Gnosticks, this of their wicked lives is supposed in the 8th verse, having been already, ver. 6. sufficiently expres'd: and so as of them, whose lives of carnality and pretensions of perfection were so contrary, it had been affirmed, ver. 6. that they lie, and doe not the truth; so in that 8th verse, 'tis said with little change, they deceive themselves, and the truth is not in them, which only adds to the former the consideration of their danger that they thus brought upon themselves, they flattered themselves to their ruine, whereas v. 9. If they would acknowledg their sins and danger, and forsake them, and flie to God for pardon upon repentance, he having promised it to such, would faithfull and just to forgive them their sins, would deal with them according to his promise. And then follows v. 10. If we say that we have not sinned (which is directly all one with, we have not sin, v. 8. see Note on c. 3. a.) that is, if these men that thus live, pretend still still that they are the perfect (as of their followers in Irenæus we read, that they called themselves the spiritual, and affirmed that all the foulest actions did no more pollute them then gold was polluted by being in the mire, or the sun beams by shining on a dunghill) they make God a lyar, (which is an addition to their lying first, ver. 6. and then deceiving themselves, v. 8. and so frees these repetitions from tautologie) that is, directly give God the lie, who hath every where declared such actions as these men practised confidently, (abominable pollutions, &c.) to be most vile and most punishable sins. And so this appears to be the full meaning of this verse, and being so, leaves no place of disputing from hence, whether of any regenerate man it can be said at any time, that he hath not sinned (in that notion which belongs to that phrase in these Epistles of S. John, and is explained Note a. on ch. 3. to belong to wilful, advised, deliberate sin) for sure these Gnostick foul livers were farre from regenerate men. That this is the full meaning of the place will farther appear by the words immediately subsequent, ch. 2. 1. These things I write unto you that ye sin not, which are very fitly adapted to this purpose: for there is no such way to perswade men not to fall off into those foul sins that now solicited them, as this of undeceiving them in this point, and assuring them that if they lived Gnostick lives, they should never be deemed perfect men, which as long as they entertained themselves with any hopes of, nothing could convince them of the necessity of forsaking them. Whereas any other way of understanding the place would not tend to that end of exhorting and warning them not to sin. For if it were to be understood of all the best mens being guilty of sinne, how could that be a way of inforcing on them their duty of not sinning? Many more arguments might be used by refuting all other imaginable interpretations of this place to confirm this, but this one of the Context may be sufficient, which accordingly in the next Chapter pursues the same subject more expresly; Hereby we know that we have known him, that we are true Gnosticks indeed, (and not those that falsly assume that name) truly perfect men, such as Christianity was designed to make us, if we keep his commandements, v. 3. practise those vertues of purity and charity which Christ commandeth: and then v. 4. just as here in this Chapter, but more largely and explicitly then in this verse, He that saith, I have known him, that is, calls himself a Gnostick, perfect man, and keepeth not his commandements, lives so contrary to the rules of piety and purity, and all Christian vertue, as these pretended Gnosticks doe, ψεύστης ἐστὶ is a lyar (just as c. 1. 6. we lie) and the truth is not in him, as c. 1 8. the truth is not in us. But who so keepeth his word v. 5. that is, lives according to the strict commands of Christ ἀληθῶς ἐν τούτῳ in this man hath the love of God been truly perfected; he may on some grounds of truth pretend to perfection of charity toward God, to which these Gnosticks falsly pretended, and so was the occasion of all this discourse of pretended perfection, when men live in vile sins, as after of that perfect love which, if truly such, casteth out fear, ch. 4. 1.

CHAP. II.

1. My tender Christians, I write this to you which I have last written, v. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. (see ch. 1. note b.) to deterre and forewarn you of this deceit that so many are now fall'n into, that you may not be drawn away into the heresie and impurities of the Gnosticks, either by following them into unclean, bestial sins, or by depending on and pretending to such a perfection in your selves, which may secure you in any one act of deliberate sin, but that if you have fallen, or shall fall into any such act, that then presently you confesse it, and forsake it freely, and lay hold on Christ, who (for your encouragement, you may know) is on God's right hand, acting as an advocate for those that have sinn'd, and now reform and amend their lives, and, when the Church praies to him for any laps'd sinner, he is just and faithfull to perform his promise, to hear the Churches prayers, and to present them to his Father, and to manage all that belongs to such, to their best advantage.

1. MY little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous.]

2. And he, having entred by blood into the holy place, that is, having died for us, and gone to heaven, where he is now invested with power, which he exerciseth in our behalf, is a powerfull means of reconciling God to us, of obtaining free pardon for our sins (on condition of our giving of our selves up to new life) and not for ours only, but for all the sins of all the world of men, (on condition of faith in Christ, and new life.)

2. And he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.]

3. And this is a character by which it may be discerned whether we truly know Christ or no, (as the Gnosticks call themselves by that name, which signifies knowledge, 1 Tim. 6. 20.) that is, whether we have a right notion of Christ as he is our advocate, v. 1. and propitiation for our sins, v. 2. and of his Gospel, or no, viz. if we do what he commandeth us to do, live obedient to the directions of Christ, (see note on c. 1. b.)

3. And hereby we do know † that we know him, if we keep his commandments.]

† that we have known him, ὅτι ἐγνώκαμεν

4. He that undertaketh to be a Gnostick, or perfect Christian, that is, one that hath more perfection of divine knowledge, and love of God, v. 5. then all others, if he expresse not this in a pure and holy life, is the greatest hypocrite in the world, (see c. 1. note b.)

4. He that saith, * I know him, and keepeth not his commandements, is a liar, and the truth is not in him.]

* I have known ἔγνωκα.

5. But the observing his commands is the onely sure argument, that he that doth so is a perfect lover of God, truly so called, (the appellation being falsely assumed by the Gnosticks) and an argument of evidence to himself, that he is a branch, a member of Christ, as the Gnosticks boast that they are, and that whatsoever they doe, it cannot make them cease to be so, (see note on c. 1. b.)

5. But whoso keepeth his word, † in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him.]

† in this man hath the love of God been truly perfected, ἀληθῶς ἐν τούτῳ ἠγάπηται ἡ τοῦ Θεοῦ τετελείωται

6. He that pretends to be a member of Christ (see Joh. 15. 4.) doth by that engage himself to live as Christ lived, or if he doe not, to give over so pretending.

6. He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also so to walk even as he walked.]

2. 7. 'Tis not any new matter which I now discover or write unto you, but that which you were taught at the first preaching the faith unto you, and that which was taught you so early may deserve to be styled an old commandment.

7. Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment, which ye had [a] from the beginning: * the old commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning.]

* or, the word which ye heard from the beginning, is the old commandment

8. Again,

† a thing which is true in itself, ὅ ἐστιν ἀληθὲς ἐν αὐτῷ
* or, in us, because the shadow passeth, for the King's MS. reads ἐν ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἡ σκιὰ παράγεται † already ἤδη

8. Again, a new commandment I write unto you, † which thing is true in him and * in you: because the darkness is past, and the true light † now shineth.]

8. 'Tis that indeed that Christ called a new commandment, and so it is in comparison with the Mosaical Law, to which Christ hath added some degrees of perfection; but that is no prejudice to it, it is not the less true for being so, nor the less considerable to you, but ought in all reason (as proclaim'd by God from heaven, and Christ sent on purpose to preach it) to be look'd on as a thing wherein we are at this time concerned most particularly, those dark imperfect shadows of the Mosaical œconomy being now at an end, and the more perfect Christian precepts which are to take place, and to turn out the Mosaical performances, being already, as the Sun, risen, and shining in our Horizon, in full force obligatory to all Christians.

9. He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now.]

9. This consideration obligeth you to all Christian practices, actions of light, particularly that of charity and kindness to all your fellow-Christians, contrary to those emulations, and contentions, and seditions, and persecutings of their fellow-Christians, that are observable in the Gnosticks among you.

* scandal σκάνδαλον

10. He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is no * occasion of stumbling in him.]

10. He that is thus charitably disposed and inclined, is the true Christian, and hath little occasion to insnare him in any sin, little temptation to any ill, most of the sins that men fall into flowing from this original of uncharitableness, see Mat. 5. 22.

11. But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.]

11. For as the dark keeps any man from discerning which way to go, so doth uncharitableness obstruct all Christian practice.

12. I write unto you, little children, because your sins are forgiven you for his names sake.]

12. A precept I have v. 15. which I desire to enforce upon all sorts of you: First, on the tender Christians among you, because God hath been so kind to you, as to forgive your sins for Christ's sake, which will be an engagement to you, v. 15. to take off your love from the world, and place it on God.

13. I write unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I write unto you, young men, because you have overcome the wicked one. I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father.]

13. The same I have for you, the most antient, for you know Christ, (which is agreeable to those of your age, to know the Antient of days) and that may be an engagement to you to love whom you know: And so 'tis likewise for yong men, to whose age it is agreeable to entertain ambitions and desires of conquering, and have been enabled by God to do so, to overcome the evil one, both the devil, and every other that can mean you any hurt, and (if you adhere fast to Christ) all temptations of the world or devil. Which sure is an engagement to you not to love the world which you have overcome. And for you, little ones, again, your knowing of the Father is an obligation to love him with a most filial love.

14. I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one.]

14. And again I reiterate and reinforce this exhortation upon you, antient men, as I did before, to impresse it the deeper, and so on you young men also; and the exhortation on which I lay so much weight to you all, is this,

15. Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.]

15. Love not the world nor any thing in it; for whosoever doth so, that man hath not that love of God, which is prescribed now under the Gospel, of parting with all, when he calls for it, and following him.

16 For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and pride of life, is not of the Father; but is of the world.]

16. For all that is in estimation in the world, those things that tend to our sensual pleasures, profits, honors, and the like, and the desires that are fastned on those objects, (which are so observable all of them in the Gnosticks, first, their filthy abominable lusts, secondly, their love of the world, which makes them deny Christ, rather then incur persecution by professing him, and thirdly, their looking on themselves as men of deepest knowledge, and priding themselves in those perfections) are all from an earthy, not an heavenly principle.

17. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doth the will of God abideth for ever.]

17. And all these, all wherein they so delight themselves, what are they but poor momentany transitory things? whereas obedience to God's will helps us to perpetuity.

* hour ὥρα

18. Little children, it is [b] the last * time: and as you have heard that Antichrist † shall come, even now are there [c] many Antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last * time]

18. This disseminating of unchristian doctrines among you, is no more then what Christ foretold should fall out about this time. For now the great day of destruction upon the obdurate Jews is close at hand, (see note on Mat. 24. b. and Heb. 10. a.) And as Mat. 24. 5, 11, 12. 'tis foretold by Christ that immediately before the destruction of Jerusalem, there must be false Christs, that is, some that take upon them to be sent from God, as Christ was, and so to be counter-Christs, false counterfeits of the true, and again false prophets, bringing in new doctrines, and pretending to do miracles, to get authority to them; so now we see it fulfill'd, there having already appeared many who undertake to be the saviours and redeemers of the Jewes, to rescue them (which is their notion of a Messias) out of their conquerours hands, &c. and now false teachers, the Gnosticks, under Simon the Magician, by whom therefore you ought not to be seduced, but to look on them as the men foretold by Christ, which should, if it were possible, deceive the very elect, and by which we know infallibly that this is that time there prophesied of, which though it bring us some persecutions at present, yet withal it signifies, that if we continue constant in faith, we shall shortly be delivered. b. c.

19. They went out from us, but they were not of us: for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out, that they might be made manifest, that they were not all of us.]

19. The Antichrists, or false teachers, that are now abroad, may perswade you, and be conceived by you to be of the same piece with us disciples, and Apostles, and Orthodox Christians, and not to differ from us in any considerable matters, because they lived in the same assembly with us, immediately before they thus went out, and taught these false doctrines among you: But let them not impose upon you thus: the truth is, they were not of us, or of the same faith with us, though they went out from among us, and an argument of that you may have from their leaving us, or going out from us; For if they had been of the same faith with us, what needed they to have separated? they would certainly have continued communion with us; and their not doing so, is a manifestation that, though they did live among us, yet they were none of them of the same faith with us, when they thus forsook us.

* And Καὶ

20. * But ye have an unction from the holy One, and ye know all things.]

20. And that testimony of the truth of the Gospel of Christ, which was given to it by the holy Ghost, is imparted to you, and gives you such an assurance of the truth against these impostors, that you cannot in any reason be thus cheated by them: see note on Act. 10. c.

21. † I

21. And conſequently my writing to you now is not out of jealouſie or ſuſpicion that you are ignorant of the truth; for then I would write more largely on this matter, and give you the evidences and proofs of all this: but I ſatisfie my ſelf with theſe brief admonitions, becauſe you are ſo firmly rooted in the truth, that you cannot but diſcern the difference of every ſuch falſe doctrine from the one revealed truth.

21. † I have not written unto you, becauſe ye know not the truth; but becauſe ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth.]

† I have written to you, not becauſe ὅτι οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι οὐκ οἶδατε

22. There is no ſuch liar, ſuch dangerous falſe teacher, as he that denies Jeſus to be the Meſſias, and thus do the ring-leaders of the Gnoſtick hereſie (ſee note a.) Whoſoever doth ſo is an Antichriſt, denying in effect both the Father and the Son; the Son directly, the Father by conſequence, becauſe he hath teſtified of Chriſt by miracles, and voice from heaven, which teſtimony of the Father is not true if Jeſus be not the Chriſt.

22. Who is a liar, but he that denieth that Jeſus is the Chriſt? * he is Antichriſt that denieth the Father and the Son.]

* this is the Anti-chriſt denying ἔστιν ὁ ἀντίχριστος ὁ ἀρνούμενος

23 And ſo whoſoever denieth the Son to be the Meſſias, renounceth the Father alſo, who hath teſtified him to be ſo. And this doe the followers of Simon, the Gnoſticks, who deny Chriſt to have been born, or lived or died truly, but only in appearance.

23. Whoſoever denieth the Son, the ſame [d] hath not the Father: [but] he that acknowledgeth the Son, hath the Father alſo.]

24. You therefore, whatſoever your temptations be, forſake not the doctrine which from the beginning of your Chriſtianity you have received: To which if you firmly adhere, if you continue in the conſtant profeſſion of the true faith of Chriſt at firſt revealed to you, you ſhall continue alſo in the favour and love of God the Father, and of Chriſt, which is reward ſufficient for that conſtancy.

24. Let that therefore abide in you which ye have heard from the beginning: if that which ye have heard from the beginning ſhall remain in you, ye alſo ſhall continue in the Son, and in the Father.]

25. And whatſoever hazzard we run by ſo doing, it matters not, though it be to loſſe of life it ſelf, becauſe he hath promiſed eternal life to thoſe that ſtick faſt to him, though with the loſſe of this.

25. And this is the promiſe that he hath promiſed us, even eternal life.]

26. And this have I ſaid to arm you againſt the ſeducing Gnoſticks, &c. that are now among you, and are ſo ſolicitous to doe ſo.

26. Theſe things have I written unto you concerning them that ſeduce you.]

27. And indeed I need give you no other armature againſt theſe, then what you have already: for the teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt, and ſo of God himſelf, given to the truth of that Goſpel which hath been preached among you, is ſufficient to fortifie you, and that is ſtill among you, and you have no farther need of teſtimonies of that truth againſt all oppoſers and deceivers; only hold faſt and perſevere in that which you have formerly been infallibly taught by that means, ſee ver. 20. and let not theſe ſeducers yet work upon you.

27. But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you: and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the ſame anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie; and even as it hath taught you, * ye ſhall abide in him.]

* or remain in him even now or ſtill, for the Ks Ms. reads, and points it ſo, μείνατε ἐν αὐτῷ ἤ γε.

28. I beſeech you, my tender children, keep faſt to Chriſt, unmoved, that when that great fatal day of viſitation comes, that coming of Chriſt ſo long expected (ſee note b. & Mar. 24. b.) wherein the obdurate unbelievers ſhall be deſtroyed, and the believers delivered and preſerved, we may come with chearfulneſſe and confidence (ſee Joh. 7. a.) and not be turned with ſhame from him, or as inconſtant (and ſo guilty) perſons, be aſhamed to meet him.

And now, little children, abide in him, that when he ſhall appear, we may have confidence, & not be † aſhamed before him at his coming.]

† aſhamed of, or from him, αἰσχυνθῶμεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ

29. Reſolving of this, that Chriſt is a moſt juſt judge, and conſequently that every upright perſon is a child of his, like unto him, and certainly ſhall be uſed by him as a ſon, have all protection and inheritance from him.

29. If ye know that he is righteous, * ye know that every one that doth righteouſneſſe is born of him.]

* or know that alſo, for the King's MS. reads γινώσκετε

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. ἀπ' ἀρχῆς Παλαιὰ ἐντολή

V. 7. From the beginning] There be in theſe two verſes, which ſeem perſpicuous, very many difficulties, which it will be fit to explicate. 1. What is meant by the beginning, and ſo by the old Commandment, which they had heard from thence. It hath been conceived by others that the old commandment was that given to the Iſraelites by Moſes, and then the beginning muſt be the beginning of the Jewiſh Church under Moſes; and ſo there may be truth in it, that the commandment which this Apoſtle now gives them, (whether more generally, that they that profeſſe God ſhould not fall into thoſe black heathen ſins, c. 1. 6, 8, 10. & c. 2. 1, 3, 4. or more particularly, that profeſſion of piety muſt carry charity to our brethren along with it, which is the precept immediately ſubjoined, ver. 9, 10, 11.) was the very doctrine and commandment of Moſes, whom the Judaizers ſo zealouſly adhered to, and therefore they were not to look upon it as any new or ſtrange doctrine brought in by Chriſt. But it muſt be remembred, that thoſe whom this Apoſtle here writes to, being thoſe which had formerly by his preaching received the Chriſtian faith, and the end of this Epiſtle being to confirm their conſtancy againſt the ſeducers that were now amongſt them, it might be to them a ſufficient argument to receive what now he ſaid to them, that it was no more then he had taught them, and they had abſolutely believed and entertained at the firſt preaching of the Goſpel unto them. For the Gnoſticks pretending to be perfect, and ſo that whatſoever they did, they ſinned not, (ſee Note on c. 1. b.) that which the Apoſtle here from the beginning of the chapter deſires to impreſſe upon them, is the unreaſonableneſſe of this, the obeying the commands of God being the one thing wherein true perfection conſiſted, ver. 5. and the living of Chriſtian lives after Chriſt's pattern, the only way to approve themſelves Chriſtians, v. 6. And to this it will be moſt pertinent to apply theſe words of the Apoſtle, v. 7. following immediately upon thoſe; and then from the beginning muſt ſignifie from the beginning of the Apoſtles preaching, and their receiving the faith of Chriſt, thus, That what he now ſaith unto them, they had once received for granted, when they firſt embraced the faith; and therefore why ſhould they now be led unto other perſwaſions, think they may live unchriſtian lives, and yet be perfect men, good Chriſtians? That this is the meaning of ἀπ' ἀρχῆς from the beginning may be concluded from 2 Joh. 5, and 6. where the ſame phraſe is twice uſed. I write no new commandment to thee, but that which we had from the beginning, (and that in the ſame matter, ſpecified here againſt uncharitableneſſe, v. 9.) that we love one another; and v. 6. This is the commandment, that that according as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it. That this belongs to the true, pure Christian doctrine, taught them at the first planting of the faith among them, (and not to the precepts given to the Jewes by Moses) and that in opposition to the new, heretical doctrines, lately brought into the Church of Christ by the Gnosticks, may appear both by the antecedents and consequents there. In the antecedents, v. 4. I rejoiced greatly, that I found of thy children walking in the truth, that is, according to the pure Christian doctrine of charity, &c. as we have received commandment from the Father, referring to that voice of Gods in mount Tabor, in the hearing of this and two other Apostles, that all were to hear Christ, that is, practise what he had commanded: And upon that it follows, And now I beseech thee, not as writing a new commandment, but that which we had (that is, we Apostles had) from the beginning, when Christ first preached to us, that we love one another, that of charity being the precept that Christ most early and most earnestly impress'd on his Disciples, By this shall all men know that you are my disciples, if you love one another. So likewise appears by the consequents, the mention of the many deceivers entred into the world, v. 7. as the reason why he inculcates that commandment which they had had from the beginning, For many deceivers, &c. This concludes that the doctrine which he thus inculcates, was it which they had believed before these deceivers came, and so fitly belongs to that doctrine which from the beginning of their Christianity they had entertained, and were now in danger to be seduced out of it, if they did not take care to make good their constancy. By this interpretation of the like phrases there, it is all reason to interpret them so here also, and then that whole seventh verse will be very plain; These seducers bring you new doctrine: That which I bring you is not so, but the very doctrine that you received at the first preaching the Gospel to you; and that which you did receive so, deserves sure to be look'd on, not with suspicion, as novel, but with security, as an old commandment, which you can no more mistake in adhering to, then you can think you did in your first receiving of the faith. And so that may be the most significant rendring of the last words of the verse, Ἡ ἐντολὴ ἡ παλαιά ἐστιν ὁ λόγος ὃν ἠκούσατε ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, either in the order wherein they lie, An old commandement it is, the word which you heard from the beginning; or else, making ὁ λόγος the Subject of the proposition, the word which ye heard from the beginning (which ye received and believed when the faith was first preached to you) is the old (sure no novel) commandment. This difficulty being thus explained, a second follows, v. 8. what is meant by a new commandement. The phrase sure referres to the words of Christ, Joh. 13. 34. A new commandement I give unto you, that you love one another, as I have loved you, that you accordingly love one another. Where the duty of charity to our brethren, though it had been commanded by Moses's law, yet was now elevated to an higher pitch by Christ's example, and precept founded therein, even to loving enemies, and laying down or venturing our very lives for the spiritual advantages of other men. In which respect this degree of charity now required by Christ, is by him styled a new commandement; and so 'tis here by this Apostle: And being said to the Jewish Christians, he foresees some possible prejudice that may lie upon it, by being thus new, a superaddition to Moses's Law, (it being the Gnosticks endevour to comply with the Jewish Zelots, and to maintain Judaisme against Christianity it self;) and therefore to vindicate it from this, he adds, ὅ ἐστιν ἀληθὲς ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν, or ἡμῖν, as the King's MS. reads, which thing is true in it self, & in you, or us, that is, This superaddition to the Mosaical Law in this point of charity to other men, which makes it capable of the style of a new commandement, is in it self true, that is, it is most certainly true that Christ made it, and in himself exemplified it to us; and therefore though it be in some respect new, yet all Christians are obliged to receive it: and beside that, it is true in you or in us, that is, hath a special considerable truth in it to us at this time; and the reason of that last is rendred in the ensuing words, ὅτι ἡ σκοτία (or as the King's MS. reads, σκιὰ) παρέρχεται, καὶ τὸ φῶς τὸ ἀληθινὸν ἤδη φαίνει, because the darkness, or the shadow, passeth, and the true light already shineth. What is the meaning of these phrases is yet a farther difficulty, but by analogie with other the like in these books may be explained. Christ is called the true light, Ἀληθινὸν φῶς Joh. 1. 9. Light in respect of his doctrine, which was the direction of every mans life, and true light in respect of the more imperfect shadows that had been before under the Law. Thus, when it is said, Grace and truth came by Jesus Christ, and that the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth, truth denotes the substance in opposition to shadows, the substantial worship in opposition to the rudiments of the Law. And this sense is much favoured here by the King's MS. which reads, not σκοτία darkness, but σκιὰ shadow, which is used of the Law, Col. 2. Σκιὰ 17. Heb. 10. 1. and so the word παρέρχεται passeth Παρέρχεται doth incline; for that is oft applied to a shadow, (my time passeth like a shadow, &c.) but not so to darkness. And indeed as light is opposed to darkness, so true light, which is somewhat more, that in which is no mixture of darkness, is most fitly opposed to a shadow, in which there is some of that mixture. 'Tis true indeed ver. 9, and 11. we read σκοτία darkness, which may make it probable that it should be σκοτία not σκιὰ darkness, not shadow, here. But that argument is of little force, because there the opposition being betwixt that and light simply, σκοτία darkness was necessarily to be used; and by that is meant the darkness of sin in both places, the hating the brother: but here it being not simply light, but with this addition, the true light, shadow is it to which that is most properly opposed. And it need not seem strange that both these oppositions should here be used so neer one to the other, it being evident, that the doctrine of Christ, which is opposed to sin, and so to darkness, which denotes that, is opposed also to the Law of Moses, as a more perfect to that which was lesse perfect, an higher degree of charity now exemplified and required by Christ, to a lower and more imperfect degree of it before required by Moses. As for the passing of the shadow, and shining of the true light, that evidently Φαίνει signifies the abolition of the Mosaical Law, and the Christian law taking place, prevailing over it. Which this Apostle, which knew that to be the last hour, and so the destruction of the Jewish Temple (and consequently service) so suddainly to approach, could not but know that it was now at hand. And indeed the Apostles having received revelations to that purpose, (see Note on Rom. 7. a.) it is here truly said ἤδη φαίνει, Ἤδη φαίνει this true light already shineth, the Law was already abolished, and only the Christian doctrine in force already. And so this is a most commodious, efficacious reason, to prove and press the matter in hand, that if this were a new commandment, which here he speaks of, and no old Judaical one, yet it was part of the doctrine of Christ, and that was now in full force over the world, the Judaical Law being already abrogated, and the destruction of their whole policie very near at hand, v. 18.

V. 18. The last time] That ἐσχάτη ὥρα here signifies b. that famous period, the destruction of the Jewes, will not Ἐσχάτη ὥρα only appear by comparing that phrase with many other of that kind in these Books, the τέλος end, and συντέλεια consummation of the age, and ἐσχάται ἡμέραι the last daies, daies, but also by the whole Context in this place: For the ἠκούσατε (here following) ye have heard, being a form of citing, must necessarily referre us to some prediction that had before been delivered of the matter here spoken of, viz. the coming of Antichrist. This prediction was certainly that of Christ's Mat. 24. where before this fatal day, in three stages of his discourse, three several times he toucheth on this matter; first v. 5. There shall come many in my name, saying, I am Christ, and shall deceive many; then v. 11. many Pseudo-prophets (that is, that pretend a mission when they have it not) shall arise and deceive many; then v. 23. If any shall say, Lo here is Christ, or there, believe them not: for there shall rise Pseudo-Christs and Pseudo-prophets, and shall shew many signes and wonders, so that they shall deceive, if possible, even the elect: behold I have told you before. Of the first sort are those counterfeit Christs who pretended soon after Christ's ascension; of which it is therefore said, οὔπω τὸ τέλος, the end is not yet, they were to be some years before this destruction. Of this sort was Theudas, not he which is mentioned Act. 5. 36, 37. as antienter then Judas Galilæus; but another mentioned by Josephus, under Claudius's reign, when Fadus was Procurator of Judæa, who, saith Eusebius l. 2. c. 1. a. out of Joseph. Ant. l. 20. c. 5. ἀπάτησε πολλοὺς deceived many. Of this sort was the Ægyptian, Act. 21. 38. mentioned also by Eusebius, l. 2. c. κα'. out of Josephus. And so also Dositheus, or Dosthes, in Origen cont. Cels. l. 1. and in Hegesippus apud Euseb. l. 4. c. κβ'. and divers others who undertook to be deliverers of the people, which is in effect to be Christs, as a Christ is defined by S. Luke, c. 24. 21. μέλλων λυτροῦσθαι τὸν Ἰσραήλ, he that should redeem Israel. So again in the last place, the false Christs & false prophets are the like to these, differing from them only in the time wherein they should shew themselves, viz. after the besieging of Jerusalem, v. 15. when upon the sudden raising of it again by Cestius Gallus the Christians fled out of Judæa, v. 16. for then was it an opportunity for false Christs to attempt to gather followers, and undertake deliverances, if any would be deceived by them. But the deceivers that especially belong to this place are those of the second or middle stage, Mat. 24. 11. called there πολλοὶ ψευδοπροφῆται many Pseudo-prophets, immediately before the standing of the abomination of desolation in the holy place, that is, (as S. Luke interprets it) before Jerusalem was incompass'd with armies, that is, besieged, as here the many Antichrists among them is a proof that it was the last hour. Of that point of time five things are there foretold by Christ, which are so exactly fulfill'd in this time wherein S. John writes, that the very reciting them is almost the sum of this Epistle. First, that the Jewes should be very cruel in persecuting the Christians, Mat. 24. 9. Secondly, that many Christians should be scandalized by this means, that is, renounce the faith to comply with the persecuters, v. 10. Thirdly, that they that did thus renounce the faith to comply with the persecuters, (viz. the Gnostick-hereticks) should persecute those that stuck fast to Christ, and deliver them up to the persecuters, v. 10. Fourthly, that Pseudo-prophets should rise, and, upon this advantage of ridding men from persecution, seduce many, v. 11. Lastly, that upon this increase of persecutions upon the orthodox Christians both from the Jewes and Gnosticks, called the increasing of iniquity, the orthodox themselves should begin to faint, their love to Christ grow cold, v. 12. After which it soon follows, v. 14. And then shall the end come. By the accordance of all which passages there and here, it is manifest who are these Antichrists here set down as the immediate forerunners of the siege of Jerusalem, viz. those false prophets, 2 Pet. 2, 1. who there are said to have denied the Lord that bought them, and here, c. 4. 3. to deny Christ to have come in the flesh, and so were Antichrists properly so called, profess'd enemies to Christ, and withal the most cruel enemies and persecuters of the Christians, that is, the Gnosticks particularly, a sect of unclean abominable Christians, which being followers of Simon Magus, laboured to deceive many by rehearsing the miracles which he did, and by their doctrines of the lawfulnesse of renouncing Christ in time of persecution gathered many to them, who were first willing to escape persecuting, and then hated and themselves persecuted all others. And to this 'tis clear that this whole chapter belongs; first asserting the doctrine of Christ, which these had perverted and denied, v. 1. then the necessitie of Christian practice, v. 3, 4, 5, 6. against these most unchristian livers; then particularly the doctrine of Christian charity, against their hating and persecuting other Christians, v. 9, 10, 11. then the contempt of the world and bearing of the crosse, and of all hardship for Christ's sake, v. 15. and then in this v. 18. having told them, that (according to Christ's prediction) this was the season to expect such deceivers, he comes particularly to them, v. 19. that they went out from the Christians, but were not of them, that is, were not true, but equivocal, and onely nominal Christians, and now were separated from them, as a sect that brake off and went out of the Church, and so were no longer to be counted Christians, v. 21. especially when they denied Jesus to be the Christ, as the Gnosticks did. And so he concludes that he had written to them of those that deceive them, v. 26. That this place, and peculiarly v. 19. belongs to the Gnosticks particularly, see Cyrill of Jerusalem, Cat. 6. p. 134. where speaking of Simon Magus he saith, Περὶ οὗ γέγραπται, ἐξ ἡμῶν ἐξῆλθον, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἦσαν ἐξ ἡμῶν, of whom it is written, They went out from us, but they were not of us; and as the Barocian MS. adds, εἰ γὰρ ἦσαν ἐξ ἡμῶν, μεμενήκασιν ἂν μεθ' ἡμῶν, If they had been of us, they would have remained with us: which is that whole 19. verse applied to Simon and his followers, whom p. 137. he names, Cerinthus, (and in the Barocian Copie, καὶ Μένανδρος) Menander, Carpocrates, Ebion, and Marcion; and again Basilides and Valentinus. Before him see Polycarp in his Epist. to the Philippians, p. 20. in these words, Πᾶς γὰρ ὃς ἂν μὴ ὁμολογῇ Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ἐν σαρκὶ ἐληλυθέναι, ἀντίχριστός ἐστι, καὶ ὃς ἂν μὴ ὁμολογῇ τὸ μαρτύριον τοῦ σταυροῦ, ἐκ τοῦ διαβόλου ἐστί· καὶ ὃς ἂν μεθοδεύῃ τὰ λόγια τοῦ Κυρίου πρὸς τὰς ἰδίας ἐπιθυμίας, καὶ λέγῃ μήτε ἀνάστασιν μήτε κρίσιν εἶναι, οὗτος πρωτότοκός ἐστι τοῦ Σατανᾶ, Every one that doth not confesse that Jesus Christ came in the flesh, is Antichrist; and whosoever confesseth not the martyrdome, or testimonie, of the crosse (that is, that doth not confesse Christ when danger attends that confession) is of the devil: and whosoever converts the oracles of God to his own lusts, and saith that there is neither resurrection nor judgment, he is the first-born of Satan, (which is in the antients generally the title of Simon Magus.) And accordingly in the Epistles of Ignatius the primitive Martyr, especially that to the Smyrneans, he fortifies them against this doctrine of the Gnosticks, that Christ did not suffer, nor was born, nor rose again, ἀληθῶς ἐν σαρκὶ, truly in the flesh, but onely τῷ δοκεῖν in appearance.

Ib. Many Antichrists] Who the πολλοὶ Ἀντίχριστοι were v. 18. hath been at large deduced, Note b. the whole sect of Gnostick hereticks. One mistake onely this matter may be farther liable to, by thinking the ὁ Ἀντίχριστος the Antichrist here to be some peculiar person, distinct from the many Antichrists there. If there were any convincing reasons to conclude this, it would soon be decided who it was; those first-fruits of Satan, Simon Magus, who may well be supposed alive at the writing of this Epistle, being affirmed by the antients to have contended with S. Peter and S. Paul at Rome, Rome, and that most probably at their coming thither, before their Martyrdome, that is, about the twelfth of Nero, very little before the Jewish war, which brought that ruine upon them. See Arnobius l. 2. adverss. Gentes, Sulpicius Severus Hist. sacr. l. 2. Cyril. Hierosol. Catech. 6. Isidore Pelusiot. Ep. 13. All relating that contention between those Apostles and him, and that, saith Cyril, after the error of the Gnosticks had spread it self over the Church, and so made it necessary for the Apostles to oppose him publickly. Beside him other particular persons there were also capable of this title, Cerinthus, opposed by this Apostle S. John particularly, and Carpocrates and Saturnilus & others.

* Bib. Gr. part. 10. 2. p. 347. A. And accordingly * Hippolytus the Martyr in his book, Περὶ συντελ. κόσ. καὶ Ἀντιχρ. interprets the place, many shall say, I am Christ, of Simon Magus and others, Ἀνίσησάν τινες λέγοντες, ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ Χριστὸς, καθὼς ὁ Σίμων ὁ Μάγος, καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ, ὧν οὐκ ἔστι καιρὸς ἄρτι τὰ ὀνόματα μνημονεῦσαι, Some rose and said, I am Christ; as Simon Magus and the rest, whose names it is not seasonable to rehearse. So Hegesippus in that eminent passage, set

* l. 4. c. 22. down from him in * Eusebius, having named the several heresies that were come into the Church in his time, the followers of Simon, Cleobius, Dositheus, Gorthæus, Menander, Marcion, Carpocrates, Valentinus, Basilides and Saturnilus, concludes, ἀπὸ τούτων ψευδόχριστοι, ψευδοπροφῆται, ψευδαπόστολοι, from these were the false Christs, false Prophets, false Apostles, which divided the unity of the Church with pestilent doctrines against God and his Christ. But there is no reason thus to affix the title, the ὁ Ἀντίχριστος the Antichrist here being visibly of the same importance with the same word v. 18. and that there, either all one with, or contained under the many Antichrists that follow. For so the words must import, that the prophesie which had foretold that Antichrist comes in the last hour, was fulfilled in the many Antichrists that were then come; which could not be, if that Antichrist foretold were another from those many Antichrists. And besides it hath already appeared that the coming of that Antichrist foretold, was the arising of false prophets, Mat. 24. 11. and then though the word be here in the Singular number, yet must it be all one with those ψευδοπροφῆται false prophets, in the Plural. And it is ordinary for a word in the Singular to be a complexum, and so to signifie a whole sort or sect of people, as it is apparent ὁ ψεύστης the liar here v. 22. denotes all those false prophets, that is, heretical false teachers, that deny Jesus to be the Messias, and not some singular person that did so. By all which it appears, that what is here said both of the Antichrist, and the many false Christs, belongs equally to the times before the destruction of Jerusalem, and denotes the Gnosticks to be them, and cannot duly be applied to any other. And if it be here objected that there is a difference between false prophets and Antichrists, and so that the Antichrist here will not be the false prophets, Mat. 24. I answer, first, that here appears not the least difference in the importance of the words literally taken, (and accordingly, c. 4. 1. they that are here called many Antichrists, and there, v. 3. the Antichrist, are πολλοὶ ψευδοπροφῆται many false prophets, as appears also by comparing the characters of them there v. 2. with what is here said of them:) for first, Christ and prophet are all one; the word Christ denoting that divine unction or commission to that great Prophetick office which Christ exercised here on earth; and accordingly we know that Moses foretells his coming in that style, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you: and so secondly, the words ἀντὶ and ψευδο in composition are oft all one, as in ἀντιποιεῖν and the like; as when we use the word counterpart of one thing made like another, which yet is not it, and so counterfeit, one which pretends, and looks like another which he is not. And so Ἀντίχριστος will be (most literally) rendred a Counter-Christ, and that is a Pseudo-Christ, or false Christ. So * Palladius expressly useth the word. For speaking of the Devil, χηματίζων ἑαυτὸν εἰς Σωτῆρος, * Lausiac. Histor. c. 31. p. 949. D. transforming himself into the shape of our Saviour, and so adored by Valens, he saith, Ἀντίχριστον ποιῶν προσκύνησιν, he fel down and worshipp'd Antichrist, or this counterfeit Christ, that is, the Devil in this shape of Christ. And such it is certain was Simon Magus, who profess'd himself to be Christ Jesus, who appeared to converse among the Jews. See Cyrill of Jerusalem in Catech. περὶ αἱρέσεων. If this be not sufficient; then secondly, I answer, that the Gnosticks or followers of Simon, as they were false teachers, and so might be called ψευδοπροφῆται in that respect, so they were bitter opposers of Christ and all the orthodox Christians, denied Christ to be come in the flesh, and persecuted all that asserted it; and in that respect 'tis as visible that they were ἀντίχριστοι, as ἀντὶ signifies opposition, or contrariety, Antichrists beyond all that ever any Christians were, or can be imagined to be. And then though Antichrists are somewhat more then Pseudo prophets, because all false prophets, or false teachers, do not thus deny or oppose Christ, and the fundamental articles of our redemption, yet still the greater contains the lesse under it; and so that prediction that foretold there should come false prophets before the besieging of Jerusalem, was abundantly fulfilled in these false teachers, which were over and above Antichrists, profess'd opposers of Christ and Christians.

V. 23. Hath not the Father] To have the Father is to be expounded by analogy with having grace, Heb. 12. 28. that is, retaining it, holding it fast, or making use of it, as in the parable of the Talents, He that hath is he that makes use of and improves the talents by so doing; ἔχειν for κατέχειν. Thus here to have the Father is to retain and hold fast his doctrine, not to forsake or depart from it, which every one must be said to do (and so here οὐκ ἔχειν πατέρα not to have the Father) who denieth Christ to be the Messias, of whom God hath so positively testified that he is so. So again in the end of the verse the phrase is used, and so c. 5. 12. He that hath the Son, is he that adheres and continues in the faith of Christ. So 2 Joh. 9. He that abides not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God, that is, forsakes and apostatizeth from him; but he that continueth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son, by adhering to Christ and that doctrine which he hath revealed from his Father, adheres to God also.

CHAP. III.

Paraphrase.

1. BEhold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.]

1. As for the persecutions that befall the orthodox professors at this time, and are such discouragements to many, tempting them to fall off from their profession, Mat. 24. 10. these are but effects necessarily consequent to God's loving us: For is not God's love very particularly and remarkably expressed and testified to us, that he acknowledges us to be his sons, and gives us the privileges that belong to such? Certainly it is: And yet this is the very reason that we are so persecuted by the world. They look on us as a people contrary to them, having other relations then they have; for they depend upon the world, and not upon God, have nothing to doe with him: and therefore no wonder that this befalls us.

2. My brethren, whatever our perſecutions at preſent are, this ſtate and condition of ours is the ſtate and condition of the ſons of God; and what we ſhall be hereafter, what inheritance ſhall be made over to thoſe ſons, is not yet revealed.

2. Beloved, now are we the ſons of God, and it ‖doth not yet appear what we ſhall be: but we know, that * when he ſhall appear, we ſhall be like him; for we ſhall ſee him as he is.]

‖ hath not been yet made manifeſt ἔπω ἐφανερώθη * if he appear

But this we know, that when that bleſſed time ſhall come, we that are ſons of God, ſhall (as the notion of ſons ſignifies in the ſcripture) be like unto that Father of ours, like him in holineſſe, and like him in bliſſe, and that bliſſe ſhall conſiſt in ſeeing of him as he is, a fountain of all that is deſirable to our natures.

3. And whoſoever hopes or depends on God for any ſuch future ſtate, if he expect to receive it from him according to his manner of promiſing, not abſolutely, but conditionally, or indeed whoſoever ſets his heart on the viſion of God, a pure and bliſsful ſtate, not any ſenſual paradiſe, but a ſpiritual ſtate of bliſſe, made up of ſinleſneſſe and purity, will in all reaſon ſet a purifying here, be a practiſing and aiming after that excellent copie, that he may be capable of that perfect purity hereafter.

3. And every man that hath this hope † in him, purifieth himſelf, even as he is pure.]

† on him ἐπ' αὐτῷ

4. Sin is a contrariety to the Law of God, an act of diſloyalty to our King; and he that deliberately committeth any act of ſin, doth proportionably commit a rebellon and diſloyalty againſt Chriſt.

4. Whoſoever committeth ſin, * tranſgreſſeth alſo the Law: for ſin is the tranſgreſſion of the Law.]

* doth alſo cõmit tranſgreſſion

5. And Chriſt both by his example, being ſinleſſe, never guilty of any act of ſin, and by all that he hath done and ſuffered for us, hath deſigned this ſpecial end to himſelf, to purifie our lives, and cleanſe us from all deliberate acts of ſin.

5. And ye know that he was manifeſted to take away our ſins, and in him is no ſin.]

6. He that adhereth faſt to him, that as a member of his, continueth in him, falleth not indulgently or deliberately into any act of ſin; he that doth ſo, diſclaims all true knowledge of God, (is no Gnoſtick properly called) or converſation with him.

6. Whoſoever abideth in him, ſinneth not: whoſoever ſinneth, hath not ſeen him, neither known him.]

7. My young tender Chriſtians, let not the Gnoſticks ſeduce you to your ruine: he that continues in all righteous actions, that actually performs the will of God, and not onely in intention of mind, and that through his whole courſe of life, and if he fail therein, returns again ſpeedily by repentance, this perſon, and none but this, is the Chriſtian righteous man, he and none elſe is accepted by God as righteous under the Goſpel, in like manner and proportion as Chriſt doing righteouſneſſe is ſaid to be righteous, upon that and not any other ground of denomination.

7. Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doth righteouſneſſe is righteous, even as he is righteous.]

a. 8. He that deliberately committeth any act of known ſin, is in that, or ſo farre, an imitator of the devil; for at the beginning, ſoon after his creation, he acted rebellion againſt God, and hath done ſo ever ſince: And to take off all men from following of him, was the very deſigne of Chriſt's coming into the world.

8. He that [a] committeth ſin, is of the devil; for the devil ſinneth from the beginning: for this purpoſe the Son of God was manifeſted, that he might † deſtroy the works of the devil.]

† diſſolve λύσῃ

b. c. 9. Whoſoever is a true child of God, keeps himſelf ſtrictly from all deliberate ſin: and the reaſon is clear, becauſe that principle of ſonſhip, that from whence he is ſaid to be born anew, or of God, to wit, his ſincere reſolute converſion to God, if that continue to have any energie or life in him, is directly contrary to, and incompatible with the committing any ſin, and therefore he cannot thus ſin, becauſe he is a child of God, a regenerate perſon, that is, ſuch ſinning is unreconcileable with that ſtate.

9. Whoſoever is [b] born of God, doth not commit ſin; for his ſeed remaineth in him: and he [c] cannot ſin, becauſe he is born of God.]

d. 10. This is the character of difference between pious and wicked, regenerate and unregenerate men; he that lives an impious and uncharitable life is no regenerate child of God's, whatſoever he flatter himſelf of his ſtate.

10. * In this the children of God are manifeſted, and the children of the devil: whoſoever doth not righteouſneſs [d] is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother.]

* By this Ἐν τούτῳ

11. For this of charity is the grand fundamental doctrine, which was ſo often and ſo earneſtly commanded by Chriſt, when he was here on earth.

11. For this is the meſſage that ye heard from the beginning, that we ſhould love one another.]

12. And how contrary is this to that emulation, and maligning of thoſe that are better then they, which was the affection that put Cain on killing his brother, and doth the like in the Gnoſticks now abroad, who hate and perſecute all the orthodox Chriſtians to death, and can have no other quarrel to them, but that their own works are evil, and the others good?

12. Not as † Cain, who was of that wicked one, and ſlew his brother: And wherefore ſlew he him? becauſe his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.]

† Cain was ὡς Κάϊν ἦν

13. But this you pure Chriſtians have no reaſon to wonder at, if it prove to be your lot.

13. Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you.]

14. We know that we are regenerate Chriſtians (ſee note on Luc. 15. c.) by our charity to other men, which he that hath not is clearly an unregenerate, unchriſtian perſon.

14. We know that we have paſſed from death unto life, becauſe we love the brethren: he that loveth not his brother, abideth in death.]

15. The hating of others is by interpretation the killing of them, becauſe it is ſo in intention of heart, did not ſome outward reſtraint curb it; and he that is ſuch is acknowledged by all men to be quite contrary to the Evangelical temper, the regenerate ſtate, from the having ſpiritual life abiding in him, which the Gnoſticks, that are ſo malitious, doe yet ſo much talk of.

15. Whoſoever hateth his brother is a murtherer; and ye know that no murtherer hath eternal life abiding in him.]

16. Chriſt's love to us was expreſſed in this, that he was willing to incurre the utmoſt hazard, even to venture his life, to reduce us; and agreeably Chriſtian charity obligeth us to venture even our lives for other men, after the manner, and upon ſo noble a deſigne, as Chriſt did, that is, to bring unto the Chriſtian faith (as the martyrs did) any one or more enemies of Chriſt, and ſo likewiſe in other caſes proportionable to this.

16. Hereby perceive we the love of God, * becauſe he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.]

17. But how contrary to this is the practice of the world, when rich men that have to to spare for others, have yet no compassion or charity to them? which he that doth, how can he be said to be mercifull as God is mercifull, or how to love God, when he doth so contrary to his commands?

18. My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth.]

18. My dearly-beloved tender Christians, let our charity to our brethren shew it self in actions of sincere kindness and bounty to them.

† and we shall perswade, πεισομεν

19. And hereby we know that we are of the truth, † and shall [c] assure our hearts before him.]

19. And by loving one another thus, we are able to discern or judge of our selves, that we are such as we professe our selves to be, v. 18. and by so judging we shall have our hearts secure and confident that God will hear our prayers, v. 22. and Joh. 9. 31.

20. For if our heart condemn us, God is greater then our heart, and knoweth all things.

20, 21. And indeed that this discerning our selves to be such as we pretend our selves to be, is necessary to the giving us this confidence toward God, appears by this, that on the one side our hearts condemning us is a sure argument that God will doe so too, (and then not hearken to our prayers) because he knoweth all things of us that we can know of our selves; and on the other side, if we have nothing to charge on our selves, then we may come thus confidently to God, not fearing that he will lay any thing to our charge (see note on Joh. 7. a.) that we are not guilty of, or that he will be wanting to them that walk sincerely before him

21. Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we * confidence towards God.]

22. And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and doe those things that are pleasing in his sight.]

22. And he will certainly hear our prayers, supposing them such as to which his promise of hearing doth pertain, because by obeying him we are qualified to have our prayers heard by him: see Jam. 1. 6.

23. And this is his commandment, that we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandement.]

23. And one prime part of that obedience is to continue constant in the profession of Christ, and perform all the duty owing from us to Christ and our brethren, according as he by special precept hath required of us.

24. And he that keepeth his commandments, dwelleth in him, and he in him: and hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.]

24. And he that obeyeth him is really one of those which the Gnosticks pretend to be, that is, dwelleth or continueth in Christ, and consequently receiveth all gracious influences from him, as the members from the head, as long as that is united to them: and that we are such, that is, that Christ hath not yet forsaken, but still continues united to us, appeareth by the gracious charitable temper and disposition, ver. 10, 17. which we transcribe from him, ch. 4. 13. see note on Luc. 9. e.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Ἁμαρτάνειν Ἁμαρτίας ποιεῖν Ἁμαρτίαν ἔχειν.

V. 8. Committeth sin] Ἁμαρτάνειν, to sin, and ἁμαρτίαν ποιεῖν, to doe, or commit, sin, which appear to be directly the same by comparing ver. 6, and 8. and so ἁμαρτίαν ἔχειν, chap. 1. 8. to have sin, all one with having sinned, v. 10. have a special energie in the writings of this Apostle, to denote a deliberate, presumptuous commission of sin; not every sin of ignorance, incogitance, frailty, but, after deliberation, an advised commission of it. This is here affirmed to be ποιεῖν ἀνομίαν, the committing transgression, where ἀνομία signifies opposition, or contrariety, to Christ's law. Justinian renders the word iniquitatem (Institut. 4. de injur. Iniquitas & injustitia, quam Græci ἀνομίαν καὶ ἀδικίαν vocant) and iniquitas is this opposition or irregularity to the will of God, viz. that will of his revealed to us by Christ, to which we now professe obedience. It is here made matter of some question, whether these phrases, ἁμαρτάνειν, and ποιεῖν ἁμαρτίαν, to sin, and to commit sin, are to be interpreted onely of an habit of such deliberate sin, or belong to one single act of it. But the resolution is easie, that though he that lives impenitently in any habit of known sin, be most eminently said to sin and commit sin, yet he that is guilty of any one deliberate act is here primarily meant by these phrases. This appears by the use of the words in some of the places, where it must necessarily denote an act, and not only an habit; as ch. 2. 1. These things I write unto you, ἵνα μὴ ἁμάρτητε that ye may not sin, where it would be unreasonable to think that the holy Apostle designed his Epistle to keep them from habits only, and not also from each act of deliberate sin. This is again evident in this place: for not onely he that lives habitually in sin, but he that commits any one deliberate act of it, ἀνομίαν ποιεῖ committeth a transgression of the Law, oppôseth and doth contrary to the Law of Christ, which severely forbiddeth such single commissions, and not onely the habits of them: and so ver. 5. when it is said that Christ appeared that he might take away our sins, and that there is no sin in him, 'tis evident that he came to take away our acts as well as our habits, and that there was no act as well as no habit of sin in him: and so in all that follows, v. 6, 8, 9, &c. one act of sin is contrary to abiding in Christ, that is, to adhering to him, to seeing and knowing, that is, to obeying him; one act is of, or from, the devil, one act as contrary to that seed, that purity, that principle of filiation, that is in him that is born of God, and not only an habit of it.

b. Γεγεννημένος ἐκ Θεοῦ

V. 9. Born of God] What γεγεννημένος ἐκ Θεοῦ, being born of God, signifies, hath been noted Joh. 1. Note b. to have received some special influence from God, and by the help and power of that, to be raised to a pious life. Agreeably γεγεννημένος ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ, he that hath been born of God, is literally he that hath had such a blessed change wrought in him by the operation of God's Spirit in his heart, as to be translated from the power of darkness into the kingdome of his dear Son, transformed in the spirit of his mind, that is, sincerely changed from all evil to all good, from obedience to the flesh, &c. to an obedience to God. Onely it is here to be noted, that the phrase is not so to be taken, as to denote onely the act of this change, the first impression of this vertue on the patient, the single transient act of regeneration or reformation, and that, as in the Præter-tense, now past, but rather a continued course, a permanent state, so as a regenerate man and a child of God are all one, and signifie him that lives a pious and godly life, and continues to doe so. For so that phrase of being υἱὸς or τέκνον a child or son of any kind of father, signifies a resemblance or similitude of inclinations and actions, as a child of the devil is one that commits (and so continues to doe) Satanical wicked practices, and so sons of Belial are vicious persons; and so our Saviour interprets the phrase, If ye were the children of Abraham, ye would doe the works of Abraham, but you are of your father the devil, that is, you doe those things which are imitations of him, such things as he doth. And so generally in this Epistle, he that is born of God signifies a man truly pious, an obedient servant of God: and such is the subject of this Propositi-on here, when of such an one it is said, he cannot sin.

c. ὁ δύναται

1b. Cannot sin] What is meant by ὁ δύναται cannot here, will best appear by what S. Chrysostome on Rom. 8. saith of the tree in the Gospel, where 'tis said, A corrupt tree cannot bear good fruit, nor a good tree corrupt fruit: he, saith he, that saith a corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit, ὁ κωλύει τὸν ἐκ κακίας εἰς ἀρετὴν μεταβολὴν, forbids not a change from vice to vertue (denies not that to be possible) but affirms, that ἡ ἐν τῇ κακίᾳ διατριβὴ the continuance in wickednesse cannot bring forth good fruit; for, saith he, he said not that an ill tree cannot become good, but that remaining evil it cannot bear good fruit. So when Rom. 8 7. 'tis said that the carnal mind cannot be subject to God, Theophylact interprets it, ἕως ἂν μένῃ τοιοῦτον, it cannot whilest it remains such, οὐχ ὅτι ἀδύνατον ἡ μεταβολὴ, not that the change is impossible; and so again v. 8. when it is said, they cannot please God, ἕως ἂν ὦσι τοιοῦτοι, they cannot whilest they are such. And so sure the affirming here of the child of God, the regenerate pious convert, that he cannot sin, is not the affirming that he cannot cease to be what he is, cannot fall off from the performance of his duty (against which the many warnings and exhortations that are given to pious men, ch. 2. 1. 1 Cor. 10, 12. Heb. 3. 12. 2 Pet. 3. 17. are evidences of the possibility of it) but that remaining thus, a pious follower, imitator, and so child of God, that in his actions resembles him, he cannot yield deliberately to any kind of sin. To which purpose saith Tertullian De pudicitia, Hæc non admittet omnino qui natus è Deo fuerit, non futurus Dei filius si admiserit, He that is born of God will not at all admit such sins as these, he shall not be the child of God if he do admit or commit them. And Lactantius, Virtus sine ulla intermissione perpetua est, nec discedere ab ea potest qui semel eam cepit: Nam si habeat intervallum, si quando eâ carere possumus, redeunt protinus peccata, quæ virtutem semper impugnant, Vertue is that which is perpetual without any intermission: He that hath once undertaken it, cannot depart from it. For if it have any interval (of sin) if we can want, or be without it, sins presently return, which alwaies impugne vertue. And so S. Hierome on Mat. 7. 18. Bona arbor non fert malos fructus quamdiu in bonitatis studio perseverat, A good tree bears not ill fruit as long as it perseveres in the study or love of goodnesse. And so S. Augustine Serm. 29. de verb. Apost. Talia non facit bonæ fidei & spei Christianus, A Christian of a good faith and hope doth not such things as these, that is, Homicide, Adultery, &c. In the same sense as * Menander saith of the just man, a just disposition knows not how to be unjust. In this sense is ὁ δύναται, he cannot, used by Ignatius, οἱ σαρκικοὶ τὰ πνευματικὰ πρᾶξαι οὐ δύνανται, carnal men cannot doe spiritual things. It will not farther be pertinent to enquire, whether the sinning here (so unreconcileable with a regenerate state) be an act only of wilfull sin, or an habit, because those Apostate Gnosticks, to whom this place is opposed, and all that went over to them, were guilty of more then single acts, even of the foulest habits of impurity and persecuting the Christians, v. 10.

* In Stobæo p. 100.

Δίκαιον ἀδικιῶν οὐκ ὀρθῶς λέγεις,

d. Εἶναι ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ

V. 10. Is not of God] Εἶναι ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ, to be of God, here (and chap. 4. 6. and 5. 19. and 3 Joh. 11.) is a phrase to signifie one that lives as God requires and approves of, a child of God in the beginning of the verse, born of God, v. 9. a sincere acceptable servant of his, that imitates the good, 3 John 11. or in brief, a good Christian; and that not only upon this ground, because all Christian vertue is of God, but especially because it is agreeable to his will, an imitation of that which is most eminently and originally in him. And so on the contrary, Ungodly living is expressed by the phrase, to be of the devil, Joh. 8. 44. explained by what follows, θέλετε ποιεῖν τὰς ἐπιθυμίας αὐτοῦ, doing, or delighting to doe his desires, and his works, v. 41. and so to be of the world. To this purpose many the like phrases there be observable in Scripture, which are set to signifie this; as being in God, 1 Joh. 2. 5. & 5. 20. seeing God, 3 Joh. 11. that is, having considered and observed God in his actions, in order to imitating of them; for so to imitate is expressed, Joh. 8. 38. by doing what they have seen with their father: so again having known God or Christ, 1 Joh. 2. 3, 13. that is, so as to imitate or transcribe what we see in him; an evidence of which is, as it follows there, the keeping his commandements, and c. 4. 6. he that knows God, and he that is of God, are set as directly the same; and so v. 7, 8. and very often in this Writer. So seeing, and knowing him, together, 1 John 3. 6. and especially Joh. 5. 37. to hear his voice, and see his appearance, for that is there all one with having his word abiding in them. So to be the sons of God, Joh. 11. 52. the sons of God that are scattered abroad, that is, all that are or shall be pious faithfull servants of his all the world over, that are qualified aright for the receiving of Christ when he preacheth to them, (such as are called the children of the kingdome, Mat. 13. 38.) and so often in these Epistles, 1 Joh. 3. 2, 10. and to be born of God, 1 Joh. 3. 9. and 5. 4, 18. (contrary to which are generation of vipers, and children of darknesse, or Belial, of the devil, of the wicked one, in an extreme degree, and born of blood, &c. Joh. 1 13. in a more moderate degree) signifying not any act of spiritual birth, but a state of pious life, of resemblance unto God. So those that are given to Christ by God, the pious vertuous-minded men, being the only persons that are by the promises and grace of the Gospel really attracted and brought to receive Christ, Joh. 6. 37. those whom the Father hath drawn, v. 44. whom the promises have effectually wrought on, which work only on pious men; so those that are taught of God, or are docile, teachable by him. So they whose heart God hath opened, Act. 16. 14. that is, whom God hath affected with the love of vertue or Christianity. So to abide, or dwell, in God, 1 Joh. 3. 6. and in the love of Christ, Joh. 15. 9. and God in him, 1 Joh. 3. 24. & 4. 15. to walk in light, c. 1. 7. to abide in light, c. 2. 10. to walk as he walks, c. 2. 6. to walk worthy of the Gospel, Phil. 1. 27. of our vocation, Ephes. 4. 1. to passe our sojourning in fear, 1 Pet. 1. 17. to walk in good works, Eph. 2. 10. to have his word abiding in us, 1 Joh. 2. 24.

V. 19. Assure our hearts] What πείθειν καρδίας, to perswade hearts, doth fully import, will appear, first, by the use of the phrase πείσομεν αὐτὸν Mat. 28. 14. we will pacifie him, and so in proportion it signifies to render our hearts peaceable and tame; secondly, by two other phrases that follow here, first, Παῤῥησίαν ἔχειν πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν, v. 21. having confidence toward God, to have boldnesse, to dare appear before God, to be such as dare on good grounds have confidence to pray to him; secondly, Λαμβάνειν ἃ αἰτοῦμεν, v. 22. to have our prayers heard by God, which he that can challenge, and so προσεγγίζειν τῷ Θεῷ draw near unto God in confidence in prayer, is said τελειοῦν καὶ συνειδήσιν Heb. 9. 9. to be perfected, or consecrated, according to conscience, viz. by having the conscience purg'd, to be made such priests as may with boldnesse draw nigh to God, which is the prerogative of every true Christian that doth that which is pleasing in God's sight, v. 22. the worshipper of God which doth his will, Joh. 9. 31.

CHAP. IV.

Paraphrase.

1. BEloved, believe not every spirit, but trie the spirits whether they be of God: because many false prophets * are gone out into the world.]

1. My brethren, let me admonish you not to heed or follow every teacher that pretends to be inspired (see note on Luk. 9. d.) but to make trial of all that shall so pretend, by the rules afforded you both by Moses and Christ; and so much the rather, because as it hath been foretold by Christ, Mat. 24. that at this point of time many false teachers should come into the Church, so now we find by experience there are many.

2. Hereby know ye the Spirit of God; every spirit that confesseth † that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God.]

2. By this you may know the teacher to be truly divine, if he confesse Christ thus born and crucified to be the Messias (see v. 15.) For no false prophet will ever teach that, it being not usefull to the interest of the false pretenders, or those that consider their own advantages, to follow a crucified Saviour to all kind of purity and self-denial, and taking up the crosse after him, suffering persecutions, as now all that follow Christ are sure to doe.

3. And every spirit that confesseth not * that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not of God: and this is † that spirit of Antichrist, whereof you have heard that * it should come, † and even now already is it in the world.]

3. And the Gnosticks that in time of persecution do renounce and forsake Christ, by that appear to be not from God: and these are the Antichristian seducers, of whom Christ foretold Mat. 24. (see note on 1 Joh. 2. b.) that before the fatal day that expected the Jews, they were to come into the world, and now indeed they are come, Simon and his Gnosticks, and are already every where visible among us.

* Jesus Christ which is come † that of Antichrist τὸ τοῦ Ἀντιχ. * he cometh ἐρχεται † and now he is already νῦν ἤδη ἐστὶν

4. Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them; because greater is he that is in you, then he that is in the world.]

4. You, my tender Christians, have your doctrine from God, and have held out against the machinations and persuasions of those false teachers; for the true Christ, which is by his Spirit and his doctrines in you, is greater and more powerfull then the false teachers and false Christs which are now abroad in the world, v. 3.

5. They are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them.]

5. They come not by any commission from God, but from the incitation of their own worldly hearts, to save themselves from persecutions; they are worldly-minded, their affections are placed on worldly pleasures, &c. and accordingly their doctrine is a doctrine of licentiousnesse, of secular interests, and freedome from persecutions, and worldly-minded men follow them.

6. We are of God: he that knoweth God, heareth us; he that is not of God, heareth not us. Hereby know we the Spirit of truth, and the spirit of error.]

6. Our doctrine is the true pure doctrine of Christ, hath nothing of worldly greatnesse or secular interests in it, but only of piety and purity, self-denial, contempt of the world; and every pious person hearkeneth to us: and this is a way of discerning true from false prophets; one is all for purity and confession of Christ even in persecutions, the other for worldly advantages and self-preservation.

7. Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God, and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.]

7. Again, another evidence of our being from God is charity to our fellow-Christians, for that is most strictly commanded, and exemplified to us from God, and no practice renders us so like to Gods example, and so concordant to his precepts, makes us such Gnosticks truly so called, as the sincere exercises of this duty; and therefore that is my next admonition, to be sure ye divide not, hate not, persecute not your brethren.

8. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love.]

8. He that is not possessed and throughly acquainted with that grace of Love, by that appears to be utterly unacquainted with God, to have nothing of God in him, who is made up of love and kindnesse to mankind.

* among us ἐν ἡμῖν † that ὅτι

9. In this was manifested the love of God * toward us † because that God sent his only-begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him.]

9. And hath manifested that in a most eminent manner to us, in having sent his only Son into the world to reduce us sinners to an holy and pious life.

10. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.]

10. And in this appears the height of Gods love to us, not that we were earliest in our love to him, but that he began to us, and first sent his own Son to propitiate, or appease his wrath against us for our sins, to deliver us from the punishment of them.

11. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.]

11. This love of God to us must be answered with our imitating it toward our brethren, doing those acts of charity toward them which God is not capable to receive from us.

12. No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us.]

12. For God is not in our reach to be seen or conversed with by us: whereas kindnesse or love is most what among such. The trial therefore of our love, whether we have any of that divine grace in us or no, and so whether God abide in us, that is, whether those eminent vertues (which are so remarkable in God, as that they are said to be God himself, such as charity, v. 8, 16.) are abiding in us, and whether the love which is in him toward men be copied out, and imitated, and so perfected by us (as the sufferings of Christ are said to be perfected in us, when we after his example suffer also) is this, by examining our selves if we are kind and loving to those that are among us, our fellow men and Christians, whom we do see, and who are capable of kindnesse, and the effects of love from us.

13. Hereby know we that we * dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit.]

13. This is an evidence indeed by which we know that we adhere to God, are disciples indeed, and as such acknowledged by him, (see ch. 3. 24.) because that temper and affection of love and charity, so illustriously observable in Christ, is observable in some measure in us also.

14. And we have seen and do testifie, that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.]

14. And as an evidence of that, how great soever our hazard be from the enemies of the Gospel, yet we continue constantly to preach Christ, and being eye-witnesses of those miracles, &c. which evidence him to be what he pretended, we accordingly preach and testifie that Christ is the very Messias sent by God.

† abideth μένει

15. Whosoever shall confesse that Jesus is the Son of God, God † dwelleth in him, and he in God.]

15. He that shall venture to be a Martyr for Christ, to confesse him v. 2. when dangers attend that confession (see note on Rev. 2. b.) as God is faithfull to him, so shall he truly be said to be faithfull to God: see Joh. 14. c.

16. And we have known and believed the love that God hath * to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him.]

16. 'Tis acknowledged by all, that God hath given us a most eminent copie and pattern of love, by us to be transcribed toward him, when he calls us to it. God is made up of love, and in that degree that we partake of that grace, we are members of God, not broken off from him, but continuing in conjunction with him, and God abideth in us, is allowed a place in us, is not rejected or caſt out by us (ſee Joh. 14. c.) as he is by theſe that do not through love hold faſt to him, do not adhere to, obey and imitate him in that great duty of charity.

a. 17. In this the perfection of that love which is to be found in a Chriſtian, (ſee note on ch. 1. b.) conſiſts, that in a time of danger, when we are brought before judges, and may probably loſe our lives for confeſſing of Chriſt, then we retain courage and cheerfulneſſe, and confeſſe him willingly, that we behave our ſelves in this world as Chriſt did when he was here, that is, lay down our lives in teſtification of the truth.

17. † Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have [a] boldneſſe in the day of judgment: becauſe as he is, ſo are we in this world.]

† In this the love with us is perfected, that we have it πίστιν τῆς τελειώσεως ἡμῶν ἵνα

a hath not been perfected ἐτελειώθη

18. Now ſuch love as this which was in Chriſt, hath no fear in it: Chriſt ventured and underwent the utmoſt, even death it ſelf, for us, did not through fear draw back from any thing which love to man or conſtancy to the truth of God could prompt him to: and ſo indeed perfect love baniſheth all fear of danger, even of death it ſelf, ſuffers it not to interpoſe or keep him from expreſſing acts of love, makes the lover extreamly valiant. For fear, in whomſoever it is, hath pain and anxiety in it, permits him not to doe any thing that may bring danger with it, and ſo is quite contrary to perfection of love toward God, makes one man deny Chriſt, another draw back for fear of danger of confeſſing him; or elſe perhaps, fear brings puniſhment eternal of body and ſoul, Mat. 10. 28. and never permits any in whom it is to arrive to perfection, or reward of love: ſee note on Rev. 2. b.

18. There is no fear in love, but perfect love caſteth out fear: becauſe fear hath torment: he that feareth * is not made perfect in love.]

19. And certainly this love and degree thereof, and hazard run by it, though it be death it ſelf, is but a meer duty of gratitude in us, (ſee v. 11.) becauſe Chriſt hath begun to us, and when we were his enemies, ſinners that had never deſerved any thing but hatred and vengeance from him, laid down willingly his own life for us.

19. † We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us.]

† or, Let us love him Ἡμεῖς ἀγαπῶμεν αὐτὸν

20. And it is not enough to profeſſe this our love to Chriſt by appearing to be ready to die for him, or run hazards for the teſtifying the truth of our faith; for there may be a great deal of hypocriſie in this profeſſing of our love to God, 1 Cor. 13. 3. and ſo there is certainly, if he that ſo profeſſeth, doth not love, but maligne and perſecute Chriſtians (it being impoſſible that any man ſhould truly love God, and not doe what God bids him, that is, love his brother alſo:) for the beſt way to trie our love, whether it be ſincere or no, is to obſerve how it expreſſes it ſelf on occaſion, when we meet with objects of charity; for if then we do not exerciſe and teſtifie our love, ſure we have not that vertue in us. Conſequently, if to men, with whom we daily converſe, and meet with ſuch opportunities, we do not expreſſe any love, what reaſon is there to imagine we ſincerely love God, when of our love to him, and the ſincerity of it, we were never able to make this trial, becauſe we never ſaw him, nor had opportunities offered us of ſhewing any real acts of love to him? And beſide, ſomewhat may be judged by the difficulty of the thing: for he that doth not the eaſier, will hardly be ſuppoſed to doe the more difficult. Now 'tis hard to love one that I never ſaw; ſight and converſation is one motive of love, and we ſee our brethren daily, but never ſaw God at any time: and therefore where the command, which is as punctual to the love of our brethren, as to the love of God, v. 21. is not able to prevail upon us for this, and where, beſide the command, which is equal on both ſides, there is one advantage to allure our love to our brethren, which there is not to invite or oblige us to the love of God, if that man manifeſtly fail in the one, which is ſo much more commended to him by that one circumſtance, how can it be imagined that he doth, or will perform the other?

20. If a man ſay, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a lyar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath ſeen, how can he love God whom he hath not ſeen?]

21. It being evident that by his command we are as really obliged to love our fellow-Chriſtians, as to love himſelf.

21. And this commandement have we from him, that he who loveth God, love his brother alſo.]

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. Παῤῥησία

V. 17. Boldneſſe in the day—] Παῤῥησία is bold and publick ſpeaking, confeſſion of Chriſt before men, eſpecially when we have diſcouragements from doing ſo, ἄδεια fearleſneſſe, ſaith Heſychius. So παῤῥησίᾳ περιπατεῖν, Joh. 11. 54. is to walk publickly and fearleſly, which Chriſt did not, becauſe of their conſultation to kill him, v. 53. So in many other places, particularly Heb. 10. 35. where παῤῥησία ὑμῶν is their conſtant confeſſion of Chriſt, to which all that chapter had exhorted them, (and that in deſpight of perſecutions) explained by ὑπομονή, v. 36. patience or conſtancy in ſuffering, and oppoſed to ὑποστολὴ cowardly withdrawing, v. 38, 39. (ſee Note on Joh. 7. a.) And ſo here being joined with ἐν ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως in the day of judgment, not the final judgment of God, but the day or time when we ſhall for the name of Chriſt be brought before any earthly tribunal, to be ſentenced even to death it ſelf. And ſo it is ſaid of Ignatius, in the ſtory of his Martyrdome, that he conceived that he could never come ad dilectionem Dei in plenum, to the full love of God, neque perfectum ordinem doctrinæ obtinere, nor to the perfection of Chriſtian doctrine, niſi per Martyrii factam confeſſionem Domino appropinquaret, unleſſe he came neer unto God by martyrdome. And ſo the meaning will be plain, that the ἀγάπη μεθ' ἡμῶν, the love or charity toward God which is to be in, or among us Chriſtians, ἐν τούτῳ τετελείωται, is perfected in this, ἵνα παῤῥησίαν ἔχωμεν, that we have this conſtancy in confeſſing him in the time of the greateſt danger. And this yet farther appears, firſt, by the explication that follows, that as he is, ſo we are in this world, that is, that as Chriſt laid down his life in confeſſion of the truth, ſo we doe the ſame when occaſion ſerves: and ſecondly, by the confirmation which follows, v. 18. There is no fear in love, fear being indeed the contrary to this boldneſſe and conſtancy, wherein the perfection of our love conſiſts. Thus hath Tertullian interpreted the place in his Scorpiacum or Antidote againſt the Gnoſticks, Johannes negat timorem eſſe in dilectione, John denies fear to be in love. Quem timorem intelligi præſtat, niſi negationis authorem? What fear muſt we here underſtand, but that which is the author of denying? Quam dilectionem perfectam, niſi fugatricem timoris, & animatricem confeſſionis? What perfect love, but that which puts fear to flight, and animates men to confeſſe Chriſt? And ſo that which follows, For fear hath puniſhment, he thus interprets, Quam pœnam timore puniat (ſure it ſhould be, quâ pœnâ timorem puniat) niſi quam negator relaturus eſt, cùm corpore & animâ occidendus in Gehennam? What is the puniſhment which fear hath, or, with which he puniſhes fear, but that which he that denies Chriſt ſhall receive, when he is killed body and ſoul and caſt into hell, Mat. 10. 28. or which, ſaith he, is threatned to the cowardly, among (yea before) the other reprobates, in the lake of fire, Rev. 21. 8? See Tertull. cont. Gnoſt. cap. 12. and De fuga in Perſecut. cap. 9. In theſe laſt words, ὁ φόβος κόλασιν ἔχει, fear hath puniſhment, the poſthumous Notes of the learned H. Grotius have attempted an emendation, and read κόλασιν for κόλασιν, rendring κόλασιν out of the Gloſſaries, mutilation, imperfection, Κολόω, ἀτελῆ ποιῶ. For this interpretation of that unuſual word Heſychius may be conſulted, Κυλόει, ſaith he, (it ſhould be certainly Κολόει) κωλύει, ἐμποδίζει, κολοβοῖ, and Κολόωλα, ἐλαττῶλα, and Κολῶδς, κολοβῶδς, and Κολόσμαλα, κλάσμαλα. To this the Context would very well agree, the next words being, he that fears is not made perfect in love; where

Ἐν Ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως

Ἀγάπη μεθ' ἡμῶν

where yet the same Annotations would turn ὁ δὲ φοβούμενος, he that fears, into ὁ δὲ κολούμενος, he that is mutilated. But to impose so remote an emendation without any authority of any Copie to avow it, is too adventurous an attempt: or, if it were not so, perhaps the substituting of κώλυσιν, impediment, hinderance, might be a more tolerable emendation, thus, for fear hath hinderance, it stops & encumbers love from doing such perfect acts as it ought, or would otherwise be apt to doe; he that feareth is by this encumbrance kept back, is not made perfect in love. But as these or the like emendations ought never to be admitted without great necessity, so there appears no pretence of that in this place. For, first, it may thus be rendred, Fear hath pain or torment, a kind of rack in it, which alwaies keeps men in awe, as the Apostle saith, Heb. 2. 15. that through fear of death some are all their lifetime subject to bondage or slavery, never dare doe any thing of vertue, or duty, or heroick action, (and so 2 Tim. 1. 7. the spirit of fear or cowardise is set opposite to power and love) and consequently never come to any perfection of love to God, or constancy of confession, to suffer any thing for his sake, as love doth, 1 Cor. 13. 7. and accordingly it follows, he that feareth is not made perfect in love. Or else secondly, it may be set after Tertullians way, the constant love of God is a most rewardable perfection, whereas fear of worldly dangers will be sure to bring destruction of body and soul along with it, and therefore must be cast out from having any thing to interpose when the perfecting, or, as τελειώσις signifies, the crowning or rewarding of love, is spoken of. Fearfulnesse is so unreconcileable with perfect love, that it is the most detestable forsaking of God: the coward is all one with the Apostate. Either of these senses will accord very well with the Context, and with the literal importance of the words, but especially the former of them. τελειώσις

CHAP. V.

Paraphrase.

1. WHosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God: and every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him.]

1. Whereas the Gnosticks professe that they are the children of God, born of him, and also that they truly love God, as children a father; by these two marks you may judge of the truth of these pretensions. For the first, every one that believeth and professeth Christ to be the Messias (and accordingly cleaves fast to that profession, whatsoever the temptations be to the contrary,) and expresseth the power of that faith by his love, by depending on his promises, and obeying his commands, and patient suffering of any persecution that befals him, is a regenerate childe of God, and none else (see note on c. 3. b.) And for the second, 'tis as certain, that unlesse a man love the brethren, he shall never be deemed to love God.

2. By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments.]

2. And not only our loving our brethren is an evidence of our loving God, without which we have no reason to think we do love him; but such an union and conjunction there is between these two, that if we would know whether we love our brethren sincerely or no, we cannot better judge then by knowing or examining whether we love God, for otherwise we may doe many acts of love to our brethren, which may flow from other principles, good nature, gallantry, vain glory, &c. and not from charity, whereas this love of God, which I now speak of, must be such as expresses it self by keeping God's commandments.

3. For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not * grievous.]

* heavy βαρεῖαι

3. Keeping his commandments I adde, because this is to love God indeed: and of these let me tell you, they are not so heavy and so unsupportable as is now pretended by many, who fall off from Christ, because obedience to him is now like to cost them so dear; but it is an easie, gainfull, gratious yoke, Mat. 11. 30.

4. For whatsoever is born of God, overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world even our faith.]

4. For every loving obedient childe of God (see note on chap. 3. b.) whose affections are taken off from the world, and set upon God, chap. 2. 5, 7. doth with ease overcome the world, the terrors and other the temptations thereof, hath farre stronger incitations to piety then the world can offer him to the contrary; and that which so much out-weighs those carnal allectives or terrors, is that which the faith of Christ possesses us of, and he that is carried captive to the world, cannot be counted a cordial believer. Faith is not only the means of overcoming, but 'tis victory it self.

5. Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?]

5. And what faith is this so victorious? why, the cordial believing that Jesus is the Messias, which containeth the believing all his promises, threats and precepts; without which it is not imaginable that any man should resist the temptations of the devil, the delights and terrors of it, and with which it is easie to doe it.

6. This is he that [a] came by water and blood, † even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood: and it is the Spirit that beareth witnesse, because the Spirit is truth.]

† or, and the spirit Jesus, for the Kings MS. reads ἐστὶν ὁ Χριστὸς, and so again in the next part of the verse.

6. For of this Christ hath given us an embleme and example in himself, and so an obligation to it; his whole course here upon the earth was compounded of innocence and purity of life, and also of sufferings, even of a shamefull death: and these two things in him are emblematically expressed by the water and blood that came, not one or the other alone, but both together, out of his side at his crucifixion, (see John 19. e.) and one (if not both) of these, his sinlesnesse, and indeed his being the Messias, ver. 5. is also testified by the holy Ghost in many particulars (see note a.) and this testimony, being the testimony of the Spirit of God, is authentick, and fit to be believed, for it is his title to be the Spirit of truth. a.

7. For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghost; and these three are one.]

7. For as there being in heaven three able to testifie, and those three agreeing in one divine nature, and so being all infallible in their testimonies, they have all testified that Christ, as he was here on earth, was the Messias; God the Father, by the voice from heaven, Mat. 3. 17. John 12. 28. God the Son, in saying to Saul, Why persecutest thou me? and striking him down in the place for doing so; God the holy Ghost, in that descending on him as a dove, and after on the disciples:

8. And there are three that bear witnesse in earth, the Spirit, and the Water, and the Blood; and these three agree in one.]

8. So on the earth there are three witnesses too; first, the holy Ghost, first, on Christ, and secondly, on and in the Apostles, who saw and witnessed that the Father sent Christ, ch. 4. 13, 14. secondly, the Water, and thirdly, the Blood, that came both out of his side, and by doing so, first, prove the reality of his humane nature against those that say he was only in appearance, not in flesh, or reality, and secondly, were an embleme of his innocence and sufferings; and so these three agree in this testimony, that Jesus is the Son of God, ver. 5. made up of all purity and patience, &c.

9. If

9. For the believing any thing, it is ordinarily thought ſufficient to have the teſtimony of two or three creditable men, and then ſure Gods teſtimony from heaven is much more worthy of belief. And this teſtimony now produced for the truth of our belief in Chriſt, is evidently the teſtimony of God.

9. If we receive the witneſſe of men, the witneſſe of God is greater: for this is the witneſſe of God, which he hath teſtified of his Son.]

10. He therefore that thus believeth in Chriſt, and in deſpight of the Gnoſticks Apoſtaſie acknowledgeth the Son of God to have come truly in the fleſh, hath no reaſon to fear, having Gods teſtimony to ſecure him. And he that after all this, when God hath ſo teſtified in plain words, This is my beloved Son, &c. doth ſtill refuſe to believe it, he makes God a lyar, in not believing his teſtimony of Chriſt.

10. He that believeth on the Son of God, hath the * witneſſe in himſelf: he that believeth not God, hath made him a lyar, becauſe he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son.]

* or witneſs of God, for the Kings MS. reads μαρτυρίαν τῦ Θεῦ

11. And the ſum of this teſtimony of Gods concerning Chriſt is, that the way that Chriſt hath put us in is the true way to eternal bliſſe, and that this is to be had by following the example and precepts of Chriſt, whom therefore in that voice from heaven he commanded all men to hear.

11. And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life: and this life is in his Son.]

12. He that doth ſo, that thus inſiſts on Chriſt's doctrine and pattern ſet before him, is as ſure of attaining this bliſſe, as if he were already poſſeſs'd of it; and he that doth not, hath nothing to doe with it.

12. He that hath the Son, hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life.]

13. This I have ſaid to all you that are true believers, to give you aſſurance that ſalvation, and all that on Gods part belongs to it, is made over to you in Chriſt, that you may be incouraged to continue in the faith, and wholly depend on Chriſt for all that belongs to you with all the confidence imaginable, and ſo never fall off in time of worldly preſſures.

13. Theſe things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.]

b. 14. And of this confidence this is one ſpeciall branch, that we come boldly and freely (ſee Joh. 7. a.) to make our requeſt to him, depending on that promiſe which God in Chriſt hath made to us, viz. that he will hear all the faithfull requeſts of his ſervants: but that promiſe with theſe limitations; firſt, that what they aske be according to Gods will, not only not abhorrent from it, but truly agreeable to it; and ſecondly, according to his wiſdome, that which at that time to that perſon he judgeth fit to be granted him, and neither contrary to any thing he hath decreed, or ſuch that by any accident God ſees either hurtfull, or not uſefull, or leſſe profitable to him; thirdly, that he aske in faith, reſolved to ſtick faſt to God, whatſoever comes, to uſe no means of obtaining his deſires but ſuch as are perfectly acceptable to him: ſee Jam. 1. 6.

14. And this is the confidence that we have † in him, that if we [b] aske any thing according to his will, he heareth us.]

15. And if this of Gods hearing our prayers be univerſally true of all whatſoever that are thus qualified, then in proportion it muſt be true of every particular petition, which we have or ſhall aske of him; 'tis certain that he heareth, and granteth it inſtantly, and will actually, in his time, and in that manner and way that he ſees beſt for us (though not inſtantly, or in the kind which we aske) moſt infallibly beſtow it on us.

15. And if we know that he hears us, whatſoever we aske, we know that we have the petitions that we deſired of him.]

c. 16. One inſtance of this I ſhall mention to you, If any man ſee his fellow-Chriſtian fall into any deliberate ſin, yet ſo as not to refuſe admonition or contemne advice to reform, that is, if he that thus ſins do not remain incorrigible under the cenſures of the Church, then in that caſe it is the duty of the Church, and of each particular Chriſtian, to pray to God for him, that he will pardon his ſin, and raiſe him ſpeedily by his grace to that ſtate from whence he is fallen, and for any ſuch offence, not obſtinately continued in, God will thus hear the prayers of the Church for him. But this not ſo, that God will upon any interceſſion pardon him before his returning and repenting, but that the Church may admit ſuch an one to repentance, and upon his approving his ſincerity of repentance, receive him by impoſition of hands, and bleſſing, and abſolution. But in caſe he goe on contumaciouſly and incorrigibly, there is then no mercy under the Goſpel for ſuch, nor promiſe that the prayers of the Church ſhall be available for ſuch.

16. If any man ſee his brother ſin a ſin which is not unto death, he ſhall aske, and he ſhall give him life for them that ſin not unto death. There is a [c] ſin unto death: * I do not ſay that he ſhall pray for it.]

* of that I ſay not that he ſhould pray περὶ ἐκείνης λέγω ἵνα ἐρωτήσῃ

17. 'Tis true indeed, all deliberate ſin is ſuch as is not reconcileable with the fear and love of God, and conſequently mortifereus without repentance: yet ſome difference there may be in this, and ſome that have ſinned may not yet be ſo contumacious, ſo deſperately incorrigible as others, and of thoſe I now ſpeak.

17. All unrighteouſneſſe is ſin: and there is a ſin not unto death.]

18. As for theſe deliberate ſinnes, which are not look'd on as ſins unto death, mortiferous in ſo high a degree, we know that a pious perſon (ſee note on c. 3. d.) will not be guilty of any of them, he uſeth all care and diligence to keep himſelf pure, that the devil or tempter get no hold on him.

18. We know that whoſoever is born of God, ſinneth not; but he that is begotten of God, keepeth himſelf, and that wicked one toucheth him not.]

19. And we know that we Chriſtians have by our profeſſion undertaken pure and pious lives, are elevated to God, whereas the wicked riotous multitude of Gnoſticks, &c. are ſet upon nothing elſe but villany, Exod. 32. 22.

19. And we know that we are of God, and † the whole world lieth in wickedneſſe.]

† the world is wholly ſet on evil, ὁλόκληρος ἐν τῷ πονηρῷ κεῖται

20. But againſt the doctrines and infuſions of theſe we are armed ſufficiently by Chriſt, who, we are ſure, is come in the fleſh, and came on purpoſe to inſtruct us in the knowledge and obedience to the commands of the true God; ſo that hereby we have all ſecurity that we cannot miſtake, it being God, who cannot lye, whom we adhere to, and his Son Jeſus Chriſt, of whom he hath given his teſtimony. And thus we may confidently reſolve that the Chriſtian Religion is the true.

20. And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an underſtanding, that we may know * him that is true: and we are in him that is true, † even in his Son Jeſus Chriſt. This is the true God, and eternal life.]

d. 21. Farewell, my tender Chriſtians, and be ſure you keep your ſelves from offering ſacrifices to the falſe idol Gods (which the Gnoſticks would doe in caſe of perſecution) and from thoſe mixtures of heatheniſme and uncleanneſſes, practiſed in their heathen worſhips by them, and brought in among Chriſtians by that licentious ſect, and even from images themſelves, which the Gnoſticks (who pretended to have forſaken the idolatries of the heathens, and ſo to have become Chriſtians) did again fall into, worſhipping the images and pictures of Simon Magus and Helena, and offering ſacrifices unto them. Amen.

21. Little children, keep your ſelves from idols. Amen.

a. ἐλθὼν δι' ὕδατος καὶ αἵματος

V. 6. Came by water and blood] What ὁ ἐλθὼν δι' ὕδατος καὶ αἵματος, he that came by water and blood, here signifies, will appear by considering the Context, and the relation of these to the former words. There the belief that Jesus is the Son of God, is the means of victory over the temptations of the world, the baits then offered by the Gnosticks, carnal pleasures on one side, and immunitie from persecutions on the other. And to that this belief is a very proper instrument. For considering wherein Christ's sonship was exercised here on earth, his innocence and his sufferings, and that if we will behave our selves as sons of God, we must imitate him, and that our faith in him consists in thus transcribing these his filial qualifications, the conclusion hence follows, that he that is such a child of God, v. 4. that is, that believes that Jesus is the Son of God, v. 5. doth, or will, overcome the world. This then being the force of the Apostles arguing, it must follow that these words, οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἐλθὼν δι' ὕδατος καὶ αἵματος, this is he that came by water and blood, must be the description of Christ, as that sonship of his is expres'd for our imitation in this matter, that is, as he approv'd his innocence, faultlesness to God on one side, and his patience, and (in spight of temptations, even of death it self) perseverance on the other side. And this is here figuratively expres'd, and the figure fetched from an eminent passage in the story of Christ, particularly considered and related by S. John, and that with a special weight laid on it, both for the truth and the considerableness of it, viz. the water and blood that at his crucifixion came out of his side at the piercing of it, the water being a most proper embleme of his innocence, and the blood of his patience and constancy; and ἐλθὼν διὰ then the ἐλθὼν διὰ, his having come by these two, is no more then the having had these two emblemes, and the things signified by them, most eminently observable in the discharge of his office here on earth. For we know that being sent, or coming, are the words that refer to discharge of office. Christ is said to be sent by God, and, which is all one, to come, and is proverbially styled ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he that cometh, and he that cometh into the world, that is, the great Prophet sent by God for the discharge of this office, which as Son of God, Mat. 3. 17. he was ordained to, and for which he came into the world, and which he did with perfect singleness, and resisting unto blood, suffering death in the cause: and those two were expres'd by that joint embleme at his death, the water and blood, which John saw flow from him. In this matter also it is, that the Spirit is also joined as a testifier (that is the mea- ὅτι μαρτυρεῖν ning of ὅτι μαρτυρεῖν, is testifying) viz. of the innocence of Christ (which being granted, the constancy and sufferings were sufficiently known and proved by that αἱματοδατόῤῥυσις, flowing out of water and blood, which was an evidence of the wounding and piercing him to the heart.) For first, the Spirit's descending on him at his baptism, and lighting on him as a dove, was one testimonie of his perfect innocence and acceptableness in the sight of his Father. And secondly, by that Spirit's descent being instated on his Prophetick office, he is also furnished with the gift of miracles, &c. which were sure testimonies that what he preached was Gods message, that he was no sinner, no seducer, no false prophet, seeing, as the Jews confes's'd, he did such miracles. Thirdly, the coming down of that Spirit upon the Apostles, and that according to the promise of Christ, was a testimonie of the truth of what else he said, and by this descent the Spirit became a Paraclete or Advocate of Christ, and so testified and convinced the world, as of their sin in crucifying him, so of his righteousness, in that, after his crucifixion, he was raised and taken up to the Father. All this being thus said in this verse, as it is the proving of what went before, by these three witnesses, so doth it introduce what follows, v. 7, 8. which is but the saying the same again, and joining a parallel with it; for so, I suppose, the following words are to be understood, For there are three that Ὅτι τρεῖς εἰσιν οἱ μαρτυροῦντες bear witnesse in heaven, &c. not that that is a reason of what went immediately before (for it would be hard to shew how thus the seventh verse could be a reason of v. 6. how the trinity of witnesses in heaven should be a proof that the water, and blood, and spirit, do witnesse, v. 6.) but that it is a parallel to illustrate it by, and might in sense be best expres'd thus, As there be three that bear witness in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghost; and these three are one: So also there are three that testifie on the earth, the spirit, and water, and blood; and these three, though they are not one by any kind of unity of nature, as the former three are, yet they agree in one, that is, in one testimony, evidently confirming the same thing which they were brought to testifie, v. 6. Of such like idioms of speech we have formerly noted many, in Note on Mat. 9. d. By this means, as this whole place is competently explained, and freed from all difficulty, so is it vindicated from a first mis-interpretation, which some late writers have fastned on it, interpreting the ἓν εἰσι, v. 7. are one, by εἰς τὸ ἓν εἰσι, they agree in one. But of this, first, there can be no evidence, nor indeed any reason assigned that the phrase should be so suddainly altered, v. 8. if the same thing were meant which was (so immediately before, v. 7.) so differently expressed. If ἓν εἰσι are one had signified no more but agree in one testimonie, v. 7. is it imaginable that of those other three, which had so lately been affirmed to testifie the same, v. 6. this would have been affirmed in other (so much plainer) words, εἰς τὸ ἓν εἰσι, are to one purpose, or agree in one? If there Εἰς ἓν εἰσι had been any reason thus to vary the phrase, it would probably have been by applying the obscurer phrase to those three, of whom it had been before sufficiently affirmed, and the more perspicuous and explicite to the three in heaven, of whom it had not been formerly affirmed, and not so directly contrary as here we finde it is. Secondly, the only reason pretended why ἓν εἰσι, are one, should not inferre really, as literally it doth, the unity of the Trinity, being this, because εἰς ἓν εἰσι, agree in one, is attributed to the three on earth. That argument is of no kinde of force; for the parallel here held between those in heaven and those on earth being only in respect of the testimonies, and of the number of the testifiers, there is no necessity that the Apostle or we should extend it to all other circumstances; or if there were, it would be as reasonable to interpret the latter by the former, the εἰς ἓν εἰσι, they Εἰς ἓν are to one purpose, by the ἓν εἰσι, they are one, (which were absurd, and is not imagined) as the former by the latter. Indeed no reason for either of them: But on the other side, having to the mention of the three witnesses in heaven, annex'd, out of the Christian doctrine, the οὗτοι οἱ τρεῖς ἓν εἰσι, these three are one, it was reasonable, when he came to the other three, of whom that could not be affirmed, to affirm of them as much as the matter would bear, that is, that they are εἰς ἓν, testifiers to the same purpose, though not ἓν of one and the same nature. Lastly, if it were granted that ἓν εἰσι, are one, did note (as εἰς ἓν doth) the according of their testimonies, yet that no way excludes the unity of the testifiers, because both those senses may belong to the place and be true, the unity of the testifiers necessarily inferring the according of their testimonies, though the according of the testimonies inferre not the unity of the testifiers. And then both these being so consequent one to the other, and so pertinent to the Apostle's purpose, (viz. the consent of all witnesses to the truth

he had to prove) and the words being in themselves so clear for the asserting of the unity, there can be no pretence or reason to doubt but this is the importance of them. One thing onely is here needful to be added, that in the King's MS. (and many other Copies) a great part of these two verses is left out, and in stead of them no more read but this, ὅτι τρεῖς εἰσιν οἱ μαρτυροῦντες, τὸ πνεῦμα, καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ, καὶ τὸ αἷμα, For there are three that bear witnesse, the spirit, and the water, and the bloud. But of this it must first be observed, that the ordinary reading hath the authority of many antient, and all, but one, printed Copies: secondly, that the omission may have been casual, by the error of some scribe, who having transcribed in the Copie before him as far as, ὅτι τρεῖς εἰσιν οἱ μαρτυροῦντες, his eye might by error passe to ver. 8. where the same words are again repeated, and so leap over what is in the midst, and immediately subjoin what there immediately follows after, μαρτυροῦντες ἐν τῇ γῇ, τὸ πνεῦμα, καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ, καὶ τὸ αἷμα, καὶ οἱ τρεῖς εἰς τὸ ἕν εἰσιν. Many examples of visible omissions on this occasion are observable in this and most other MSS. as might largely be evidenced; and it is that to which the haste of transcribers, and the necessity of taking off the eye from the Copie, renders them very liable. Which error being once committed in one Copie, he that should come after, and transcribe that, might, upon judgement and reason, omit somewhat more, viz. ἐν τῇ γῇ, and καὶ οἱ τρεῖς εἰς ἕν εἰσι, because those two parts of the verse being set distinctly by way of opposition to two former, ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, and ὅτοι οἱ τρεῖς ἕν εἰσι, the former verse, in which those two were, being once lost, these latter were by congruity to goe after them, and to be left out also. To which purpose it is observable, that (as to these two phrases) there is yet a greater variety in the Copies, the Syriack and Arabick having the καὶ οἱ τρεῖς ἓν εἰσι, or εἰς ἕν εἰσι, and these three are one, or to one purpose, and many Copies having ἐν τῇ γῇ, on the earth, which yet have not the former verse; which shews that the former casual error was first committed before this other, which was taken up on judgement, and that all that followed the one, where there was no place of choice, did not, where there was choice, chuse to follow the other. Thirdly, that it is not imaginable how, if this of the King's MS. and those others were the right reading, this which is now in the ordinary Copies should get in, unlesse it were by grosse fraud and forgery: for to the infirmities of a Scribe (to which omissions may) these additions cannot be imputable. Fourthly, that if the addition be thought imputable to a fraud on one side, the leaving it out may much more reasonably be imputed to a fraud on the other side. For first, supposing it thus far equal, that as the omission was useful to the Arrians and Anti-Trinitarians, so the addition was of advantage to the Catholicks or Orthodox; yet it is presently visible, that the interest of those that were condemned in the Church as hereticks was far greater, and the necessity more pressing on their part, (that I mention not the greater likelihood of hereticks adventuring to make use of such a forgery) to leave out the words and commit this fraud, then that of the Catholicks was to put them in. For if the words be once acknowledged to be the words of Scripture, it gives a conclusion to all the hereticks pretensions. and it necessarily follows, first, that they that deny the Trinity, most diametrically oppose the plain words of Scripture, the ὅτοι οἱ τρεῖς, these three, here; & secondly, that they that deny the Unity, contradict distinctly S. John's affirmation of ἕν εἰσι, these three are one; thirdly, that they that deny the holy Ghost to be God, and yet do not affirm him to be a creature, and consequently conclude him to be nothing but the vertue and efficacy of God, do oppose the plain words here, which distinguish the holy Ghost from the Word, and from the Father, as much, and in the same manner, as the Word, or second hypostasis, from the Father on one side, or from the holy Ghost on the other. And so as long as these words stand in force, it is not possible for the hereticks doctrines to be maintained, (and therefore it is that Socinus and his followers find it necessary to affirm, that these wordsare certainly suppositious.) But for the Catholicks, that maintain the doctrine asserted by the first great general Councils, against the hereticks of the Church, they had no such need of inserting and forging these words: their cause might be otherwise maintained, if these words were expunged, and put out of the Canon, first, by the form of Baptism, Mat. 28. 19. instituted by Christ; which, first, clears the distinction of the Father, the Son, and holy Ghost, as fully as this; and secondly, by making them the object of our faith, supposeth each to be God as well as any, the holy Ghost, and the Son, as well as the Father; which being supposed, the Unity may from thence be collected also, by force of Eph. 4. 5. where parallel to the one Baptisme is added one God and Father of all, noting the one form of Christian Baptisme, In the name of the Father, and the Son, and the holy Ghost, to be the entring of us into the faith and name of the one God. Secondly, by the expresse words of Christ, I and my Father are one, John 10. 30. which affirming the unity of the Father and the Son, leaves no place to doubt of the like unity of the holy Ghost also. Thirdly, by the Apostles swearing by Christ, and (which is all one) calling to witnesse the holy Ghost, Rom. 9. 1. which is an act of Divine worship appropriated to God, by whom onely we are to swear. Fourthly, by the Apostle's praying to our Lord Jesus Christ for his grace, to the holy Ghost for his communication, or liberal effusion of his gifts, as well as to God the Father for his love; which is become the solemn form of Apostolical benediction at the end of the Epistles. Fifthly, (as far as concerns the holy Ghost,) by Act. 5. where deceiving or robbing the holy Ghost, v. 3. is lying to God, v. 4. and 1 Cor. 12. 11. where the Spirit, as a person, is said to work, and to divide to every one according as he will. Lastly, (as far as concerns Christ, who hath been most eminently opposed by all sorts of hereticks from the Gnosticks to the Arians and Photinians) by the frequent Doxologies, or forms of giving glory to Christ, in the very same style as the Jews, (from whom those forms are taken) customarily and solemnly made use of, to acknowledge the God of Israel to be the eternal God, (see Note on Rom. 9. c.) By all which & much more it appears, how impertinent and unnecessary it was for the Orthodox to feign and forge these words, and withal, how easie for their enemies to have disproved them, and detected their forgery, if they had attempted it; and how much more temptation there was on the hereticks side to free themselves from the importunity of this place, by rasing that out of their Bibles, which could not otherwise be perswaded to comply with their pretensions. And accordingly, as in S. Cyprian, (who wrote before Arius was born, and consequently before the time in which there could be any motive to have made this insertion) the words are distinctly found, l. De Unit. Eccles. Dicit dominus, Ego & Pater unum sumus, & iterum de Patre & Filio & Spiritu sancto scriptum est, Et hi tres unum sunt. The Lord saith, I and my Father are one, and again of the Father, Son and holy Ghost it is written, And these three are one. And in like manner Tertullian Contra Praxeam, Qui tres unum sunt, Which three are one. So it is confessed of S. Hierome, that he asserted the truth of our reading from the Greek Copies which he had, and defended it against all, publickly complaining, and contesting it, that in those Copies where it was wanting, it was omitted or rased out by the fraud of hereticks: and so S. Ambrose saith, that the hereticks did erade that place. And this was so farre from yielding matter of recrimination against the Orthodox in those daies, that some learned men, who have expressed their opinion that the addition of these words is suppositicious, have laid that to the Arians charge also, who, say they, from thence desired to conclude, that the Father, Son, and Spirit are one only by consent in this testimony, as the water and blood and spirit are said to be. But with how little reason this is suspected, appears already by what hath before been said, and needs no farther answer or refuting. It were here easie to deduce the doctrine of this verse, as it is most largely set down, from the tradition of the Church through all times. I shall only affix some few testimonies before the time of the first Council of Nice, since which there can be no place of dispute. In the first Age, that of Clemens Romanus is observable, Ζῇ ὁ Θεὸς, καὶ ὁ Κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, God lives, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the holy Ghost. A testimony produced out of him by S. Basil the Great, c. 29 Περὶ ἁγ. πνεύμ. where speaking of the Doxologie, as one especial Apostolical tradition, and reckoning up the antients from whom it was derived, he urgeth this saying of Clemens for the use of it. In the second Century we have Justine Martyr Apol. 2. pro Christianis, who having mentioned the Father of righteousnes, he adds, Ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνόν τε καὶ παρ' αὐτοῦ υἱὸν ἐλθόντα καὶ τὸ προφητικὸν στῖφος καὶ προσκυνοῦμεν, Him and the Son coming from him, and the prophetick Spirit we worship and adore. A tract also there is cited by Leontius Hierosol. and by Euthymius owned as Justin's, Περὶ τῆς ἁγίας καὶ ὁμουσίου τριάδος, Of the holy and coessential Trinity, which, if genuine, will clear the whole matter: for there we have ὁ τῶν ἁπάντων Θεὸς ἐν παρὶ καὶ υἱῷ καὶ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι γνωριζόμενος, the God of all, who is known in Father, Son, and holy Ghost: and of them all, τὰ τῆς αὐτῆς καὶ μιᾶς οὐσίας μετέχοντα, τῆς αὐτῆς καὶ μιᾶς θεότητος ἀξίων, these three partake of one and the same essence, have one and the same divinity: and τὰ τρία πρόσωπα, three persons, asserted and cited from S. Paul, 2 Cor. 13. 13. and from Christ, Mat. 28. 19. and μονὰς ἐν τριάδι νοῶνται, καὶ τριὰς ἐν μονάδι γνωρίζεται, Unity in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity. So again the Author of the Questions and Answers ad Orthodoxos, under Justin's name, resp. ad Quæst. 139. ὡς ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς τῇ συνυπάρξει τῶν τριῶν θείων ὑποστάσεων τῶν διαφερουσῶν ἀλλήλων, ἀ τῇ οὐσίᾳ ἀλλὰ τοῖς τῆς ὑπάρξεως τρόποις, There is one God in the coexistence of three divine subsistences, differing from one another not in essence, but in the manner of existence. So Athenagoras in his Ambassie for the Christians, who were by the heathens looked on as Atheists; Τίς οὐκ ἂν ὑπορήσαι λέγοντας Θεὸν πατέρα, καὶ υἱὸν Θεὸν, καὶ πνεῦμα ἅγιον, δεικνύντας αὐτῶν καὶ τὴν ἐν τῇ ἑνώσει δύναμιν, καὶ τὴν ἐν τῇ τάξει διαίρεσιν, ἀκούσας Ἀθέους κεκλῆσθαι; Who would not wonder to hear them called Atheists, who acknowledge God the Father, God the Son, and God the holy Ghost, and demonstrate their power in the Union, and their distinction in the order? So Clemens Alexand. in the conclusion of his Padagogus, Τῷ μόνῳ πατρὶ καὶ υἱῷ- σὺν καὶ τῷ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι, πάντα τῷ ἑνὶ- To the only Father and Son- with the holy Ghost, one in all things, &c. So in the third Centurie Origen is by S. Basil Περὶ πνεύμ. ἁγ. reckoned among the assertors of this Tradition, l. 6. Comm. in Johan. τῇ θεότητι τῆς προσκυνητῆς τριάδος, the Deity of the Trinity, which is to be adored; and on the Romans, καὶ τῆς τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος θεότητος, the Deity of the holy Ghost. So Dionysius Bishop of Rome cited by Athanasius in Epist. de Decret. Synod. Nic. ὅτι τὰ τοιαῦτα μὴ κηρυττομένων ὑπὸ τῆς θείας γραφῆς ζαφῶς ὁπίσαντα, Τρεῖς ἡ θεὸς ὅτε παλαιὰν ὅτε καινὴν διαθήκην κηρύττωσι, These, that is, the true disciples of Christ, evidently know that the Trinity is preached by divine Scripture, but that three Gods are not preached by the Old or New Testament. So Tertullian against Praxeas, Deum unicum quidem, sed cum œconomia, esse credendum: expaveſcunt ad œconomiam, numerum & diſpoſitionem Trinitatis diviſionem credunt Unitatis, quando Unitas ex ſemetipſo derivans Trinitatem non deſtruatur ab illa, ſed adminiſtretur, We are to believe one God, but with the œconomie, or adminiſtration: they are affrighted at the œconomie, and think the number and order of the Trinity is the diviſion of the Unity, when indeed the Unity deriving the Trinity from it ſelf is not deſtroyed by it, but adminiſtred. And, Ecce dico alium eſſe Patrem, alium Filium, alium Spiritum ſanctum; non tamen diverſitate alium, ſed diſtributione, nec diviſione alium, ſed diſtinctione, Loe I affirm the Father to be another, the Son another, the holy Ghost another; yet not another by diverſity, but by diſtribution, nor another by diviſion, but diſtinction. And, Qui tres unum ſunt, non unus, Quomodo dictum eſt, Ego & Pater unum ſumus, ad ſubſtantiæ unitatem, non ad numeri ſingularitatem, These three are one (nature) not one (perſon) as it was ſaid, I and my Father are one, for the unity of the ſubſtance, not the ſingularity of the number. The like place out of S. Cyprian was before produced, and this text from 1 Joh. 5. made use of for the asserting it. And so we see the truth of what we find in the debates of the first Nicene Council, on which their decrees are founded, Chriſtum conſubſtantialem Filium Patris juxta olim traditam Eccleſiæ Apoſtolicam fidem expreſſis teſtimoniis demonſtrantes, that the doctrine of the conſubſtantiality of Christ the Son to the Father- is by expreſs teſtimonies demonſtrated to be according to the Apoſtolick faith of old delivered to the Church: and that of Hoſius in the name of the Council, Trinitatem individuam, ineffabilem, unam divinitatem, & eandem ipſius eſſentiam eſſe credentes; & eandem confitemur juxta nobis ab initio traditam ipſius fidei dogmatum integritatem à Domino per ſanctos ejus Apoſtolos, & à ſanctis ejus Apoſtolis, & à ſanctis antiquis noſtris Patribus qui Apoſtolorum ſanctam fidem illibatam conſervaverunt, We believe the individual Trinity, the ineffable, one Godhead, and that the eſſence thereof is the ſame; and we confeſſe it the ſame according to the integrity of the doctrines of the faith from the beginning delivered to us from our Saviour by his holy Apoſtles, and from his holy Apoſtles, and from our holy antient fathers, who conſerved the holy faith of the Apoſtles intire. So in * Athanasius's Epiſtle to the Africans, telling them of the Acts of the Council, and of the decree of adding ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ τὸν υἱὸν, the conſubſtantiability of the Son with the Father, he adds, Οἱ δὲ ἐπίσκοποι οὐκ ἐαυτοῖς εὑρόντες τὰς λέξεις, ἀλλ' ἐκ τῶν πατέρων ἔχοντες τὴν μαρτυρίαν, ὅτως ἔγραψαν. Ἐπίσκοποι γὰρ ἦσαν ἀρχαῖοι περὶ ἑκατὸν τριάκοντα τε μεγάλης Ῥώμης καὶ τῆς ἡμετέρας πόλεως, οἳ ἠπάσαντο τοῦ ποίμνα λέγοντας τὸν υἱὸν, καὶ μὴ ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ, The Bishops, in the Council, did not invent these words for themselves, but having testimony from their fathers, thus they wrote. For there were antient Bishops about one hundred and thirty years, before that Council, both of Rome and of this city, who reprehended those who affirmed the Son to be a creature, and not consubstantial with the Father. Καὶ τοῦτο, saith he, ἐγίνωσκεν Εὐσέβιος ὁ γενόμενος Ἐπίσκοπος τῆς Καισαρείας, πρότερον μὲν συντρέχων τῇ Ἀρειανῇ αἱρέσει, ὕστερον δὲ ὑπογράψας τῇ ἐν Νικαίᾳ συνόδῳ, ἔγραψε καὶ τοῖς ἰδίοις διαβεβαιούμενος, ὅτι καὶ τῶν παλαιῶν τινας λογίους καὶ ὑπερφυεῖς ἐπισκόπους καὶ συγγραφέας εὗρεν ὁμοῦ τῷ πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ τῇ Θεότητι τὸ Ὁμοούσιον χρησαμένους ὀνόματι, And this Eusebius Bishop of Cæsarea acknowledged, who having formerly gone on in the Arian hereſie, but afterward ſubſcribed to the Council of Nice, wrote and confirmed it with his own words, saying, We have found some of the antients, considerable persons, and eminent Bishops and writers, which concerning the Divinity of the Father and the Son used the word Consubstantial. And these words of Eusebius are at length to be seen in his Epistle in Theodoret, l. 1. c. 11. All which being evidences of the doctrine of the Church before the Council of Nice, are of full force to demonstrate that which I have now in hand, viz. that the Catholicks in their controversie against the Arians had no occasion to insert these words, and that this was the doctrine of the Church before that Council of Nice. Much more might be added on this subject. This I have chosen to say, on so great an occasion, once for all.

b. Αἰτεῖσθαι κατὰ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ

V. 14. Aske any thing according to his will] Αἰτεῖσθαι κατὰ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ, asking according to God's will, seems to comprehend two things; the first in respect of the matter of his prayer, that that be according to God's will; and the second in respect of the disposition of the petitioner, that he duly behave himself in asking, according to God's will. For the former of these, the matter of the prayer, that must be according to the will of God: and so it may be two waies; First, by being not only perfectly lawful, and so not contrary to his will, (for so is every indifferent thing, which we have no reason to be confident that God will grant us upon our demand) but also good and acceptable in the sight of God: such is the gift of his Spirit, Luc. 11. 13. such the increase of faith, which the Disciples prayed for, meaning thereby God's gift of grace, so farre as to enable them thus to grow and increase; not the habit, or degrees of the habit of that vertue, for those are regularly to be acquired by our acts or exercises of that strength which God bestowes, our making use of that talent intrusted to us, to which his promise of more grace is confined, whilst from him that laies it up in a napkin he takes away that which he hath; nor again the acts of that vertue, for those are no otherwise given us by God then as he gives us strength to perform them, which the Apostle expresses by ἐνεργῶν ἐν ἡμῖν τὸ ἐνεργεῖν, Phil. 2. 13. his working in us to work or doe, upon which the exhortation is founded of the κατεργάζεσθε, working, and working out our own salvation. Secondly, it may be according to his will, by being agreeable to his wisdome, which alwaies bounds and limits and determins his will. And thus a thing may be supposed to be three waies; First, when that which is prayed for is not contrary to any decree of God, which being an act of his will, is also an efflux of his (incomprehensible) wisdome. This decree of God is to us expressed by God's oath past on any thing, which makes it immutable, Hebr. 6. 17. as when of the provokers, Hebr. 3. 18. God sware that they should not enter into Canaan: for in that case it was certain that neither Moses's prayers for them, nor their own for themselves, should prevail to reverse it, though that others, who did not thus provoke, should thus enter, was perfectly acceptable to God, agreeable to his will and wisdome. And so when the iniquity of the people is grown to such a pitch that God decrees their excision (and the same may be said of any particular man, that hath so fill'd up his measure) though Noah, Daniel and Job should intercede, they shall not prevail for them. Secondly, when that which is prayed for is not foreseen by God to be inconvenient or hurtful for him that prayeth for it; for if it be, in that case God's denying to grant the prayer is a greater mercy then the granting of it; He were an enemy if he would thus hear us to our ruine.

Evertêre urbes totas optantibus ipsis
Dii faciles: ——

The heathens could charge it on their Gods as too great a facileness to destroy whole cities by this means of granting men their wishes. Thirdly, when although that which is prayed for be good for the petitioners, yet somewhat else is better, and really more desireable to them. And then thus to deny what is asked, and thus to exceed their asking, what is that but the divinest and most advantagious way of granting it? And in that case God, that knows what we really most want, what is most truly agreeable to our desires, being able to chuse for us better then we for our selves, when he grants not our prayers in the kind, yet he grants them by way (not only of equivalence, but) of running over, denies us what we demand, and gives us what is more for our advantage; denies us what is good, but grants us that which is much better for us. Thus when Christ pray'd for the departure of that cup, his prayer was not heard, but in stead of it the angels sent to strengthen him, and enable him to drink it up, as that which was more for his & the world's advantage. And thus when S. Paul prayed thrice that the thorn in the flesh should depart from him, that prayer was not granted, but in stead of it that grace given which was sufficient to enable him to support that affliction; and that was better to him then the other: for God's strength was perfected and magnified in him through that weakness, or affliction, viz. by his Christian bearing of it. The second thing, that which respects the disposition or qualifications of the petitioner, may be reduced to these three branches; First, that he be such as to whom God's promises do belong, such an one as performs his part of the Covenant of mercy, the pious Christian liver, he that is a worshipper of God, and doth his will: For otherwise God, which is a hearer of prayers indefinitely, is not the hearer of his; we know that God heareth not sinners, If they incline to iniquity in their heart, the Lord will not hear them, when they make their long prayers, the Lord will hide his face, their hands are full of blood; they must wash and make them clean before they have any title to God's hearing or answering their prayers. Secondly, that in that particular for which he prays, he apply himself onely to God, and such means as he knows to be acceptable to him. This is it which is called in S. James, asking in faith, c. 1. b. and is opposed to wavering (that is, doubting and demurring whether God's ways or his own are to be adhered to for the obtaining his end) and to the ἀνὴρ δίψυχος double-minded man, ver. 8. who sending one mind, one will unto God in prayer, hath another for the most ungodly instruments, makes a secret addresse unto them, which renders him there ἀκατάστατος, unsetled and various, one while in the ways of God, and another while of the Devil, and, Let not such an one think, saith the Apostle, that he shall receive any thing of the Lord, v. 7. Thirdly, that his asking be joined with importunity; for to that qualification of our praiers the promise is expressly made, in the Parable of the widow and the unjust judge, and in the joining together of asking, seeking, knocking, to which the having, finding, opening unto, are promised by Christ; by this importunity meaning a continuance and perseverance in our praiers for that which we want, and when at the first asking the mercy is not conferr'd, repeating and re-inforcing the request, waiting upon the Lord which hideth his face, and never giving over the importunity until the request be graciously answered by God. All these being thus set down are the several ingredients to make up the intire qualification signified hereby, praying according to God's will; and to them that are thus qualified in each branch this confidence here belongs, that whatsoever they shall thus ask, God will hear them. By which it appears in what sense it may be deemed to be required of the petitioner to believe that his petition shall be granted, viz. onely according to the importance of these words thus explicated. It being certain that no man is bound to believe that which is not true, or to believe that absolutely which depends upon so many conditions, upon performing of which, as he lawfully may, nay (as a duty of faith to God's promises) is obliged, and must believe that what he thus prays shall be granted; so if he perform them not, he is not obliged to believe that his prayers shall be granted him: and if through a great measure of humility and undervaluing his own performances he chance to erre, and think himself unqualified when he is not unqualified, and consequently want this confidence toward God, that he will hear his prayers, when he hath (if he knew it) due grounds for that confidence, it is not to be imagined that the want of that confidence, or the excess of that humility, which is so acceptable in the sight of God, should render him or his prayers unacceptable and ineffectual to him. And accordingly αἰτείτω ἐν πίστει, Let him ask in faith, in S. James chap. 1. 6. must no otherwise be interpreted.

c. Ἁμαρτία εἰς θάνατον

V. 16. Sin unto death] What is meant by ἁμαρτία εἰς θάνατον, a sin unto death, may, I suppose, be best learned from what we read in the Law, of him that sins contemptuously, to whom death without mercy was prescribed. This was described, Heb. 10. 28. Ἀθετήσας τις νόμον Μωσέως, He that set at nought Moses's Law died without mercy, upon a sufficient proof of it. And so he that is guilty of that, and, proportionably to him, he that useth the Son of God, now under the Gospel, after that manner, καταπατήσας treading or trampling upon the Son of God, v. 29. setting his commands and terrors at nought, as there he is thought worthy of sorer punishment, so here his sin may fitly be said to be εἰς θάνατον, unto death. What this contempt is, may appear by the second Council of Nice, which expounds the sin unto death by ἀδιόρθωτον μένειν, to continue unreformed and incorrigible after all the admonitions and censures of the Church; of which as there were several degrees, so he that did not reform upon the first was, within some time, to be put under the second, or higher, and not reforming then, was to fall under the third, which was wont to be called by the Jewes, Schammatha, which signifies there is death, a punishment proportioned to this sin, and from the title thereof this seems to be called here a sin unto death. Not that every deliberate or wilful sin is here so styled (though that also be mortiferous without repentance) for of this sort is ἁμαρτία sin, (indefinitely taken, according to the use of this writer; see Note on c. 3. a.) and according to that which follows, v. 17. πᾶσα ἀδικία ἁμαρτία ἐστὶ every iniquity is sin, and yet every such, as it there follows, is not εἰς θάνατον, unto death in this sense; but the phrase peculiarly belongs to a wilful sin (to which, without repentance or reformation, eternal perdition is denounced) heightned and aggravated farther with the addition of obstinacy against all perswasions and means of melting, which renders him hopelesse and own'd to ruine, and there is nothing left for him but a fearful looking for of judgement and fiery indignation which shall devour the adversaries, τοὺ ὑπεναντίους, these that walk thus contrary to God, resist his admonitions, his grace, all his methods of reducing them. Of these the Apostle here saith, οὐ λέγω ἵνα ἐρωτήσῃ, I say not that he, that is, the Christian brother, shall pray for such an one. Which words may seem very cautiously set, not that he forbids, but onely doth not command to pray for them, or doth not promise any good successe to the prayers that are offered up for such an one. Agreeably to what is said of the ἑκουσίως ἁμαρτάνοντες, c. 10. 26. those that sin wilfully after the receiving the knowledge of the truth, (where the wilfulnesse is added to the ἁμαρτάνειν, the sinning deliberately, and denotes the contumacious continuing in any such ἁμαρτία, or deliberate sinne) that οὐκέτι περὶ θυσία ἀπολείπεται, there remains no longer any sacrifice, περὶ ἁμαρτιῶν, for such sinnes so wilfully continued in, noting thereby the suspension of the prayers of the Church (or the inefficaciousnesse of them) which are answerable to the sacrifices of old time; as when of obdurate sinners it is said, that if Noah, Daniel and Job, the three great examples of powerfull intercession, were there a praying for them, they should not be available for the pardon of such. That such as these were deprived of the benefit of the prayers of the Church, and out of meer pity delivered up to Satan, as the onely remaining charitable method, by that means to rouze and awake them out of sinne, is sufficiently known in the Antient Canons. And it is the advice of Clemens Alexandrinus, Str. l. 7. concerning such insensate, incorrigible sinners, that we should pray to God for some temporal punishments upon them, as the onely reserve behinde to make impression on them. And that was done in the anathema or Cherem, where they used execrations upon them, not as an act of hatred, but kindnesse toward them, εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, to the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit might be saved in the day of the Lord. Where still it is not defined unlawful to pray for such, either for their pardon, or for their repentance to qualifie them for it, but they are onely look'd on as excommunicate persons, that must not be encouraged with admission to the publick prayers of the Church or the privileges of Christians, but marked out and branded and shamed to reformation.

V. 21. Idols] The idols that are here mentioned are sure those that the Gnosticks used. To which purpose there is an eminent place in Eusebius, Οἱ τὸ καθ' αὑτὸν μετιόντες ἄρεσιν, τῷ Χριστιανῶν φιλοσοφίαν ὑποκρινόμενοι, ἧς μὴν ἔδοξαν ἀπαλλάττεσθαι περὶ τὰ εἴδωλα δεισιδαιμονίας, οὐδὲν ἧττον αὖθις ὑπολαμβάνοντες, καταπίπτουσι δὴ γεγραὼς καὶ εἰκόνας ὑπό τε τῷ Σίμωνι, καὶ τῇ ὑπὸ ἐκείνῃ ἀναθεῖσαις Ἑλένῃ, θυμιάμασί τε καὶ θυσίαις καὶ σπονδαῖς τύτοις ἀσεβῶς ἐπιχειροῦντες. And besides these, many abominable impurities, not fit to be named*, there were among them. All which together may well be the εἴδωλα, idols, which the Christians are here warned to beware of.

THE [a] SECOND [b]* EPISTLE OF [†] JOHN.

a. b. * Catholick or General Epiſtle, Ἐπιστολὴ Καθολικὴ

a. Διατίθεται Ἰωάννης

THat this ſecond (and ſo likewiſe the third) Epiſtle of John was not written by John the Apoſtle, is conjectured in the Poſthumous Annotations of the learned Hugo Grotius, and that much more tolerably then what hath been mentioned concerning the ſecond Epiſtle of Peter. There many changes were to be made in the Text to make the conjecture paſſable; but here all circumſtances of the Text doe fitly enough concurre to make it poſſible that John, which was by S. John the Apoſtle made Biſhop of the Jewiſh Chriſtians at Epheſus, ſhould be the Author of theſe Epiſtles. Of that John the antient Author of the Conſtit. l. 7. c. 45. makes mention, that as Timothy was made Biſhop of Epheſus by S. Paul (that is, Biſhop of the Gentile Chriſtians there by the Apoſtle of the Gentiles) ſo Ἰωάννης ὑπ' ἐμοῦ Ἰωάννου John was ordained by John, that is, a ſecond John made Biſhop of the Jewiſh Church there by John the Apoſtle of the circumciſion, Gal. 2. 9. who planted the Jewiſh Church at Epheſus. That this ſecond John, the Biſhop of Epheſus, was the writer of theſe Epiſtles, the chief argument that is produced is that from the title, Ὁ Πρεσβύτερος, The Elder, by which this writer calls himſelf, and not Ἀπόστολος Apoſtle. A ſecond from the incomplete reception that theſe Epiſtles had in the firſt ages, being not acknowledged by ſome Churches for a while. A third from Diotrephes's oppoſing this Author, 3 Ep. 9. which it is thought ſtrange that any Chriſtian ſhould doe to an Apoſtle. But theſe arguments have very ſmall force in them toward the inferring the Concluſion. For firſt, Πρεσβύτερος, Elder, being a word of honour and dignity, and belonging, in the New Teſtament, to the ſupreme Ruler of any Church (and to none elſe, that we can diſcern: ſee Act. 11. Note b.) it may very fitly belong to an Apoſtle reſiding and preſiding in any Church (as it is certain S. John had done at Epheſus for ſome time) and the rather, being ὁ Πρεσβύτερος, the Elder, by way of eminence. And this will be more probable, if it be conſidered what account hath formerly been given (Note on Tit. of 1 Joh.) of the character of this Apoſtles ſtyle, who uſeth not in his Goſpel (and accordingly it is in his former Epiſtle, which is acknowledged to be his) to name or mention himſelf, unleſſe it be by ſome circumlocution. And ſuch is the ὁ Πρεσβύτερος, the Elder, here. Nay ſecondly, the perſecutions which were at this time againſt the Church, and wherein S. John was peculiarly involved, might make it prudent thus to conceal his name, and diſguiſe it under this title. Or thirdly, whatſoever was the reaſon of wholly omitting his name or title in the firſt Epiſtle, may here be of force for his omitting it thus farre here. And this will be a ground of anſwer to the ſecond reaſon alſo. For though thoſe Churches, whither theſe Epiſtles were ſent, knew from whom they came, and accordingly never denied them reception; yet having not ſo publick a character upon them as others had, and being not own'd by the Author in the title, as all S. Paul's (unleſſe that to the Hebrews) were, this might well be the cauſe that they had not ſo univerſal a reception at firſt, which notwithſtanding, it yet appears that ſoon after it was received into the Canon, and this inſcription prefix'd to it by the Church, Ἰωάννου τοῦ Ἀποστόλου Ἐπιστολὴ καθολικὴ δευτέρα, The ſecond Catholick Epiſtle of John the Apoſtle. As for the third reaſon, that of this Author's being oppoſed by Diotrephes, which is thought to be a proof that he was not an Apoſtle, this is of no validity, becauſe the hereticks of thoſe times, the Gnoſticks, are known to have oppoſed and rejected the Apoſtles themſelves. So of Alexander S. Paul ſaith, he hath greatly withſtood our words, 2 Tim. 4. 15. So of the Gnoſticks we read, Jude 11. that they were guilty of the gainſaying of Coreh, and that, we know, conſiſted in their oppoſing Moſes and Aaron, and ſo in the parallel muſt denote the oppoſing the Apoſtles, or Governours of the Church, ſent immediately by Chriſt; and that that is the meaning of the βλασφημοῦσι δόξας, ſpeaking evil of glories, Jude 8. and 2 Pet. 2. 10. as of Alexanders blaſpheming 1 Tim. 1. 20. ſee Note on Jude d. To the ſame purpoſe alſo it is that S. Paul, having ſpoken of the Gnoſticks, 1 Cor. 8. through the whole chapter, proceeds immediately, c. 9. to the vindicating his Apoſtleſhip, and the privileges thereof; and ſo Gal. 1. and ſpeaking to Titus of theſe deceivers, he calls them ἀνυποτάκτους, Tit. 1. 10. refractory, diſobedient. Of theſe 'tis Ignatius's affirmation, that they took upon them to know more then their Biſhops, Εἴ τις γνωσθῇ πλέον τοῦ Ἐπισκόπου, ἔφθαρται, If any know more then the Biſhop, he is corrupted, Ep. ad Polycarp. And not onely ſo, but of Marcus's followers (a progenie of theſe Gnoſticks) Irenæus plainly affirms, l. 1. c. 9. (and from him Epiphanius l. 1. hær. 14. and 34.) that they were ſo arrogant, that they contemned the Apoſtles themſelves, and l. 3. c. 2. dicentes ſe non ſolùm Presbyteris, ſed etiam Apoſtolis exiſtentes ſapientiores, ſaying they were wiſer, not only then the Presbyters, or Biſhops, but even then the Apoſtles themſelves. Which takes away all force from this argument. And then nothing hinders but that the Inſcription of this Epiſtle may be true, and John the Apoſtle be determined to be the Author of it. And that will be more probable, if we obſerve how agreeable the matter of this is to the former Epiſtle, fortifying them in the truth, v. 4. in the practice of charity, v. 5. and warning them of the Gnoſtick deceivers, or Antichriſts, v. 7.

b. Καθολικαὶ

How theſe Epiſtles ſhould be called Καθολικαὶ, may perhaps be queſtion'd, being not, as that of S. James and S. Peter appeared to be, addreſſed to the Jewes of the diſperſion univerſally or indefinitely, but one of them ἐκλεκτῇ Κυρίᾳ, ordinarily rendred, To the elect Lady, and the other to Gaius, a particular perſon. But to this it may be ſaid, Firſt, that it is not certain that theſe are two particular perſons to whom theſe Epiſtles belong (ſee Note a. on this Epiſt.) Secondly, that to whomſoever they were firſt addreſs'd, they were yet deſigned to be tranſcribed by them and ſent to others alſo, and that is the meaning of Catholick (the ſame that of ἐγκύκλιοι ἐπιστολαὶ) viz. that theſe Epiſtles were deſigned to go from one Church unto another, and were not confined unto any. (ſee Note b. on the title of S. James.) But then thirdly, another notion of Καθολικὴ Catholick there may poſſibly be, to ſignifie the univerſal reception of theſe Epiſtles in the Church. At the firſt, beſide thoſe Epiſtles which which carry S. Paul's name in the front of them, there were but few that had an universal reception, onely the first of Peter, and the first of John, the rest were not so universally received into the Canon of Scripture. Hereupon those two so received might at the first be called Catholick (and so καθολικαὶ Canonical also) in opposition to those others which were not so Catholickly or universally entertained: And then, when upon farther evidence made to the Church these others were without contradiction received also, this word Καθολικὴ might in like manner by the Church be added to their Inscriptions, to signifie that now they were universally received also, that is, accepted into the Canon.

S. JOHN. II.

Paraphrase.

1. THE Elder unto the [a] elect Ladie and her children, whom I love in the truth; and not onely I, but also all they that have known the truth;]

2. For the truth's sake which dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever:]

1. John the Apostle and governour of the whole Church of Asia, to the Church (unnamed) and to all the Christians therein, whom I value and love in Christ, and not I onely, but all other true Christians; [a]

2. Because of the Christian profession, the same in you that remaineth in us, and shall doe so, I pray and hope, for ever:

3. Grace be with you, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ the Son of the Father, in truth and love.]

3. I send you greeting, and wish you all gifts, and mercy, and prosperity from God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and particularly that you may, in despight of all sollicitations of hereticks and schismaticks, continue constant in the acknowledgment of the truth of the Gospel, and in the exercise of all works of charity to one another.

4. I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in the truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.

4. Some of the Christians which belong to thee I lately met with, where I was, and discerned them to stand constant in the truth of the Christian doctrine, agreeably to that commandment given to us by God the Father, This is my beloved son, hear him. Mat. 17. 5. when Peter, and James, and I were in the mount with him; and this constancy of theirs was the more considerable, because of the great store of false doctrine that is now every where abroad in the Church: and this was matter of special joy to me. See note on 1 Joh. 2. a.

5. And now I beseech thee, Lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment to thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another.]

5. And now all that I have to beg of you is, that to the profession of the truth ye adde the practice of Christian charity, that we may all live in unity, and peace, and concord one toward another. And this is no new commandment of mine, but that which Christ required of all his disciples, and to which ye are most strictly obliged by being Christians.

6. And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, that as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it.]

6. And this consists in your doing what Christ hath prescribed: and his prescription is, that we should not hearken to new doctrines, but go on in the course in which we were first set by him, and his Apostles, the preachers of the faith unto us. From which they that depart fall into faction, and malice, and uncharitableness against all others.

* Jesus Christ coming in the flesh, Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ἐρχόμενον

7. For many Impostors are come among you, who will not acknowledge Christ to be the Messias, (see note on 1 Joh. 2. b.) and whosoever doth so, is an Impostor, and an Antichrist, such as were prophesied of, that now they should come: see 1 Joh. 2. c.

8. Look to your selves, that † we lose not those things which we have wrought, but * that we receive a full reward.]

8. Take care then that by relapse you destroy not all, and forfeit the reward of your good beginnings, for want of perseverance, but that continuing to the end, ye may receive a complete reward or crown.

9. Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God: he that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.]

9. Every one that now apostatizeth, and falls off from the doctrine of Christ to the corruptions of the Gnosticks, forsaketh God himself and all piety, (see note on 1 Joh. 2. d.) and he that adhereth and sticketh fast to the orthodox profession, now it is so opposed, shall be looked on as a truly pious and Christian person.

10. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, [b] neither bid him God speed.]

10. If any man bring you any doctrine beside this, the one doctrine of Christ, give no kind of admission, or ear, or encouragement to him. [b]

Annotations on the second Epistle of John.

a. Ἐκλεκτῇ Ἀδελφῇ ἐκλεκτῇ

V. 1. Elect] That ἐκλεκτὴ signifies a Church, and that συνεκλεκτὴ is used in that sense for another, or sister Church, in the same manner as here, v. 13. ἀδελφὴ ἐκλεκτὴ, hath been said Note on 1 Pet. 5. 13. d. to which I shall adde the testimony of S. Jerome, Epist. 11. ad Agerachiam, where having mentioned the text in the Canticles, ch. 6. una est columba mea, perfecta mea, una est matri suæ, electa genitrici suæ, my dove is one, my perfect one is the onely daughter of her mother, the elect to her that brought her forth, he addes, Ad quam

scribit Johannes Epistolam, Senior electæ Dominæ & filiis ejus, to whom John writes an Epistle, The Elder to the elect Lady and her children Now for Κυρία, it may fitly be set to signifie no more then τῇ δεῖνα, an appellation fit to be used when the name is either unknown or concealed; for in that case, and not onely as a title of honour and dignity, 'tis ordinary to say Κύρι (which probably is grown to be in English Cyr or Syr:) so Joh. 20. 15. the woman taking Christ for the Gardiner, and addressing her speech to him as one whose name was not known to her, begins with Κύριε, Syr. But beside this, it is observable that both Κύρια among the Athenians, and Curia among the Romans, signifies the very same that ἐκκλησία and Ecclesia doth, that is, the assembly, both as that signifies the Persons congregated either for civil or sacred uses, and the Place where they thus meet. See the worthy Sir Henry Spelman's Glossarie, p. 195. And then the words will be best rendred, the elect Church or congregation, some which here is not thought fit to be mentioned by name, or particularly. That he names not this Church, may be for the same reason for which among others he names not himself, any otherwise then ὁ πρεσβύτερος, the elder, viz. because of the persecutions that were then abroad in the world. And indeed that both this and the third Epistle were designed to be sent clancularly, and purposely avoided the eyes of men, appears by the close common to both, that he had many things to write, but would not commit them to paper and ink, 2 Joh. 12. and 3 Joh. 13. in respect of the hazard that that might bring either on them or him, in case they were intercepted, or fell into other hands then those to which he designed them. Agreeable to this it is, that we here have mention of the τέκνα αὐτῆς her children, v. 1. and in the like manner, v. 13. by which phrase the Christians of any Church are fitly signified, the title of mother being so proper for a Church, and so used Gal. 4. 26. the mother of us all. But what Church it is that was here designed, or what that other, v. 13. we have no means to define, any farther then by remembring that all Asia being (as far as the Jewish Christians there) the special charge and province of S. John, and there being seven chief Churches or Metropolitical Sees in that circuit, enumerated Rev. 1. 11. it is most probable that S. John being in one of these Churches at this time, he wrote unto the other. And if Ephesus were that to which he wrote (from thence to be communicated to the rest) there will then be another ground of calling it κυρία, as that literally signifies chief in power or authority, Ephesus being indeed the chief Metropolis of all Asia.

V. 10. Neither bid him God speed] This form of interdict here is an imitation of the practice of the Jewes in their חרם or anathema against the מומרין or apostates, who were to be excluded not onely from commerce, but from the smallest kind of ordinary salutation. b.

2. Beloved, * I wiſh above all things that thou maiſt proſper, and be in health, even as thy ſoul proſpereth.] * I pray εὐχομαι

2. It is my fervent prayer for thee, that it may be with thee in all outward things as it is in reſpect of thy ſoul, that every thing may ſucceed proſperouſly with thee.

3. For I rejoiced greatly when the brethren came, and teſtified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkeſt in the truth.]

3. For it was great matter of comfort and joy to me, when the Chriſtians that came out of Judæa, came and told me of the ſincerity of thy Chriſtian courſe, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 13. g.) and gave me aſſurance of thy perſeverance.

4. I have no greater joy then to hear that my children walk in truth.]

4. There is nothing that I more delight in in the world, or of which I more abundantly rejoyce, then to hear that thoſe which have been converted by me, do adhere to that profeſſion, and live after a true Chriſtian manner.

5. Beloved, thou doſt † faithfully whatſoever thou doſt to the brethren, and to ſtrangers,]

5. It is moſt Chriſtianly done of thee to do as thou doſt toward the poor Chriſtians, and ſtrangers that have been among you, Rom. 16. 23.

6. Which have born witneſſe of thy charity before the Church, whom if thou * bring forward on their journey † after a godly ſort, thou ſhalt do well.]

6. Who gave publick teſtimony of thy charity ſhewed to them. And as then thou didſt, ſo it will be a pious work in thee to help them now again, and furniſh them for their travail (ſee 1 Cor. 16. a.) in publiſhing the Goſpel, and that in a Chriſtian manner, and for Chriſt's ſake, whoſe miniſters they are.

* furniſh for προπέμψας † ſo as may be worthy of God ἀξίως τοῦ θεοῦ

7. Becauſe that for his names ſake they [b] went forth, taking nothing of the Gentiles.] b.

7. For 'tis on Chriſt's errand that they have taken this journey, that is, to preach the Goſpel of Chriſt; or, for the teſtimony which they have given to the Goſpel, that is, becauſe they have publiſhed the Chriſtian faith, they have been driven out of their Countrey, that is, Judæa, by the Jewes, and being ſo, they are alſo look'd on ſhiely by the Gentile Chriſtians where they come, v. 10. caſt out by their Countrey-men the Jews for being Chriſtians, and not entertained with any kindneſſe by the Gentile Chriſtians for being Jewes.

* may become fellow-labourers with ἵνα συνεργοὶ γινώμεθα τῇ † or Church, to the King's MS. reads ἐκκλησίᾳ

8. We therefore ought to receive ſuch, that we * might be fellow-helpers to the † truth.]

8. And therefore 'tis but neceſſary that they be relieved by ſome, and they that ſhall relieve them, ſhall thereby have the comfort of co-operating and contributing their part toward the propagating of the Goſpel of Chriſt.

9. I wrote * unto the Church, but [c] Diotrephes, who loveth to have the preeminence among them, receiveth us not.] c.

9. To this purpoſe I wrote to the Church, but Diotrephes, that would fain be Biſhop there, gives no heed to my Letters.

10. Wherefore if I come, I will remember his deeds which he doth, † prating againſt us with malicious words: and not content therewith, neither doth he himſelf receive the brethren, and forbiddeth them that would, and caſteth them out of the Church.]

† baffling us with wicked ſpeeches λόγοις πονηροῖς φλυαρῶν ἡμᾶς

10. For which contempt of his, I ſhall at my coming uſe ſome ſeverity upon him, and teach him to uſe me better, eſpecially ſeeing he is not content thus to ſlight and baffle me, and to reject the Chriſtian Jewes that come thither, but farther reſtrains others that would not have been ſo unhoſpitable, will not permit the Gentile Chriſtians to receive them to their communion, but utterly rejects them out of the Church.

* do not imitate the evil, but the good μὴ μιμοῦ τὸ κακὸν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀγαθόν

11. Beloved, * follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doth good, is of God: but he that doth evil, hath not ſeen God.]

11. Brethren, be not ye followers of theſe evil ways, but contrariwiſe follow all Chriſtian meekneſſe towards the Jewiſh Chriſtians, Rom. 14. 1. He that is kind and merciful, and willing to receive all to communion, is of a Chriſtian temper, and ſo ſhews himſelf to be: but he that is malicious, and proud, and ſeparates from others, knows not what belongs to Chriſtianity.

12. Demetrius hath good report of all men, and of the truth it ſelf: yea and we alſo bear record, † and ye know that our record is true.]

12. Demetrius indeed a Gentile convert hath a very good teſtimony from all men that know him, and indeed hath done many things which teſtifie more fully of him then the ſuffrages of men can doe: And the ſame teſtimony I and others with me give him alſo, and ye know that what we ſay is true.

a. Γάϊον ξένον μου τέκνου

V. 1. Gaius] Who this Gaius was cannot certainly be affirmed. That it is the ſame that is mentioned by S. Paul, Rom. 16. 23. may ſeem probable by that which is there ſaid of him, that he was ξένος μου, the perſon that entertained Paul, and the whole Church, or generality of Chriſtians, in like manner as here, ver. 5. Gaius is ſaid to have been very kind to the brethren and to the ſtrangers, and to have furniſhed them for their journey in a very liberal manner. But one circumſtance there is which is of force againſt this. This Gaius, Rom. 16. appears to be a Corinthian, and ſo to be mentioned there (from whence S. Paul writes that Epiſtle) as his hoſt, and ſo as an inhabitant, not a ſtranger there. And then there is little reaſon to doubt but that this is he that is mentioned 1 Cor. 1. 14. as one that was there converted to the faith, and baptized by Paul, whereas the Gaius here is by S. John called his ſon or τέκνον, v. 4. which ſignifies him to have been begotten in the faith, that is, converted by S. John. Another of that name there is mentioned, Act. 19. 39. of whom it is ſaid that he was Συνέκδημος τοῦ Παύλου fellow-travailer of Paul, and this was a Macedonian, and of the city of Derbe, Act. 20. 4. and ſo diſtinct from him of Corinth alſo, and probably from him that is mentioned here, who could not have been ſo fit for the employment, v. 5. of entertaining the brethren and ſtrangers, if he were employed in preaching the Goſpel, as a fellow-travailer of S. Paul. It remains therefore that this Gaius here be ſome third perſon, of a Roman name (Gaius and Caius being all one, and a very common and vulgar name, of which therefore it is not ſtrange that there ſhould be three diſtinct perſons mentioned in the New Teſtament) and ſo ſome Gentile Chriſtian, an eminent member of that Church, v. 9. to which S. John ſeems to have written his ſecond Epiſtle (ſee Note on 2 Joh. 1.) no where elſe, but in this place, mentioned in the New Teſtament.

b. ἐξῆλθον ὑπὲρ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ

V. 7. Went forth] The word ἐξῆλθον, went out, is capable of two notions. Firſt, it may ſignifie a voluntary going out, and then ὑπὲρ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ, for the name of Chriſt, muſt ſignifie their preaching and propagating the Goſpel, for which they took their travail from their own countrey. But ἐξέρχεσθαι may ſignifie alſo a violent ejection. So Mat. 17. 21. ſpeaking of the ejection or caſting out of a devil, the like phraſe is uſed, τοῦτο γένος οὐκ ἐκπορεύεται, this kind goeth not out, by going out meaning ejection. Thus נפק ſignifies in Syriack to go out, and to be caſt out alſo; and accordingly Mat. 8. 12. the Syriack hath נפקון, exibunt, they ſhall go out, but the Greek ἐκβληθήσονται, they ſhall be caſt out. According to which it is that ἐκβάλλειν and ἐκπέμπειν, to caſt out and ſend out, are uſed promiſcuouſly the one for the other: ſee Note on Mat. 9 i. And then going out for Chriſt's name, is being baniſhed or caſt out of their countrey for the profeſſion of the faith of Chriſt, which we know the Jewiſh Chriſtians were, Act. 8. 1. and 11. 19.

c. Διοτρεφὴς

V. 9. Diotrephes] This Diotrephes was a Chriſtian that from Gentiliſme received the faith in that Church to which Gaius belonged, and to which the Apoſtle ſeems to have written the former Epiſtle commendatory of the brethren, ver. 9. From hence appears that which was intimated, Rom. 14. 1. that the Gentile Chriſtians were in part guilty of the breach betwixt the Jewiſh Chriſtians and them, and not onely the Jewes. There it ſeems, as the Jewiſh judged and condemned the Gentile Chriſtians for uſing their Chriſtian liberty, ſo the Gentile Chriſtians deſpiſed, and ſet at nought the Jewiſh. Here it ſeems the matter was driven higher, that is, they did not ſo freely relieve the Jewiſh Chriſtians that were driven out of their countrey for the faith, as they ought in Chriſtian liberality to have done. That ſeems to be the meaning of ver. 7. that the Jewiſh Chriſtians that were driven out of Judæa for the profeſſion of the faith (ſee Note b.) were not now in this Church of Aſia ſo liberally and hoſpitably treated as the laws of Chriſtian charity obliged, and as belonged to them as ſtrangers, v. 5. to furniſh them for their journey, ver. 6. Secondly, they were, ſome of them, ſo farre guilty in this matter, that when S. John wrote his letters of commendation for them, theſe were not effectual, Diotrephes rejected, or gave no reception or heed to his letters; and by this means the reſt of the Church alſo, being otherwiſe willing to have entertained them, were detained from doing it, ver. 10. Thirdly, he not only denied them that hoſpitable reception and relief, but utterly rejected them from their communion, caſt them out of the Church, ver. 10 Whether this Diotrephes were a Biſhop in this Church it may de doubted, or whether onely one that immoderately affected that dignity, or aſſumed it, not belonging to him. Φιλοπρωτεύων may ſignifie one that loves & uſeth immoderately this dignity, when he hath it, and one that ſeeks it inordinately, or aſſumeth it. It is poſſible that he was a Biſhop, and being ſo did ἐκβάλλειν caſt out the Jewiſh Chriſtians out of the Church, and that in ſpight of S. John's commendatory letters, who had an Apoſtolical power over him, and all other Biſhops of Aſia. But it may alſo be very probable, that as the Hereticks of thoſe times did contemn and affront the Biſhops and Apoſtles themſelves, ſo this Diotrephes might doe, without having any real authority in the Church, but onely aſſuming it, as αὐθάδης and τολμητὴς, a preſumptuous, confident, bold perſon.

The

* Jude the Apostle

IT is but agreeable to the former conjectures in the posthumous Annotations of the most learned H. Grotius, to determine here also, as in the second of Peter, and second and third of John, that the writer was not Jude, one of the twelve Apostles, and accordingly to affix it to Jude a Bishop of Jerusalem. But of this there is no proof offered, save only, first, That he calls himself δοῦλος a servant, not Ἀπόστολος Apostle, of Jesus Christ. Secondly, That it was not translated into all languages, and received into all Churches. Thirdly, That in the Catalogue of the Bishops of Jerusalem, the fifteenth that is named is called Judas. To the first of these it may be sufficient to answer, that as Ἀπόστολος Ἰησοῦ, an Apostle of Jesus, signifies one sent upon the services of Christ with commission from him, so it is in effect all one with δοῦλος Ἰησοῦ, a servant of Jesus, and so the latter as proper a style of any Apostle of Christ as the former. But then secondly, in the title of the Epistle, which is the sense of the antient Church in this matter, it is Ἰούδα τοῦ Ἀποστόλου, of Jude the Apostle, and in the Text it self there is a mark as characteristical, ἀδελφὸς Ἰακώβου, the brother of James, which can belong to none but to Jude the Apostle. To the second I answer (as before to that of the second of Peter) that this Epistle was not so universally known and undoubtedly received at first as other parts of the New Testament; which notwithstanding, it was yet soon after universally known, and translated, and received into the antient Canon, and the Apostolicalness of the writing never so questioned by any as to assigne it any other Author, or to doubt of the truth of any thing contained in it. As for Jude the fifteenth Bishop of Jerusalem, that opinion of his being the Author of it affixeth it to the time of Adrian, whereas this Epistle, by the subject of it, common to it with the second of Peter, and by the many passages of agreement, appears to have been written on the same occasion, and about the same time that the second of Peter was, which hath already appeared (see Note on 2. Pet. tit. a.) to have been written before the destruction of Jerusalem. And if that were indeed granted to be written by Simeon the second Bishop of Jerusalem, yet that would be a competent distance from Judas the fifteenth Bishop there. The whole businesse of this Epistle, as of S. Peter, is such as is fully applicable to the times foregoing the destruction of Jerusalem, and the ruine of the Jewes, and Judaizing Christians, and Gnosticks involved in the same calamity, out of which only the constant Christians were to have deliverance, v. 3. And so it may very reasonably be affirmed to be written by the Apostle S. Jude, clearly defined to be the brother of James (an argument of such force against all the contrary pretensions, that those which doubt of the Apostolicalnesse of the Epistle, are fain to leave out those words, but without the authority of any one Copie to countenance them) and that, as the Epistle of S. James, and those of S. Peter, addressed to the Jewish Christians in the dispersion, on purpose to fortifie them against the corruptions of the Gnosticks, which had now broke in among them.

† or beloved, for the Kings Ms. reads ἠγαπημένοις

* by

1 JUDE the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, * to them that are † sanctified by God the Father, and preserved * in Jesus Christ, and called:]

1. Jude, one of the disciples (and Apostles) of Christ, the son of Alphæus (as James also was) and called also Lebbæus and Thaddæus, Mat. 10. 3. to those that have received the faith, the dispersed Jewish Christians (see Mat. 20. c) sanctified, or beloved by God the Father, and preserved by Christ from that destruction and judgment that befalls others (the contumacious resisters and crucifiers) both here and to all eternity:

2. Mercy unto you, and peace and love be multiplied.]

2. I send you greeting, and wish and pray for all the blessings of heaven to be multiplied upon you, particularly that great blessing and vertue of Christian peace and charity.

† I thought it necessary ἀνάγκην ἔσχον

3. Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation; † it was needfull for me to write unto you, and exhort you that you should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints.]

3. Beloved, I thought it my office to write briefly unto you upon one subject wherein you are nearly concerned, viz. that special promise of Christ (now shortly to be fulfilled among you) of an universal preservation and deliverance (see Rom. 13. note c.) that shall befall the Christians, when the unbelieving Jewes shall be utterly destroyed: And being to write to you on that subject, there was nothing more necessary for me to begin with, then to exhort you to adhere constantly to, and contend for the Christian doctrine (preached uniformly to all by consent of all the Apostles, whithersoever they have gone out) and not to renounce it in time of persecution, as some would teach you.

* those that were of old set forth for † our onely master, God and Lord, Jesus Christ.

4. For there are certain men crept in unawares, * who were [a] before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousnesse, and [b] denying † the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ.]

4. For as it hath been foretold by Christ, Mat. 24. 10. that it should, so now it is come to passe, there are come in very slily into the Church false teachers, who shall be destroyed by that notable coming of Christ (see 2 Thess. 2. 8, &c.) and are for their sins and vileness prophesied of, that they shall be so destroyed, abominable persons, converting the Gospel, or Christianity, into all manner of unnatural lust, and denying Jesus Christ our only Master, our only God, our only Lord, and setting up Simon Magus in stead of him (and of God the Father also.)

5. * I will

5. In reſpect to whom I deſire to put you in mind of what you know ſufficiently in the reading the Scripture, where all other ſuch knowledge is communicated to you, that when God delivered the Iſraelites out of Ægypt, the unbelieving murmurers of thoſe Iſraelites, thoſe that renounced the God and the Moſes which had delivered them, were in the compaſſe of forty years all of them deſtroyed by God in the wilderneſſe; and ſo now though all theſe conſtant believing Chriſtians be to expect deliverance, yet thoſe Chriſtians that fall into ſuch ſins as theſe ſhall have their vengeance alſo, deſtruction with the unbelievers.

5. * I will therefore put you in remembrance, † though you once knew * this, how that the Lord having ſaved the people out of the land of Ægypt, afterward deſtroyed them that believed not.]

* But I deſire to Βλ. αμω

6. And the ſame is obſervable of the Angels created by God for glory and bliſſe, and conſtant obedience to him; but thoſe of them that preſently fell and apoſtatized from God, were caſt out of heaven, and are now bound over to eternal hell, at the preſent in a dark miſerable ſtate, but ſuch as at the day of doom ſhall be made much more miſerable to them. And the like puniſhment are the vicious Apoſtate Chriſtians to expect, a preſent ſtate of miſery and deſtruction here with the perſecuting Jewes, and eternal hell hereafter.

6. And the Angels which kept not their † firſt eſtate, but left their * own habitation, he hath reſerved in everlaſting chains under darkneſſe, unto the judgment of the great day.]

7. After the manner that befel Sodome and Gomorrah and Adma & Zeboim, which were guilty of the ſame unclean ſins that theſe Gnoſticks or corrupt Chriſtians are now guilty of, having given themſelves up to all unnatural luſt, and accordingly were then moſt notoriouſly puniſhed with utter deſtruction, by fire and brimſtone from heaven, and that but an eſſay of thoſe eternal flames of hell under which they now are involved, and ſo may well be a warning to all that fall into the ſame ſins at this time.

c. 7. Even as Sodome and Gomorrha, and the cities about them, † in like manner giving themſelves over to fornication, and || going after * ſtrange fleſh, are ſet forth for an example, ſuffering the vengeance of [c] eternal fire.]

8. And yet for all theſe examples, theſe Gnoſticks, that are led themſelves by their own dreams and irrational doctrines, and obtrude them upon the people, firſt, fall into all unnatural filthy practices; and ſecondly, teach the doctrine of Chriſtian liberty, ſo as to free all Chriſtians from all authority of Maſter or King (ſee 1 Tim. 6. 1, &c.) and thirdly, ſpeak contumelioufly of the Apoſtles and Governours of the Church, all that have any ſuperiority above or authority over them, ſee 2 Pet. 2. 10. (which three libertine and inſolent doctrines and practices are the peculiar character of thoſe hereticks.)

e. 9. Yet Michael the Archangel, when contending with the devil, he diſputed about the [e] body of Moſes durſt not bring againſt him a railing accuſation, but ſaid, The Lord rebuke thee.]

10. But theſe Gnoſticks, that pretend to know all things, upon this conceit ſpeak contumelioufly of thoſe things which are out of their reach, above their knowledge; but in things which nature it ſelf even in irrational creatures, and ſo in them, teaches them to be unlawfull, they againſt light of nature wilfully ingulf and immerſe themſelves in thoſe things.

John in all his Epiſtles inculcates charity) even proceeding to murther it ſelf, as Cain did to his brother; ſecondly, the great villanie that Balaam, to get a reward, inſnared the Iſraelites in, (ſee Rev. 2. 14.) and thirdly, the contempt and rebellion againſt ſuperiours, ſuch as was in Core againſt Moſes and Aaron (ſee note c.) and this will ſuddainly bring certain ruine upon them, as it did on thoſe other.

f. 11. Woe unto them; for they have gone in the way of Cain, and * ran greedily after [f] the error of Balaam for reward, and periſhed in the gainſaying of Core.]

* have been poured out, or run out, or ſet on fire by the ſeduction of Balaam by way of reward.

12. Theſe are unfit to be admitted (as blemiſhed ſacrifices were unlawfull to be offered) to your feſtival Chriſtian meetings, adjoined to the Sacrament (ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. g.) and coming thither they feed there luxurioufly; Men that make a ſhew like clouds in the air, as if they had much water in them, for the making men grow and bear fruit in godlineſſe, but indeed are empty, and have nothing in them, and conſequently are carried about from one vanity to another, as clouds that are eaſily driven by the wind: Trees they are, ſuch as in the Autumne, defaced, and deprived of their very leaves; as for fruit, they are not of the kind that beareth that, for in ſtead of Chriſtian fruits of purity, &c. theſe Gnoſticks bring forth all kind of impurities, and ſo after their Chriſtianity falling back into theſe villanies, they are twice dead in ſin, once before, then again after their converſion (ſee 2 Pet. 2. 22.) and ſo fit for nothing but eradication, which ſhall certainly befall them together with the Jewes, with whom they complie and join againſt the Chriſtians.

g. 12. Theſe are ſpots in your feaſts of charity, when they feaſt with you, feeding themſelves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; †[g] trees whoſe fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots;]

14. To theſe men belongs that prophecie of Enoch againſt wicked men, thoſe of the old world, whoſe exciſion he foretold, pronouncing fearfull deſtruction againſt them from heaven, by the miniſtery of his holy Angels, thoſe infinite multitudes and hoſts of them which attend and execute the judgments of God,

15. Utterly to deſtroy all ſuch impious men for all their abominable practices, and all their proud, contumelious language, which the enemies of God and men have ſpoken againſt Chriſt and his Apoſtles, and all his faithfull members, that for their conſtancy to the faith are hated, and reproached, and perſecuted by them.

15. To execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard ſpeeches which ungodly ſinners have ſpoken againſt him.]

16. Theſe are proud preſumptuous perſons, that refuſe to be governed, alwaies unſatisfied and querulous at their preſent condition, following their own luſts, without any reſtraint of laws, even of nature it ſelf, talk great high things of their Simon and Helena, as ſuperiour to the makers of the world, crying up ſome mens perſons as deep, perfect, knowing men, to the deſpiſing of all others, and all this to get gain by it, to avoid perſecutions from the Jews.

i. 16. Theſe are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own luſts, and their mouth ſpeaketh [i] great ſwelling words, having mens perſons in admiration becauſe of advantage.]

17. For the fortifying you againſt theſe ſeducers do you remember

17. But, beloved, remember ye the words which were ſpoken before of the Apoſtles of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt:]

remember what was foretold by Christ, Mat. 24. 10, 11, 12. and from him oft repeated by the Apostles, particularly S. Peter, 2 Pet. 3. 3.

* or, that under the last time shall come, for the Kings' MS. reads ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τοῦ χρόνου ἐλεύσονται † animal men

18. How that they told you * there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts.] 18. That before the coming of that fatal vengeance on the Jewes, there should be an eminent defection among Christians that should fall off to the hating and reproaching all orthodox constant professors, (see note on 2 Pet. 3. a.) and give themselves up to all impious living.

19. These be they who separate themselves, †[k] sensual, having not the Spirit.] 19. These despise & scorn and separate from all others, as being much more perfect then others, calling themselves the spiritual, and all others meer animal men, that have nothing of the Spirit in them; whereas indeed they themselves are the animal men, and have nothing of the Spirit, to which they so pretend, far from any thing of true Christianity or spirituality, and so their sensual actions convince. k.

20. But ye, beloved, building up your selves on your most holy faith, [l] praying in the holy Ghost,] 20. But you, my brethren, persevering, and growing in faith, according to that doctrine of truth and purity delivered to you, v. 3. and keeping to the publick assemblie, where the holy Spirit useth to assist, (and where he that hath the gift of prayer performs that duty, see Ephes. 6. 18.) and joining with him constantly, l.

21. Keep your selves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.] 21. Continue in your zeal and constancy toward God, and in your hope and dependence on him for mercy to preserve you here, and to bring you to blisse eternal.

* or, And some being wavering, rebuke, others save (or rescue) snatching them out of the fire, and on others have pity with fear (or, in fear) for the Kings MS. reads Καὶ ὃς μὲν ἐλέγχετε διακρινόμενος, καὶ ὃν σώζετε ἐκ πυρὸς ἁρπάζοντες, καὶ ὃν ἐλεᾶτε ἐν φόβῳ † or, only God our Saviour through Jesus Christ our Lord be glory, m.

22. * And of some have compassion, [m] making a difference; 22, 23. And for others that are any way corrupted by these false teachers, deal with them after different manners, as their condition requires: those that waver, and are unsteddy, rebuke, and so recover them out of their danger with mildnesse, do not cast them out of the Church, deal mildly and mercifully with them, receive and pardon them; and for others that are intangled and corrupted by these seducers, deal with them as the Angel did with Lot, proclaim the terrors of the Lord unto them, the approaching destruction that will suddenly overtake them, hasten them to fly for their life, to get out of this Sodome, this sinfull, abominable and formidable condition, as men that are ready to have the vengeance of heaven fall upon them, and these men snatch as out of a fire, which will singe them if they stay but one minute in it, and will devour them if they make any longer abode there, and bring them to a hatred of all the beginnings and least degrees of impurity and uncleanesse, as when a man would avoid the infection of the pestilence, he will fly from and not dare to touch any garment of an infected person: see Rev. 3. 4.

23. And others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire: hating even the garments spotted by the flesh.]

24. Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultlesse before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy,] 24. Now to him who is able to support you from apostatizing, and having done so, to present you to himself, at his appearance to destroy his enemies, such as shall be accounted blameless before him, and to have matter of rejoicing and triumph, not of sadnesse or fear from that coming of his,

25. To the † only wise God, our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, now and ever. Amen.] 25. To him whose dispensations and methods of œconomy are so infinitely wise, and those so wonderfully expres'd in this very matter, that none else can pretend to the like in any degree, to him who hath thus dealt with us in Jesus Christ, preserved us wonderfully who believe and keep constant to him, be ascribed * all glory and divine greatnesse, all dominion over all men and creatures from all eternity through all time, (particularly at this time wherein his power shines so illustriously) and to all eternity. So be it.

† or, only God our Saviour through Jesus Christ our Lord be glory, majesty, power and authority before all the ages, and now, and to all ages. Amen. For the Kings MS. reads, μόνῳ Θεῷ σωτῆρι ἡμῶν διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν δόξα, μεγαλωσύνη, κράτος, καὶ ἐξουσία σοῦ πάντες τοῦ αἰῶνος, καὶ νῦν, καὶ εἰς πάντας τοὺς αἰῶνας. Ἀμήν.

a. οἱ πάλαι προγεγραμμένοι εἰς τοῦτο τὸ κρίμα

V. 1. Before of old ordained to this condemnation] The way to interpret this, as almost any other difficulty in this Epistle, will be by comparing it with the second of Peter, which is almost perfectly parallel to this. There these men are spoken of c. 2, 3. and the passage that there seems parallel to οἱ πάλαι προγεγραμμένοι εἰς τοῦτο τὸ κρῖμα, is, ἐπάγοντες ἑαυτοῖς ταχινὴν ἀπώλειαν, v. 1. bringing on themselves swift destruction, and, οἷς τὸ κρῖμα ἔκπαλαι οὐκ ἀργεῖ, καὶ ἡ ἀπώλεια αὐτῶν οὐ νυστάζει, for whom judgment for some while lingreth not, and their destruction doth not nod, ver. 3. which signifies in both places the certain and quick destruction that is likely to come upon those men who, by complying with the Jews, and professing themselves to be such, to avoid their persecutions, are by the Roman destroyers taken for Jews, and so speedily (soon after this time) devoured. Only in this place is mentioned the πάλαι προγεγραμμένοι, being formerly set forth, or written of, answerable to which is 2 Pet. 2. 1. ἐν ὑμῖν ἔσονται ψευδοδιδάσκαλοι, among you shall be false teachers, which being an affirmation that there shall be, must be grounded on some prophecie or prediction that there should. And that is clearly to be found in Christ's prediction of the destruction of the Jews, Mat. 24. 10. before which there should come false prophets, all one with the false teachers in S. Peter (see 1 Joh. 2. 6.) by which the Gnosticks are certainly to be understood; (see Note on Mat. 24. d.) And therefore at the writing of Saint Jude's Epistle, these being actually come in, he speaks not of them by way of prophecie that they shall come, but applies to them the former prophecie, that they are the men that were before written or propheſied of by Christ in the Gospel of S. Matthew, and so capable of that title. In stead of this when S. John, 1 Joh. 2. 18. speaks of this very matter, he saith, καθὼς ἠκούσατε ὅτι ὁ Ἀντίχριστος ἔρχεται, καὶ νῦν πολλοὶ Ἀντίχριστοι γεγόνασι, as ye have heard that Antichrist cometh, so now there are many Antichrists, by which, saith he, we know that it is the last hour: just as S. Matthew had made it a prognostick of the coming of that παυσελθεία or fatal period of the Jews. By this it appears, first, that πάλαι formerly here referrs to Christ's time, προγεγραμμένοι forewritten of, to Mat. 24. or the passage there set down, and τὸ κρῖμα judgment, or condemnation, to that great destruction that should fall about that time upon all the obdurate unbelieving Jews, and false teachers, Gnosticks, or other abominable Christians, whose sin is set down in the following words, ἀσεβεῖς, impious, &c. their judgment or condemnation in these. As for the word προγεγραμμένος it self, it signifies no more then to be set forth, or exposed to publick view (as πρόγραμμα is any thing pasted up upon a door to signifie ought, ἔκθεσις in Phavorinus) and so we have it used, Gal. 3. 1. οἷς κατ' ὀφθαλμοὺς προεγράφη, to whom Christ hath been set forth before their eyes; only by the πάλαι added to it, it is here made to signifie prophecie or prediction, somewhat formerly set forth, or declared of them. And that not only their sin, their false doctrine, and flie coming in was foretold, but their punishment and destruction also (by this famous coming of Christ to the destruction of his crucifiers) appears 2 Thess. 2. 8, &c. where S. Paul foretelling it, most probably referres to some prediction of Christ to this matter. And such is that of Mat. 16. 25. that they that will save their lives, ſhall loſe them, and only they that hold out and continue conſtant in their confeſſion of Chriſt, ſhall eſcape this ruine, Mat. 10. 22. and 24. 13. And ſo this is the full meaning of this phraſe, οἱ πάλαι πεγγεγραμμένοι εἰς τοῦτο τὸ κεῖμα, men whoſe impoſtures firſt, and then their vengeance alſo have been foretold by Chriſt. Unleſſe we ſhould farther adde to this, that the judgments that formerly fell on the like wicked men, and the denuntiations of thoſe judgments by Enoch, &c. v. 14. ſhould here be referred to alſo, as emblematical and typical predictions of the puniſhment that is ſure to fall on theſe men, upon that principle of divine judgment, that they who are parallel in the ſins ſhall be alſo in the puniſhment.

b. Δεσπότην Θεὸν καὶ Κύριον.

Ib. Denying the only Lord God——] The various readings in this place, ſome having, but the King's MS. leaving out, the word Θεὸν God, deſerve to be conſidered. If Θεὸν God be not read, then the whole period will belong to Jeſus Chriſt alone, without any mention of God the Father, and affirm of him, that he is our only Maſter and Lord, referring to his great work of our Redemption, by which he thus purchaſed us unto himſelf to be his peculiar ſervants, ſo as any other falſe Gods or Devils, ſo as Simon Magus, that now ſet up againſt him, muſt never have any part of our honour, or worſhip, or obedience from him. But if Θεὸν God be read, then it will be doubtfull which of theſe two ſenſes is to be affixed to it. For 1. it may be thus rendred, Τὸν μόνον δεσπότην Θεὸν καὶ Κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, Our only Maſter, God and Lord, Jeſus Chriſt, making thoſe three the ſeveral attributes of Jeſus Chriſt; viz. that he is, firſt, our only Maſter, ſecondly, our only God, and thirdly, our only Lord. And this, underſtood in the Catholick ſenſe of the antient Fathers and Councils, is a moſt divine truth, that Chriſt is our Maſter, by title of Redemption, and our only Maſter, not excluding God the Father and God the holy Ghoſt, (for as he and his Father are one, ſo he and the holy Ghoſt are one alſo) but all other pretenders, ſuch as Simon, that thus aſſumed to himſelf to be that truly which Chriſt, ſaid he, appeared to be here on earth; and ſo in like manner, in the ſame way of interpretation, that Chriſt is our only God, & only Lord. And this interpretation proceeds upon that way of punctation which is ordinarily retained in our Copies, no comma after Θεὸν God, but all read in one coherent ſenſe, τὸν μόνον δεσπότην Θεὸν καὶ Κύριον, our only maſter God and Lord Jeſus Chriſt. A ſecond rendring may alſo poſſibly belong to it, in caſe there were, or ought to be, a comma after Θεὸν God. For then Θεὸν God, being ſeparated from that which follows, would denote God the Father, and conſequently τὸν μόνον δεσπότην, the only maſter, muſt belong to him; which if it doe, then it muſt be affirmed of theſe Gnoſtick-hereticks, the followers and worſhippers of Simon, that they did deny God the Father, our only maſter, as well as they denied our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And ſo indeed we read of him, that he aſſumed to be that God who appeared to Moſes in mount Sinai, and accordingly the ſtatue was erected to him at Rome: and that is the meaning of exalting himſelf above all that is called God, 2 Theſſ. 2. 4. and of what Ireneus ſaith of him, that he affirmed himſelf to be ſublimiſſimam virtutem, hoc eſt, eum qui ſit ſuper omnia Pater, the ſublimeſt vertue, that is, him who is the Father above all things, and that the Jews God was one of his Angels, and a great deal more. See 2 Theſſ. 2. Note e.

c. Αἰώνιον πῦρ

V. 7. Eternal fire] The phraſe αἰώνιον πῦρ in all other places, Mat. 18. 8. and 24. 41, 48. ſignifying the fire wherein the damned are tormented day and night for ever and ever, Rev. 20. 10. it is yet thought probable that in this place, being applied to theſe cities of Sodome, &c. it ſhould be taken in another notion, for an utterly-deſtroying fire, ſuch being the fire and brimſtone that fell on thoſe cities. But for this there appeareth no neceſſity; but on the other ſide there is a conjuncture of all circumſtances of the Context to perſwade the underſtanding it here of the fire of Hell, as in all the other places. For firſt, It is evident that Sodome and Gomorrah, and the cities about them, ſignifie in this place the inhabitants of thoſe cities; for to thoſe only, and not to the walls and buildings of the cities, belongs the ἐκπορνεύσασαι, having given themſelves over to fornication. And then ſure thoſe that ſuffer the vengeance of eternal hell (and therein are ſet forth for an example what we Chriſtians, falling into the like courſes, are to expect) are not the walls but the inhabitants alſo. Now of theſe it is here affirmed in the Preſent-tenſe, πρόκεινται δεῖγμα, they that thus formerly ſinned, are ſet forth a pattern, or an example (as men which are puniſhed are) πυρὸς αἰωνίου δίκην ὑπέχουσαι, ſuffering, or undergoing, (at the preſent, when Jude writes it) the vengeance of eternal fire. Of the unbelieving Iſraelites he had affirmed, v. 5. that God ἀπώλεσεν (in the Aoriſt) deſtroyed them: of the Angels, v. 6. that μὴ τηρήσαντας ἀλλὰ ἀπολιπόντας, having not kept but forſaken their principality, τετήρηκεν in the Preter-tenſe, he hath kept them under darkneſſe in everlaſting chains unto the judgment of the great day, and ſo of theſe cities in the Aoriſt, ἐκπορνεύσασαι, having given themſelves over to fornication, καὶ ἀπελθοῦσαι, and having gone——But now in the latter part of the verſe it is only in the Preſent-tenſe, they are propoſed or ſet forth a pattern, or an example, ὑπέχουσαι, in the Preſent, undergoing, or ſuffering, the vengeance of eternal fire; either not at all referring by thoſe words to their long agoe paſt deſtruction by fire and brimſtone, which was notorious in ſacred ſtory, and ſo ſufficiently intimated in the very mention precedent of Sodome and Gomorrah; or if he did, yet withall conſidering it as a judgment ſtill continued, then begun as an eſſay ſignificative of what followed, but ſtill protracted without any releaſe, they ſtill ſuffer, or undergoe, that vengeance of fire, which fire is withall αἰώνιον, never likely to have an end. And this is the exacteſt and propereſt notion of theſe words, which I therefore preferre before any other.

d. Δόξαι

V. 8. Dignities] What the word δόξαι ſignifies in this place, and the parallel of S. Peter, 2 Pet. 2. 10. is a little uncertain. Though it be literally rendred Glories, in the Abſtract, yet there is no doubt but that it denotes the perſons (the ſubjects of that glory or greatneſſe) in the Concrete, as ἐξουσίαι powers, Rom. 13. 1. ſignifies rulers, or men in power and authority; and Κυριότης, 2 Pet. 2. 10. thoſe in whom dominion is veſted. But whether theſe be men or Angels, is not ſo clear. That they are Angels is made probable by theſe arguments; firſt, Becauſe the appearance of Angels in the Old Teſtament is ordinarily expreſſed by δόξα Κυρίου, the glory of the Lord, the appearances of them being viſible in bright ſhining clouds, as hath oft been ſaid. And ſo agreeably Angels in the Plural, or the order or hierarchy of Angels conſidered together, may be called δόξαι Glories, that is, thoſe glorious creatures that attend and wait on God. Secondly, 'Tis obſervable Col. 2. 8. that the Apoſtle ſpeaking of Angels, uſeth the phraſe ἃ μὴ ἑώρακεν, which he that is, man, ἃ μὴ ἑώρακεν hath not ſeen, expreſſing the Angels by that periphraſis, thoſe that are inviſible ſpirits, never ſeen, nor conſequently particularly known by any man, creatures above us, out of our reach. And ſo in like manner this Apoſtle here ſpeaking more of theſe δόξαι, glories, ver. 10. expreſſes them by ὅσα μὴ οἴδασι, thoſe things which they know not, and 2 Pet. 2. 12. ἃ ἀγνοοῦσι, thoſe which they are ignorant of, which is an expreſſion directly parallel to that other uſed by S. Paul of Angels. Thirdly, Becauſe of other dominions their contempt had been ſet down before, both in S. Peter and here, ὅσα οἴδασι. ἃ ἀγνοοῦσι.

by the phraſe ἀθετῆσι and καταφρονῦσι, ſetting at nought, making nothing of, and deſpiſing, ſcornfully behaving themſelves toward their ſuperiours, and ſo needed not be repeated again in theſe words. But yet on the other ſide it muſt be ſaid, that what was before ſaid of their ſetting dominion at nought, may referre to their doctrine of Chriſtian liberty, or their not being ſubject to any ruler or Maſter, which is noted in them, 1 Tim. 6. 1. and then this of their practice ſuperſtructed on that doctrine, their ſpeaking contumeliouſly of thoſe that exerciſe that dominion, may be fit enough to be added to the former, and ſo may be ſet down in that phraſe βλασφημῦσι δόξας, they ſpeak evil of glories. And that it doth ſo ſignifie is moſt probable: Firſt, becauſe we find not in any Church-writers that the hereſie of the Gnoſticks had any thing in it of particular oppoſition or defiance to Angels, but on the contrary the Æones, noting the Angels, make up a great part of their Divinity. A ſecond argument may be taken from the mention of the gainſaying of Core, whereby this ſin of theſe Gnoſticks is exemplified ver. 11. where as ἀντιλογία contradicting, and βλασφημία evil ſpeaking, are of the ſame importance; ſo we know the ſin of Core conſiſted in the murmuring and rebelling againſt Moſes and Aaron, that were by God ſet over them. And for thus doing the Gnoſticks are (2 Tim. 3.) diſtinctly compared to Jannes and Jambres the Ægyptian Magicians (and ſuch was Simon and Menander, and the chief of theſe) who by their ſorceries reſiſted Moſes coming in Gods name to the Iſraelites and to Pharaoh, as theſe did the Apoſtles of Chriſt. And ſo this will be the meaning of the phraſe, ſpeaking ill of thoſe that are ſet over them, that is, contumelious uſage of the Apoſtles or Governours of the Church (who are called δόξα χριστῦ, the glory of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 8. 23.) with whom particularly they had many controverſies and diſputations (referred to ver. 9.) in which thoſe contumelious ſpeeches on the Gnoſticks part would be but effects of their great daring pride (mentioned 2 Pet. 2. 10. immediately before it) and of their diſcriminating themſelves from all others, v. 19. and ſo is very probable to have been obſervable and accuſable in them. See Note on the title of 2 John a.

e. V. 9. Body of Moſes] What the body of Moſes here ſignifies, will eaſily be diſcerned by comparing it with the place from whence this controverſie of the Angel with the Devil is here cited, and that is undoubtedly Zach. 3. 1. There we have Joſhua the High-prieſt ſtanding before the Angel of the Lord, and Satan ſtanding at his right hand to reſiſt him, or diſpute or plead againſt him, as the ſtanding at the right hand notes an accuſer, impleading another, (Let Satan ſtand at his right hand, Pſal. 109.) And the only words which are there mentioned from the Angel (under the name of the Lord) to Satan are theſe here ſet down, The Lord rebuke thee. Now the matter of controverſie then between the Angel and the Devil, the good and bad Angel, was (that which is the ſubject of that preſent Viſion) the reedifying of the Temple, and reſtoring of the ſervice of God among the Jewes at Jeruſalem. This is called the body of the Jewes, 2 Mac. 15. 12. where we have Onias praying for the whole body of the Jewes: and may as fitly be ſtyled the body of Moſes, in the ſame manner as the Chriſtian Church, or aſſembling of Chriſtians for the ſervice of Chriſt, is called the body of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 12. 20, 25, 27. Eph. 1. 23. and 4. 12, 16. Col. 1. 18. Jam. 3. 2. The Judaical Temple and worſhip and ſervice depending upon Moſes, as the Lawgiver, or principle, or head under God, from whence it came; as Chriſt's being the Lawgiver of the Chriſtian Church, and inſtituting Apoſtles, &c. in it, is the reaſon why he is called the head of that, and the Church the body of Chriſt, as on the other ſide, we know he calls his body a Temple, Deſtroy this Temple, &c. and the Apoſtle of us, that our bodies are the Temples of the holy Ghoſt. Agreeable hereunto it is, that all Chriſtians, as they live together in publick communion, congregating together in aſſemblies, are called (in reference to this notion of body) members and fellow-members, and the reſtoring the congregations or ἐπισωαγωγαὶ ὠπῶν is called καθαρισμὸς, (ſee Note on 2 Cor. 13. c. and Epheſ. 4. 12.) And ſo in Ignatius's Epiſtle to the Church of Smyrna, he talks of congratulating with the Church of Syria, becauſe they are in peace, and ἀποκαθιςάθη αὐτοῖς τὸ ἴδιον σωμάτιον, their body is reſtored to them; where their reſtitution to the free publick ſervice of God (ſuch as here Joſhua and Zerubbabel were foretold to labour for, and Satan to labour againſt, and the Archangel to contend with him about it) is expreſſed by the reſtoring of their own body. One difficulty here ſtill remaineth, how this example is proper to the point in hand, ſpeaking evil of glories, or dignities, or dominions. And that which ſeems moſt reaſonable is, that the Devil here is the ſame that in other places is called Belzebub the Prince of Devils, the Prince of the air, and Prince of darkneſſe, and Rev. 9. 11. in the antient MS. in the Kings Library, ὁ ἄρχων τῆς ἀβύσσυ, ὁ ἄγγελος, the Angel, the Prince of the Abyſſe, or Pit, who having been once a principal Angel in heaven, having loſt that dignity, is now the Prince of hell, and otherwhere is noted by Principality or Power, he that hath power over the other devils. Now if Michael the Archangel in a quarrel with him, about a matter of ſuch weight as was the reſtitution of the ſervice of God among the Jewes, would not uſe any bitterneſſe or execration againſt him, then how unreaſonable is it for theſe Gnoſticks, how without all excuſe, thus to demean themſelves toward the Apoſtles of Chriſt? That the Devil is here look'd on in this notion, may be concluded by comparing it with 2 Pet. 2. 11. (which ſure is parallel to this) where ſpeaking evil of them muſt needs refer to the δόξαι glories or dignities, v. 10. And therefore if the Devil be comprehended there under that phraſe, (as here he is diſtinctly named) it muſt follow that he is here look'd on as a δόξα or dignity, that is, as a Prince, though it be of devils.

Σῶμα Μωσέως

Ἐπιτιμήσαι σοι Κύριος

f. V. 11. The error of Balaam] This expreſſion of S. Jude, τῇ πλάνῃ τοῦ Βαλαὰμ μισθοῦ ἐξεχύθησαν, hath much of difficulty in it. What is meant by πλάνη error may appear by Rom. 1. 27. where it is clearly ſet to ſignifie their ſeduction to Idolatry, of which the Gnoſticks were guilty, and whereby they fell into all thoſe unnatural ſins, ἄρσενες ἐν ἄρσεσι, contrary to the φυσικὴ χρῆσις τῆς θηλείας, in the beginning of that verſe. Thus is the word πλάνη uſed 1 Theſſ. 2. 3. not only for ſeduction in general, but particularly that of the Gnoſticks, being there joined with ἀκαθαρσία, uncleanneſſe; and ſo perhaps Eph. 4. 14. where the cunning of the falſe teachers is ſaid to be uſed πρὸς μεθοδίαν πλάνης, for the contriving, or deſigning of deceit, or ſeduction, that is, for the infuſing this great corruption of the Gnoſticks, all manner of luſt and filthineſſe: ſo it is clearly taken, 2 Pet. 2. 18. where πλάνη is interpreted by the ἐπιθυμία σαρκὸς and ἀσέλγειαι, luſts of the fleſh, and filthineſſes, preceding in that verſe; and as clearly 2 Pet. 3. 17. τῇ τῶν ἀθέσμων πλάνῃ συναπαχθέντες, led away with the deceit of unruly men, referring to the ſeduction and abominable doctrines of the filthy Gnoſticks. For that this was the πλάνη τοῦ Βαλαὰμ, the ſeduction into which Balaam brought the Iſraelites by his counſel to Balak (when, as the Hieruſalem Targum reads, Numbers 25. 14. he adviſed Balak in theſe words, Veni nunc, conſulam tibi quid populo huic facies: Fac eos peccare, Come now, I will counſel thee what thou ſhalt do to this people: Make them ſin) appears by Num. 25. 1. but eſpecially by 2. Pet. 2. 15. and Rev. 2. 14. where this πλάνη is called in one ἡ ὁδὸς, in the other ἡ διδαχὴ Βαλαὰμ, the way, and, the doctrine of Balaam. Now for ἐξεχύθησαν, ſome probability there is by comparing it with that place of Rom. 1. 27. (which hath much agreement with this paſſage) that it ſhould be a miſtake in the Copy for ἐξεκαύθησαν, burning, there, and denote burning in luſt. And thus 'tis clear the Syriack read it, who render it אשתרחו exarſerunt, or, as the new Paris Edition renders it, libidinosè exarſerunt, they burnt libidinouſly: but the word as it is, is capable of a very commodious interpretation, ſo as to agree with the notion given of ἀνάχυσις, 1 Pet. 4. 4. for thoſe unnatural ſins of uncleanneſſe and confuſion of ſexes. Thus when the Gloſſe of Phavorinus (as the printed Copies have it) renders ἐξεχύθησαν by nothing but ἠφανίσθησαν were deſtroyed, and Heſychius by ἐφανίσθησαν (which muſt needs be falſe printed) that may very probably be a miſtake of the Copy for ἐπλανήθησαν, uſed in ſtead of this word in the parallel place 2 Pet. 2. 15. (So Pſal. 13. 2. παρ' ὀλίγον ἐξεχύθη almoſt gone out of the way) noting here thoſe great declinations and deviations from the right way, theſe tranſgreſſions of the Law of Nature. And ſo ἐξεχύθησαν will ſignifie the breaking or running out (as a veſſel, Luk. 5. 37.) into all confuſion of luſts and baſe practices, ſuch as wherein the Gnoſticks tranſcended and exceeded all the men in the word. Laſtly, the word μισθῷ hath difficulty and doubt in it, whether being uſed Adverbially it be to be rendred ἀντὶ μισθοῦ, by way of reward, or elſe ἕνεκα μισθοῦ, for reward's ſake. The parallel place, 2 Pet. 2. 15. inclines to the latter of theſe: for there on the mention of Balaam 'tis added, ὃς μισθὸν ἀδικίας ἠγάπησεν, who loved the reward of unrighteouſneſſe, noting that what he did by his counſel for the bringing the Iſraelites to theſe ſins, he did out of covetouſneſſe, or μισθῷ ἕνεκα, to get reward from Balak. But the other place (which may paſſe for a parallel alſo) Rom. 1. 27. perſwades the former: for there all their obduration of heart, v. 28. Gods delivering them up to the νοῦς ἀδόκιμος, reprobate minde, in doing τὰ μὴ καθήκοντα, going on ſenſeleſly in all their abominable ſins, is ſaid to be ἀντιμισθία πλάνης, a retribution, or reward, or puniſhment, proportioned to their Idolatrous practice; and ſo here it will be true of the ſeduction of Balaam, or that Balaamitical filthineſſe, that the Gnoſticks were permitted to fall, or by God were delivered up to it without any reſtraints, as a puniſhment to their ſin in converting Chriſtianity into Licentiouſneſſe. And this ſeems to be the more probable rendring of the place, thus, that they fell into thoſe filthy libidinous burnings, or confuſions of luſts, the ſame that Balaam ſeduced the Iſraelites into, and this by way of reward, or juſt puniſhment from God, who thus puniſhed them with deſertion, and tradition unto this ſtupid ſenſeleſſe continuing and multiplying of theſe ſins. Thus when the Syriack renders it, ובתר טעיותה דבלעם באגרא אשתרחו, the Latine interpreter reads verbatim, Et poſt errorem Balaam in mercede exarſerunt, and the Latine Paris Edition in mercedem, both joining the μισθῷ to the ἐξεκαύθησαν, that they by way of reward, or for their puniſhment and reward, did thus fall into theſe libidinous burnings, not referring to that of Balaam's doing what he did in contemplation of reward.

V. 12. Trees whoſe fruit withereth] Φθινόπωρον is a ſeaſon of the year; τετρὰς μετὰ τὸ θέρος, ſaith Phavorinus, the ſeaſon after the Summer, and again, ἀπὸ τῆς πέντε καὶ δεκάτης Αὐγούστου μηνὸς, the ſeaſon beginning from the fifteenth, or, ſay others, the 22. of Auguſt, continued to the ſame day of December. Thus is the year divided in Sextus Empiricus adv. Mathem. l. 5. c. 1. Ἐν Κριῷ ἰσημερία γίνεται τετρὰς, ἐν Αἰγοκέρῳ δὲ χειμερινὴ, ἐν Καρκίνῳ δὲ θερινὴ, καὶ ἐν Ζυγῷ φθινοπωρινὴ, making this to Winter, as the Spring is to Summer. And Olympiodorus in Meteor. p. 20. θέρος μὲν οὖν β' διαιροῦσιν θέρος, ὅταν ἥλιός ἐστιν ἐν Καρκίνῳ καὶ Παρθένῳ, καὶ οἷς ὀπώρᾳ, ἡνίκα ἐστὶν ὁ ἥλιος ἐν Λέοντι ὅταν ὁ Σείριος φαίνῃ· ἡ δὲ ἐξῆς ὥρα φθινόπωρον καλεῖται, ὡς ἂν μὴ τῷ φθίσιν γινομένην. By which it appears that φθινόπωρον begins after both parts of Summer are ended, θέρος and ὀπώρα, after the dog-ſtar hath done ſhining, when it draweth toward Winter, and the ſeaſon, though it begins in Auguſt on the 15. or 22. yet reacheth out to Chriſtmaſſe, that is, to the ſharpeſt and depth of Winter, and is ſo called, becauſe it begins from the end of the ſeaſon of ripe fruit, that is, φθινούσης ὀπώρας. In this ſenſe of the Subſtantive, φθινοπωρινὸς, the derivative Adjective, muſt ſignifie that which belongs to that time: and ſo the Arabick Interpreter in the New Paris Edition of the Bible reads חרופיות autumnales, and ſo S. Hierome alſo; and ſo φθινοπωρινὰ δένδρα will be trees in that condition in which they uſe to be at that time of year, that is, bare, having loſt their leaves, and having nothing deſireable on them (like the waterleſſe empty clouds precedent.) So in * Cinnamus, after φθινούσης ἤδη τῆς ὥρας, which is the diſſolving of the word φθινόπωρον, and deſcription of this ſeaſon, by the decaying of the beauty of trees, &c. it preſently followes, ἅτε τῆς ἀμφιλαφοῦς σκιᾶς ἐπιλοίπους ἤδη τοῖς δένδρεσι, the leaves or ſhade, (Ἀμφίλαφες, κατάσκιον, ſaith Heſychius) had now left the trees; and this a direct embleme of the Gnoſticks, and quite contrary to the godly man, deſcribed Pſal. 1. 3, 4. whoſe leaf doth not wither: and then to theſe is fitly added ἄκαρπα fruitleſſe, trees that have neither the verdure of leaves, nor profit of fruit on them, trees which, beſide that they bear no fruit, are deprived and naked, and bare of leaves alſo, and ſuch are thoſe that are come to the denying of Chriſtian profeſſion it ſelf, as we know the Gnoſticks did. Another ſignification ſeems to be followed by the Syriack, who read דאיפי אבהון quarum fructus emarcuit, or defecit, whoſe fruit hath withered, or failed, according to a notion of φθινόπωρον for ἡ νόσος, a diſeaſe, in Phavorinus, that diſeaſe probably ſuch as befalls fruit and trees, φθίνουσα ὀπώρας, a blaſt or ſut, perhaps ἐρυσίβη arugo, that ſpoils fruit and corn; for, ſaith Phavorinus and Heſychius, φθίνει, ἡ ἐρυσίβη, and then δένδρα φθινοπωρινὰ will be blaſted trees: and this will alſo do well to ſignifie theſe rotten putrid Gnoſticks, a blaſted ſort of Chriſtians, withall ἄκαρπα, without any kinde of fruit on them. But the former of theſe is moſt agreeable to the nature of the word, and ſo fitteſt to be adhered to.

V. 14. Cometh with ten thouſands of his Saints] What the coming of God ſignifies, hath oft been ſaid (ſee Mat. 16. o. and 24. b.) executing vengeance upon wicked men, and that coming of his μετ' ἀγγέλων, with his Angels, Mat. 16. 27. thoſe being the miniſters and executioners of his vengeance, and withall his ſatellitium or guard, whoſe preſence in any place is the only thing to determine Gods omnipreſence to one place more then to another. And theſe are the μυριάδες ἁγίαι here, (not myriads of Saints or holy men, but ſuch as are mentioned Heb. 12. 22. μυριάδες ἀγγέλων myriads of Angels, or, as the Targum on Deut. 33. 2. Myriades angelorum ſanctorum, where we read only ſaints, from the Hebrew which reads of holy ones, that is, Angels, but I ſay) his holy myriads, or hoſts, of Angels, with ten thouſands in each, which makes his coming ſo ſolemn and ſo formidable a thing. And thus in the prophecie of Zacharie, chap. 14. 5. where we read, The Lord my God ſhall come, and all the ſaints with thee, it is to be read from the Hebrew, with all his holy ones, that is, with his guard of Angels, and that (it ſeemeth) here, ποιῆσαι κρίσιν, to execute judgment, and rebuke, &c. That Enoch thus propheſied phesied in his time of these Gnosticks under Christ, we are not told; but that he prophesied to them, that is, that his prophecie concerning the excision of the old world, for such sins as these are now guilty of, is very pertinent to them, and fit to be considered by them. Thus we see S. Peter Ep. 2. ch. 2. applies to them all the judgments that had ever befallen sinners, particularly that in Noah's time, of which that Enoch prophesied, there is no question, and we have these remains of it. First, the name of his son Methuselah. שלח Sela in Hebrew signifies mission, sending or powring out waters on the earth, Job 5. 10. שלח מים, he sends out waters on the fields; to which, saith Bochart, Arphaxad related when he called his first-born Sela, in memory of the Deluge, two years after which Arphaxad was born, Gen. 11. 6. And so in like manner Enoch, that prophesied of this destruction, and foresaw by the Spirit, that it would soon follow the death of this his son, he called his name מתו שלח, his death, emission. To this it is considerable, what we find in * Stephanus Byzant. in the word Ἰκόνιον, where mentioning Enoch, or Hannoch, he saith of him, that he lived 300. years and above, and that the inhabitants asked the Oracle how long he should live, ἐδόθη ὁ χρησμὸς ὅτι τότε τελευτήσαι & πάντες διαφθαρήσονται, and the Oracle answered, that when he was dead all men should be destroyed (or, as the word will bear, corrupted, in that sense in which we find Gen. 6. 2. soon after Enoch's death, the earth was corrupt before God, which how it belongs to filthy lusts, hath oft been shewed) which he applies to Deucalion's flood, and the universal destruction there, and adds, that the news of this Oracle was so sadly received by the inhabitants, that ὅθεν Ἄνακτι (perhaps it should be Ἄνακος, for so he hath it before in the Genitive case) κλαύσειν, to waile for Enoch, is proverbially used, ὅπ᾽ ἐπὶ λίαν ὀικτιζομένων, for those that mourn excessively. Here 'tis possible that the confounding the two stories of Enoch and Methuselah made up this relation: For as to the latter part, of the flood following his death, that may best belong to the son Methuselah, whose name was thus prophetical; but for the years of his life, those seem to belong to Enoch, for he lived 365. years. Suidas, lightly mistaking his name, calls him Nannac, who, saith he, is reported to be a King before the flood, and foreseeing the approach thereof, he assembled all men to the Temple, and with tears ἱκέτευσε prayed to avert it: and Erasmus out of Hermogenes makes the same relation, and cites the Proverb, τὰ Καννάκεω κλαύσω, out of Herodes the Iambick writer, rendring it Cannacæ more plorem, as if it referred to his tears for averting the Deluge, when it more probably referrs to the peoples lamenting, forecited from Stephanus. See Eupolemus in Eusebius Præpar. l. 9. who speaking of Methuselah, Enoch's son, saith, that he knew all by the Angels of God, and (Enoch being all one with Atlas) by these all Astrologie came to the Greeks.

i. λαλεῖν ὑπέρογκα

V. 16. Great swelling words] What is meant by the λαλῶν ὑπέρογκα here, may best be guest by comparing it with Dan. 11. 36. where we have the same phrase, λαλήσει ὑπέρογκα: there the Context will sufficiently interpret it: The King shall doe according to his will, and he shall exalt himself, and magnifie himself above every God, and shall speak (marvellous, we render) high swoln things against the God of Gods. There doing according to his will, is casting off all fear or care of laws or justice; his exalting and magnifying himself above every God, is his Atheistical despising of all religion, whether the true or the false, the Jewish or Heathen worship; and his speaking the high swoln things against the God of Gods, is undervaluing the God of Israel, the only true God, and setting up some body else, as superiour to him, the same that is said of the Gnostick heresie, and their leader Simon, 2 Thess. 2. 4 that he opposeth, and exalteth himself over, or against, all that is called God, or worship. The same phrase is again used, Dan. 7. 8. στόμα ὑπέρογκα λαλῶν a mouth speaking great, or swelling, or lofty things. To one or both these passages of Daniel this place of Saint Jude seems to relate, joining these two together, walking after their own lusts, and their mouth speaketh ὑπέρογκα, high swoln words, as Dan. 11. doing according to his will, and speaking high swoln words, &c. And therefore we have here reason to take it in the same sense that there it appeareth to be used in; and though here be not mention of the God of Gods, against whom these stout things are spoken, yet to supplie it from thence; and so it will agree most perfectly to the character of the Gnosticks, 2 Thess. 2. 4. who certainly are the persons here described. For of them it is evident (see 2 Thess. 2. Note e.) that they attributed Divinity unto Simon, made him the uppermost God, and the God of Israel but a part of his creation, worshipp'd him and Helena his whore with sacrifices, &c. and so did the very thing that there is said of the King in Daniel. And whereas S. Peter in setting this down 2 Pet. 2. 18. adds unto it ματαιότητος of vanity, that may fitly be accorded with this in the notion of vanity for Idolatry, (see Rom. 8. Note h.) for such was their worship of Simon. See Note b.

Ματαιότητος

Ib. Sensual] Ψυχικὸς signifies here those that have no taste of any higher principle in them but of the sensitive soul, that suffer those affections to carry them away, to rule and have dominion over them. Contrary to these are the πνευματικοὶ spiritual, they that move by an higher principle, that having the assistance of God's Spirit, and divine revelation, do act and move accordingly. From hence it is that Hereticks, that pretend to greater purity then other men, and so separate from all others also, have generally desired to discriminate themselves from all others by calling themselves πνευματικοὶ, the spiritual, and all others ψυχικοὶ, animales. And so particularly did the Gnosticks & their followers in Irenæus; they forsooth were the spiritual, φύσει πνευματικοὶ naturally spiritual, and had no need of any of those graces and gracious actions which were required to other men, and by their ἀπολύτρωσις, a kind of Baptisme they had, became invisible to the Judge, and all the sins they could commit, could no more pollute them then the Sun-beams could be defiled by shining on a dunghil, or Gold by being in a kennel, the very character (a little improved) of these here, v. 18. walking after their godlesse lusts.

k. Ψυχικοὶ

Πνευματικοὶ

V. 20. Praying in the Holy Ghost] It is sufficiently known that the Apostles, and those that were by the holy Ghost set apart for the planting of the Church, had many miraculous gifts, especially χαρίσματα or graces; not every one all, but one one, another another. Among these, saith S. Chrysostome, there was in these first times, χάρισμα εὐχῆς, the gift of prayer, as also the gift of healing, of singing, prophesying, &c. 1 Cor. 14. 26. (see Note on Ephes. 6. g.) This, saith he, was bestowed ὡς ἵνα τινὰ, upon some one, who did pray for the rest, and aske those things which were useful for them, and teach others how to form prayers. Some of these special prayers thus conceived, and frequently used by them, which were fit for the common perpetual use of all Christians, were received and kept by those whom they thus taught, and are they which the antients mean by the Liturgies of S. James, &c. which, or some other in that disguise (or rather those with some other later mixtures) are still used by the Greek Church on solemn daies. These extraordinary χαρίσματα, as long as they lasted, are here called (as other special gifts of the Spirit also are) πνεῦμα ἅγιον the holy Ghost, and πνεῦμα Spirit, Ephes. 6. 18. the immediate moderatour, as it were, of all the petitions

of the Church at that time. But when those extraordinary χαρίσματα ceased, it is clear there was need of somewhat else to supplie that place, and that would not be (in any reason) to let every man pray as he would (for, for the preventing of that, and the ill consequents of it, it was that the χάρισμα διᾳτῆς gift of prayer had before been given) but set prepared forms, for the daily constant uses, and those provided by the Governours of the Church, Apostolical men, which had benefited under the prayers of those that had the χάρισμα or gift, and remembred some forms of theirs, at least the method and manner used by them. And this is the original of Liturgie among Christians.

m. διακρινομένους

V. 22. Making a difference] What διακρίνεσθαι in the Middle voice signifies, hath been said, Note on Jam. 2. c. and Note on c. 3. f. viz. to waver or doubt. And accordingly if it be here rendred (as in reason it must, and by Analogie with the use of the word in other places) it will be necessarie to adhere to the reading of the Kings MS. (which the vulgar Latine also appears to have followed, and the Nominative διακρινόμενοι will have no sense) οὓς μὲν διακρινομένους, Some indeed, viz. those that waver, though they are not yet faln off, either ἐλεᾶτε have pity on them, and out of compassion to such weaklings doe all that may tend to the settling or confirming them, or else (as the Kings MS. reads) ἐλέγχετε, reprove them, after the manner of fraternal correption and admonition, by that means timely to reduce them to perseverance and constancy, before yet they fall off and make shipwreck of the faith: whereas others that are already faln must be more nimbly handled, even snatch'd out of the fire, &c.

A PREMONITION Concerning the Interpretation OF THE APOCALYPSE.

HAving gone through all the other parts of the New Teſtament, I came to this laſt of the Apocalypſe, as to a rock that many had miſcarried and ſplit upon, with a full reſolution not to venture on the expounding of one word in it, but onely to perform one office to it, common to the reſt, the review of the Tranſlation: But it pleaſed God otherwiſe to diſpoſe of it; for before I had read (with that deſigne of tranſlating only) to the end of the firſt verſe of the book, theſe words, ἃ δεῖ γενέσθαι ἐν τάχει which muſt come to paſſe preſently, had ſuch an impreſſion on my mind, offering themſelves as a key to the whole prophecie, (in like manner as, this generation ſhall not paſſe till all theſe things be fulfilled, Mat. 24. 34. have demonſtrated infallibly to what coming of Chriſt that whole Chapter did belong) that I could not reſiſt the force of them, but attempted preſently a general ſurvey of the whole Book, to ſee whether thoſe words might not probably be extended to all the prophecies of it, and have a literal truth in them, viz. that the things foretold and repreſented in the enſuing viſions were preſently, ſpeedily, to come to paſſe, one after another, after the writing of them. But before I could prudently paſſe this judgment, which was to be founded in underſtanding the ſubject-matter of all the Viſions, ſome other evidences I met with, concurring with this, and giving me abundant grounds of confidence of this one thing, that although I ſhould not be able to underſtand one period of all theſe Viſions, yet I muſt be obliged to think that they belonged to thoſe times that were then immediately enſuing, and that they had accordingly their completion, and conſequently that they that pretended to find in thoſe Viſions the predictions of events in theſe later ages, and thoſe ſo nicely defined as to belong to particular acts and * perſons in this and ſome other kingdomes (a farre narrower circuit alſo then that which reaſonably was to be aſſigned to that one Chriſtian prophecie for the Univerſal Church of Chriſt) had much miſtaken the drift of it.

* Thomas Cromwell & Cranmer c. 14. 18. Q. Elizabeth, Chemnitius, Lord Treaſurer Cecill, the three firſt Angels, c. 16. 1, 3, 4. Brightman Apoc. Apoc.

The arguments that induced this concluſion were theſe; Firſt, that this was again immediately inculcated, v. 3. ὁ γὰρ καιρὸς ἐγγύς, for the time is nigh, and that rendred as a proof that theſe ſeven Churches, to whom the prophecie was written, were concerned to obſerve and conſider the contents of it, Bleſſed is he that reads, and he that hears, &c. (ἐμπράκτως ἀκοῦσαι, ſaith Arethas, that ſo hears as to practiſe) for the time, or ſeaſon, the point of time is near at hand. Secondly, that as here in the front, ſo c. 22. 6. at the cloſe, or ſhutting up of all theſe Viſions, and of S. John's Epiſtle to the ſeven Churches, which contained them, 'tis there again added, that God hath ſent his Angel to ſhew to his ſervants, ἃ δεῖ γενέσθαι ἐν τάχει, the things that muſt be ſpeedily, or ſuddainly; and immediatly upon the back of that are ſet the words of Chriſt, the Author of this prophecie, ἰδοὺ ἔρχομαι ταχύ, Behold I come quickly, not in the notion of his final coming to judgment (which hath been the cauſe of a great deal of miſtake, ſee Note on Mat. 24. b.) but of his coming to deſtroy his enemies, the Jewes, &c. and then, Bleſſed is he that obſerves, or keeps, the prophecies of this book, parallel to what had been ſaid at the beginning, c. 1. 3. Thirdly, that v. 10. the command is given to John, not to ſeal the prophecies of the book, which that it ſignifies that they were of preſent uſe to thoſe times, and therefore to be kept open, and not to be laid up as things that poſterity was only or principally concern'd in, appears by that reaſon rendred of it, ὅτι ὁ καιρὸς ἐγγύς ἐστι, becauſe the time is nigh, the ſame which had here at the beginning been given, as the reaſon that he that conſidered the prophecies was bleſſed in ſo doing.

This being thus far deduced out of ſuch plain words, ſo many times repeated, the next thing that offered it ſelf to me was, to examine and ſearch what was the deſigne of Chriſt's ſending theſe Viſions in a letter to the ſeven Churches. For by that ſomewhat might generally be collected of the matter of them. What that deſigne was, appeared ſoon very viſibly alſo from plain words, which had no figure in them, viz. that they and all Christians of those times, being by the terrors of the then pressing persecutions from the Jewes, and by the subtle insinuations of the Gnosticks (who taught it lawfull to disclaim and forswear Christ in time of persecution) in danger to lose their constancy, might be fortified by what they here find of the speedinesse of Gods revenge on his enemies, and deliverance of believers that continued constant to him. This is the full importance of c. 1. 3. and the same again c. 22. 7. Blessed are they that keep, &c. for the time is nigh. So in the proeme, or salutation, by John prefix'd to this Epistle of Christ (which from v. 4. to v. 9. was the result of his observations upon the Visions, and was not any part of the Visions themselves, and so gives us his notion and interpretation of this matter) we have these words, v. 7. Behold he cometh with clouds, &c. Where the coming of Christ being a known and solemn phrase to signifie remarkable judgment or vengeance on sinners (and in the first place on the Jewes that crucified him) and deliverance for persevering believers, (see Note on Mat. 24. b.) and the addition of the mention of clouds referring to Gods presence by Angels, the ministers of his power, whether in punishing or protecting, this ἔρχεται, or coming, in the Present, agrees perfectly and literally with what was before observed of the speedinesse of its approach at that time, & is an expresse signification what was the designe of sending the Visions to the Churches, viz. to fortifie them by that consideration.

Ἐρχεται

Proceeding therefore by these degrees, it presently appeared by demonstrable evidences, that the first part of that which was thus suddenly to come to passe, was the illustrious destruction of the Jewes (which was also, of all things imaginable, the surest and opportunest comfort and fortification to the Christians at that time, who were virulently persecuted by them, and indeed, as Tertullian saith, owed the beginning of all their persecutions to the Jewes.) This appeared first, by the latter part of the seventh verse of the first chapter, where the ὅτι τινες ἐξεκέντησαν, as many as pierced Christ, and πᾶσαι αἱ φυλαὶ τῆς γῆς all the tribes of the land, most clearly denote the Jewes (as ἡ γῆ the earth or the land hath been often shewed to signifie, and הארץ the land among the Jewish writers, see Note on Mat. 24. b.) whose wailing (there mentioned in the very words that are used, Mat. 24. 31.) was to be for the miseries that came upon them, Jam. 5. 1. For although some few words in this seventh verse (as the looking on him whom they had pierced) would seem to make that seventh verse parallel to that of Zach. 12. 10. and so, that it should belong to the contrition or repentance of the Jewes for the crucifying of Christ, as that seems to doe (and if it doe, may have had its completion at several times in many thousands of that nation, (see Act. 21. 20.) about three thousand being converted in one day, Act. 2. 39, and 41.) yet the whole frame of the words of this seventh verse together, Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and all that had pierced him, & all the tribes of the land shall mourn over, or upon, him, doth much more fully agree with the like words, Mat. 24. 30. where in the destruction (or the coming of the Son of man to this destruction) of the Jewes we have these words, And then shall all the tribes of the land mourn, and shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory, which clearly belongs to the destruction of the Jewes. To which I shall only adde, that because that royal coming of Christ consisted of two parts, to destroy the impenitent Jewes remarkably, and as remarkably to rescue or save the penitent believers (and therefore in that place of Matthew it follows, v. 31. and his Angels shall gather the elect, &c. which belongs to that delivering of the penitent Christian Jewes) therefore that also of the Jewes repenting for the crucifixion of Christ (that is, of those Jewes that at any time did repent) may here be taken in, in the richnesse of this divine writing; and so the ordinary sense of the word in Zachary also will not be left out by this interpretation, which applies this verse to the destruction of the Jewes. So c. 6, 9, 10, 11, the souls beneath the altar, that crie for vengeance of all the blood that was shed in the land, is just parallel to that of Mat. 23. 35. that on the Jews of that generation should come all the blood that had been shed on the land, &c. And accordingly all the rest of that sixth chap. of the great earthquake, the sun become black, and moon as blood, and the stars falling from heaven, &c. are the very particulars mention'd in the immediate subsequent discourse of Christ, Mat. 24. So most especially c. 11. 8. that the scene of these tragedies is the city where our Lord was crucified, that is, certainly and literally Jerusalem, called Sodome there, but that only πνευματικῶς mystically or spiritually (or in the vision) as the text specifies. So saith * S. Jerome, Hierusalem ex eo tempore non appellatur civitas sancta, sed sanctitatem & pristinum nomen amittens, spiritualiter vocatur Sodoma & Ægyptus, Jerusalem is called Sodom and Ægypt, referring to that place of Apoc. c. 11. which must therefore in his opinion be understood of Jerusalem. And so that Comment, which Bishop Tunstall set out for S. Ambrose's, interprets the sixth chap. to be meant of the Jewes. And in Arethas on c. 6. 12. concerning the earthquake, we find these words, τινὲς ταῦτα εἰς τὴν ὑπὸ τὸν Οὐεσπασιανὸν πολιορκίαν ἐξέλαβον, τὰ εἰρημένα τροπολογήσαντες, some expound this tropologically of Vespasian's siege, where the thing of which he makes doubt in that interpretation is the τροπολογία the figurativeness of the speech; (whereas perhaps it may be understood of real earthquakes; see Note on c. 6. f.) but he objects not against the interpretation or application of it to those times of Vespasian and the Jewes. So Rupertus Tuitiensis interprets that chapter of the Jewes: and I shall not need make use of the suf-

frages and consent of many more, who have been forced to acknowledge that truth. But I must suppose that it will be objected and pretended, that this destruction of Jerusalem was past at the time of John's receiving and writing this Vision, because 'tis affirmed by Eusebius, out of Irenæus, that 'twas received or seen (* ἑωράθη it was seen) πρὸς τῷ τέλει Δομετιανοῦ ἀρχῆς; at the end of Domitian's reigne. To this I might reply from the opinion of † S. Augustine, & some others, that these Visions were not all predictions of what was future, but the description of what had passed from the first coming of Christ; and from venerable * Bede, that John recapitulates from the suffering of Christ; and † Rupertus Tuitiensis, that the Apocalypse comprehends what had been, what is, and what should be the state of the Church; and this to very good purpose, by what was past to confirm Christians in what was future, and now farther to be declared. And 'twould be no great objection against this, that 'tis all set down as a prophecie; for 'tis no new thing for prophecies sometimes to speak in the future tense of things that are past; as Dan. 7. 17. These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth, where yet the Chaldæan Monarchy was long before risen, and now near expiration. But to passe this over, I answer more distinctly to the testimony of Irenæus; First, that what he affirms concerning John's vision at the end of Domitian, is not of all, but particularly of that Vision of the number of the beast, c. 13. 18. Thus will Eusebius's words be understood, Εἰ δὲ ἔδει ἀναφανδὸν ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ κηρύττεσθαι τὄνομα αὐτοῦ, δι' ἐκείνου ἂν ἐῤῥέθη τοῦ τὴν ἀποκάλυψιν ἑωρακότος, οὐ δὲ πρὸ πολλοῦ χρόνου ἑωράθη, &c. If the name of Antichrist ought to be proclaimed openly now, it would have been declared by him that saw the revelation, for it was not seen any long time agoe. Where 'tis clear that ἑωράθη was seen may belong to τὄνομα the name of the beast, as before ἐῤῥέθη, declared, did. And that it not only may, but must be so understood, appears by the Latine of Irenæus (which only is extant) which reads it thus, Antichristi nomen per ipsum antique editum fuisset, qui & Apocalypsin viderat; neque enim ante multum temporis visum est, sed penè sub nostro seculo ad finem Domitiani imperii, The name of Antichrist would have been published by him, who saw the Apocalypse; for it was not seen any long time since, but almost under our age at the end of Domitian's Empire. Where the word visum in the neuter, seen, not visa in the feminine, belongs apparently to the name, not to the Apocalypse. Secondly, I answer, that although it should still be acknowledged to be the opinion of Irenæus, that John received the Revelation and all his Visions at the end of Domitian; yet on the other side 'tis the affirmation of * Epiphanius, that John propheſied in the time of Claudius Cæsar, when, saith he, he was in the Ile Patmus. And that which may give authority to Epiphanius's testimony is this, First, that Epiphanius in that place is a writing against the Montanists, about the authority of the Apocalypse, and that the later it were seen or written, the more it would have been for his turn toward confuting or answering them, whose objection it was, that the Church of Thyatira, mentioned in the Apocalypse, was not yet a Church when that was said to be revealed. And therefore if it had been but uncertain whether it were written so early or no, he would without all question have made use of this as some advantage against his adversaries, whom he was then in confuting. Secondly, that Epiphanius is so farre from doing this, that he doth twice in the same place expresly affirm, first, that his being in the Isle of Patmus, secondly, that his seeing these Visions there, yea and his return from the Island, were in the time of Claudius. Having said this for the confirming this assertion of Epiphanius to have as much authority as his testimony can give it, four arguments I shall adde for the truth of it. The first negative, to the disparagement of that relation that affirmes him banish'd by Domitian, and returned after his death in Nerva's reign. For of the persecution by Domitian there be but two authors mentioned by * Eusebius, Tertullian and Hegesippus: but of * Tertullian he hath these words, πεπειράκει ποτὲ καὶ Δομετιανὸς πάντα ποιεῖν ἐκείνῳ, μέρος ὢν τῆς Νέρωνος ὠμότητος, ἀλλὰ τάχιστα ἐπαύσατο, ἀνακαλεσάμενος οὓς ἐξηλάκει, Domitian went about to do as Nero had done, being a part of his cruelty, or, as Tertullian's words are, portio Neronis de crudelitate, a portion of Nero for cruelty: sed facile cœptum repressit, restitutis etiam quos relegaverat, but he ceased from it presently, and recalled those whom he had banished: which no way agrees with his banishing John, and not recalling him all his life, as is supposed in the other relation, and affirmed by * Eusebius. And therefore Baronius, that is for his banishment under Domitian, in the tenth year of his reign, is forced fairely to * reject Tertullian's authority in this matter, giving for it his proof out of Dio, viz. that Nerva released those who were condemned of impiety, and restored those who were banished. Which affirmation of Dio's being granted, as far as belongs to those who were in exile, or stood condemned at Nerva's coming to the Empire, doth no way prejudice the truth of Tertullian's words, of Domitian's having repress'd his severity against the Christians, and revoked the banished, (wherein he is much a more competent witness then Baronius.) No more doth his killing of his unckle Clemens, and banishing his cosin Flavia Domitilla; for that was five years after this time of John's supposed banishment, in the fifteenth or last year of Domitian's reign. In the relation of Hegesippus (a most antient writer, that lived in those times) there is no more but this, that Domitian had made a decree for the putting to death all that were of the linage of David; that some delators had accused some of the children of Jude, the kinsman of our Saviour, ὡς ἐκ γένους ὄντας Δαβὶδ, as ſuch who were of Davids ſeed; that Focatus brought theſe to Domitian, but upon examination being found to be plain men, and ſuch as believed not Chriſts kingdome to be κοσμικὸς, or ὑπίγειον, of this world, or earthy, but heavenly, and Angelical, to begin at the end of the world, ἐλευθέρους μὲν αὐτοὺς ἀνιέναι, καταπαῦσαι δὲ διὰ προσάγματος τὸν κατ' ἐκκλησίας διωγμὸν, τοὺς δὲ ἀπολυθέντας ἡγήσασθαι τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν, he ſet them free, and by Edict took off the perſecution againſt the Church, and they being releaſed became Biſhops in the Church, and continued peaceably, and lived till Trajanus's daies. And this certainly agrees very little with the other relation, nor can any account probably be rendred why, when the perſecution of Chriſtians was taken off by the Edict, and εἰρὴν γενομένη peace reſtored to the Church of Chriſt, and when the profeſſion of Chriſtianity, in the ſonnes of Jude, being by them avowed to the Emperor, was not yet thought fit to be puniſhed in the leaſt, yet John ſhould be baniſhed, and continue in his exile till Nerva's reign, for no other crime but that of being a Chriſtian. Where by the way Baronius's artifice much failes him; Tertullian, ſaith he, fell into his error by following Hegeſippus's authority, but Hegeſippus, ſaith he, ſpake apparently de ea perſecutione quæ mota eſt in Judæos, of that perſecution that was raiſed againſt the Jewes, not againſt the Chriſtians. How true that is, will now appear, when the expreſs words are, that by that Emperors Edict the perſecution againſt the Church (ſure that was not of Jewes, but Chriſtians) ceaſed. Secondly, that about the ninth year of Claudius the Chriſtians were purſued, and baniſh'd by the Roman Powers. That at that time Claudius baniſhed the Jewes out of Rome, is evident by Joſephus, and acknowledged by all; and that by the Jewes the Chriſtians are meant, appears by Suetonius in the life of Claudius, c. 25. Judæos impulſore Cheſto aſſiduè tumultuantes Româ expulit, He baniſhed the Jewes out of Rome for the tumults which they daily raiſed by the impulſion of Cheſtus. By Cheſtus it is certain that the Roman writers meant Chriſt, calling him Cheſt, and his followers Cheſtians, as Tertullian obſerves Apol. c. 3. And ſo they that were acted by the impulſion of Cheſt, in that narration, muſt, though called Jewes, neceſſarily be reſolved to be Chriſtians: And what was done at Rome, is to be ſuppoſed to have been done alſo in other parts of the Emperors dominions; and ſo that edict, mentioned Act. 18. 2. was in reaſon to reach to Epheſus, and may juſtly be thought to have involved S. John there. And accordingly Chronologers have placed this baniſhment of his to Patmus in that year. Thirdly, that about Claudius's time it was that the unbelieving Jewes began and continued to oppoſe and perſecute the Chriſtian Jewes, and thereupon the Gnoſticks compliances (and making as if they were Jewes, to avoid perſecutions) are ſo oft taken notice of by S. Paul, Gal. 6. 12. and elſewhere. And by all the Epiſtles both of him and the reſt of the Apoſtles, written from about that time of Claudius, the Gnoſticks are every where touch'd on, as the peſts that were creeping into the Churches, againſt which they endevoured to fortifie the believers, and aſſure them that thoſe perſecutions of the Jewes ſhould be ſhortly ended by their deſtruction (that night of ſadneſſe farre ſpent, and the day of deliverance and refreſhment at hand, Rom. 13. 12. and c. 16. 20.) and that then the complying Gnoſticks, which were ſo ſollicitous to ſave their lives, ſhould loſe them, that is, ſhould periſh with them. Accordingly, to the very ſame purpoſe is moſt of the Viſion here, that concerned the ſeven Churches, c. 2. 2, 4, 9, 14, 20. and c. 3. 9, 10, &c. and much of the following prophecie, to aſſure them that God would take revenge on theſe impenitent and impure profeſſors, and reſcue the conſtant Chriſtians. And that makes it very reaſonable to believe, that this Viſion was received about the ſame time alſo. A fourth argument will be taken from the account of the eight Kings, or Emperors, c. 17. 10. which cannot, I believe, otherwiſe be made intelligible, but by beginning the account from Claudius, ſo that he, and Nero, Galba, Otho, Vitellius, ſhall be the five that were faln, and then Veſpaſian (in whoſe time I ſuppoſe theſe Viſions were committed to writing by S. John) being the ſixth, ſhall be the one is, and Titus the ſeventh, that is not yet come, and when he comes ſhall ſtay but a little while, reigning but two years and two moneths, and then the beaſt that was and is not, and is the eighth, and is of the ſeven, and goes to deſtruction, will fall out to be Domitian, to whom (and to whom only of all the Emperors, nay of all men in any ſtory) all thoſe diſtinctive characters will appertain, as that he exerciſed the office of the Emperor, and was called Emperor at Rome, when Veſpaſian was gone into Judæa, and after his return became a private man again, delivered up the Empire to him, and ſo was, and is not, and then was the eighth (reckoning from Claudius as the firſt) and the ſon of one of the ſeven, viz. of Veſpaſian, and ſhould be a bloody perſecutor, and accordingly puniſh'd, and ſo go to deſtruction. This ſeems to me to be a demonſtrative character of the time wherein the firſt of theſe Viſions was delivered, and will farther yield ſome anſwer to the authority of Irenæus, by interpreting his words πρὸς τῇ τέλει Δομετιανοῦ ἀρχῆς of the concluſion of that reign of his at Rome, when his father Veſpaſian was in Judæa, in reſpect of which it is ſaid of him, that he was and is not, that is, that reign of his was come to its τέλος or end was now concluded; making this not improbably that Authors meaning, that John did firſt (in this time of Claudius) receive ſome Viſions concerning this deſtruction of the Jewes, and the other attendants of it, and afterward in Veſpaſian's time, while he was in Judæa, and Domitian reigned at Rome, receive more viſions, that particularly of the number of the beaſt.

ὁ ἕξ ἐστιν Ἄλλος ἔπω πλθε Θηρίον ὁ ὢν ὄγδ.

For

For I ſuppoſe the ſeveral viſions of this book were (as thoſe of Iſaiah c. 1. 1. Jeremiah 1. 2,3. Hoſea 1.1. Amos 1.1. Micah 1.1. in the reigns of ſeveral Kings) received at ſeveral times, not all at once, or in one day. And if againſt that preſumption it be objected, that they were here ſent all together to the Churches of Aſia, and therefore were all received and written at the ſame time, to this the anſwer is moſt obvious, from what we ſee done in the forementioned prophecies of Iſaiah, &c. in the Old Teſtament, which though clearly received in ſeveral Kings reigns, and each ſent to that King or the people under him to whom they belonged, as 'tis evident that of Hezekiah was, (and not concealed and reſerved till after their death who were concerned in them) were yet long after the time of receiving the firſt of them, put into a book, and a title, comprehending them all, prefix'd to them. And accordingly there is no difficulty to conceive that John, having firſt received the Viſion of the ſeven Churches, and, according to direction, c. 1. 11. ſpeedily ſent it to them, did after that, (as μετὰ ταῦτα, c. 4. 1. literally imports) receive more viſions, at ſeveral times, and after all, put them together into a book or volumne, and dedicate them anew to the ſeven Churches, c. 1.3. and this about the forementioned end of Domitians reigning in his Fathers ſtead, that is, in Veſpaſian's time, when he was returning from Judæa to reſume his power again. I can forſee but one farther objection againſt this date of theſe Viſions, viz. that in the Epiſtle to the Church of Pergamus, c. 2. 13. there is the mention and very name of Antipas the Martyr, ὃς ἀπεκτάνθη who was killed, which may be thought to imply that this Viſion was received after that part of Domitian's reign wherein Antipas is affirmed to have been ſlain. To this I anſwer, that this naming of Antipas by way of prophecie may be as eaſily and probably believed of the Spirit of God, before the time of his ſuffering, as the naming of Cyrus before he was born, which we know was done in the Old Teſtament, nay as Chriſt's telling S. Peter that he ſhould be put to death, and particularly crucified, or as Agabus telling S. Paul what ſhould befall him at Jeruſalem, Act. 21. 10. or, as I conceive, Simeon's telling the mother of Chriſt, that a ſword ſhould paſſe through her ſoul, Luk. 2.35. Saint Hilary in his Prologue to the Pſalmes offers inſtances of this; As, ſaith he, when in ſome of the Pſalmes, of which Moſes was the author, there is yet mention of things after Moſes, viz. of Samuel, Pſal. 99. 6. before he was born, nulli mirum aut difficile videri oportere, this ought not to ſeem ſtrange or hard to any, when in the books of the Kings, Joſias is by name propheſyed of before he was born, 1 King. 13. 2. And if Zacharias the ſon of Barachias, Mat. 23. be that Zachary the ſon of Baruch that was killed cloſe before the ſiege of Jeruſalem, (of which there is little reaſon to doubt) there is then a direct example of what is here thus ſaid of Antipas, the ἐφονεύσατε ye have killed being there ſaid of him, as ἀπεκτάνθη he was killed here (ſee Note on Mat. 23. g.) That Antipas was a contemporary of the Apoſtles, and when he died, was extreme old, will hereafter appear out of the Menologie, and therefore at what time ſoever this Viſion were written, 'tis certain there was ſuch a man as Antipas, and no doubt a Chriſtian, if not Biſhop of Pergamus then; And ſo 'tis leſſe ſtrange that he ſhould be here mentioned by name, then that Cyrus ſhould, before he was born; and no more ſtrange then for any other living perſon to have his Martyrdome particularly foretold. As for the ſenſe of ἀπεκτάνθη was killed, which may be thought to conclude him already killed, ſure that is of little weight, it being very ordinary for prophecies to be delivered in words which ſignifie the time paſt. All this may ſerve for a competent ſatisfaction to the grand difficulty. And howſoever in a matter of ſome uncertainty we may poſſibly miſtake in the particularity of time, wherein the Viſions were received, yet that they belong (much of them) to the buſineſſe of the deſtruction of the Jewes, there will be little queſtion, when the particulars come to be viewed.

Ἀντίπας

This being thus farre evident, it follows to be obſerved, that the deſtruction of Jeruſalem under Titus was but one part of this coming of Chriſt, I mean of the judgments upon the Jewes. Many other bloody acts there were of this Tragedy ſtill behind when that was over. Not to mention Domitian's edict of killing all David's kin, (Euſebius l. 3. c. 19.) The firſt I ſhall inſiſt upon is that under Trajan, till whoſe reign S. John himſelf lived (ſaith Euſebius l. 3. c. 23. out of Irenæus l. 2. c. 39. and l. 3. c. 3. and out of Clemens Alexandrinus) though not to this part of it. In this Emperors time it went very heavily with the Jewes, τὰ τῆς Ἰουδαίων συμφορὰς καιροῖς ἐπαλλήλοις ἤκμαζεν, ſaith he, their calamities came tumbling in upon them, one on the back of another; For both in Alexandria, and the other parts of Ægypt, and even in Cyrene, many Jewes behaving themſelves ſeditiouſly, and at laſt breaking out into open warres and horrid cruelties, deſcribed by Dion and Spartianus, as well as Euſebius, and once having worſted the Grecians, they of Ægypt, and they of Cyrene joyning together under the conduct of Lucuas, and overrunning all Ægypt, the iſſue of it was, that Trajan ſent Marcius Turbo with an army by ſea and land, horſe and foot, who in a long continued warre killed great multitudes of them; and leſt they in Meſopotamia ſhould, or ſuſpecting that they had already joyned with them, the Emperor ſent to Quintus Lucius Æmilius, that he ſhould deſtroy them all utterly out of that province; and for his care in obeying that command, he was, ſaith Euſebius, conſtituted Ἰουδαίας ἡγεμών Ruler of Judæa under the Emperor. Theſe paſſages we find in Euſebius l. 4. c. 2. and, ſaith he, all the Greek writers of the Heathens, who ſet down the ſtories of thoſe times, have the ſame verbatim; and ſo indeed they have. See Dio, as alſo Spartianus. And the number of the ſlain Jewes in that calamity is reckoned to be no leſſe then two hundred thouſand in that reign of Trajan's: and this, if there had been none before, and if there were no more behind, might well be ſtyled a coming of Chriſt in the clouds againſt his crucifiers, a lamentable judgment on all the tribes of that land, and ſo might own the expreſſions in that ſeventh verſe, and ſome part of the after Viſions.

But beſide this, yet farther, within few years more, in the time of Adrian, Trajan's immediate ſucceſſor, (who began his reign An. Dom. 118.) there befell more ſad deſtructions upon the Jewes, and particularly upon Jeruſalem it ſelf, occaſioned by the riſing of Barchocheba, who being but a villain, φονικὸς καὶ λῃστρικὸς τις ἀνὴρ, one that lived by robbing and killing, took upon him to come as a Meſſiah, as a light from heaven to the Jewes, and therefore ſtyled himſelf Son of a ſtarre. And with thoſe that he thus raiſed, a great warre there was waged by the Romans in the eighteenth year of Adrian, at the town Bethek, not farre from Jeruſalem; and the iſſue was, that the Jewes were under a moſt miſerable ſiege, and Rufus governour of Judæa, on occaſion of this riſing, without any mercy deſtroyed all he could come to, men, women and children, μυριάδας ἀθρόως, ſaith Euſebius l. 4. c. 6. whole myriads together; and, to conclude, there came out an Edict of Adrian's, after the death of the ring-leader, interdicting all Jewes, and forbidding them to return to their city Jeruſalem again, or ſo much as to look toward it: to which end the foundations of the Temple were ploughed up by Rufus, (and ſo Chriſt's prophecie not till now exactly fulfilled, of not one ſtone upon another) the city inhabited by the Romans, new built, and named Ælia, from Ælius Adrianus, and (they ſay) the ſtatue of a Swine ſet over the gate of it, to reproach the Jewes, and baniſh their very eyes from it. And this was another paſſage which might well be referred to in that place, as matter of mournful ſpectacle to all the Tribes of Judæa, and as mournfully repreſented in ſome of the Viſions. To which muſt be farther added, that the unbelieving Jews are not the only men to whom the deſtruction here reveal'd in theſe Viſions did belong, but as notably alſo, and welnigh as ſoon, the erroneous vile Chriſtians of thoſe times (which were many of them Jewes alſo, and (thoſe that were not) Judaizers, or compliers with the Jewes) viz. the Gnoſticks, ſo oft ſpoken of in S. Paul's Epiſtles, and by S. Peter, and S. James, S. Jude, and S John alſo, with intimation of their approaching deſtruction, which here is viſible in the Viſion of, and the cauſes of the ſeveral deſtructions that lighted on the ſeven Churches of Aſia, (if not wholly, yet) at leaſt on the Gnoſticks and other hereticks among them; of whom ſaith Euſebius, after the enumerating of their hereſies, λοιπὸν δ' οὖν εἰς τὸ παντελὲς ἀπεσβήκασι, they vaniſhed to nothing in a moment, and this ſaith he, in Trajan's time, l. 3. c. κθ'. And then in the ſecond place, the other enemies of Chriſt, partakers in the crucifying of him, and afterward eminent perſecuters of Chriſtians, thoſe of heathen Rome, as will appear in the expoſition of the Viſions. And then thirdly, as in a parentheſis, Gog and Magog, c. 20. 8. which after the peaceable flouriſhing of Chriſtianity for a thouſand years, ſhould waſte the Church again, the Turks in the Eaſt, &c. And then all the enemies of God, at the fatall laſt day of doom, c. 20. 11.

That this was the ſummary matter of theſe enſuing Viſions, the moſt ſerious pondering of every part ſoon made unqueſtionable to me. And of it the Reader may here before-hand receive this ſhort ſcheme, viz. that, after the Preface, in the firſt Chapter, to v. 10. and the Viſions about the ſeven Churches of Aſia, each of them ſet down diſtinctly, c. 2, and 3. this book contains, Firſt, the proceedings of God with the Jewes from the fourth to the twelfth chapter: Secondly, the infancy and growth of the Church of Chriſt in order to the heathen world, till it came through great oppoſitions to get poſſeſſion of the Roman Empire, partly by deſtroying, partly by converting the heathen and villanous, impure Idol-worſhippers, from the twelfth to the twentieth chapter: Thirdly, the peaceable, flouriſhing ſtate of the Church for a thouſand years, (and after that the breaking out of the Turk, and haraſſing the Eaſtern Churches, briefly touch'd, together with their deſtruction, and the end of the world) moſt rhetorically deſcribed from chap. 20th to the 6th verſe of chap. 22. and from thence to the end of the Book a formal concluſion of the whole matter. All which is ſomewhat proportionable to that which old Tobit prophetically ſpoke of the times that were to follow him, c. 14. 5. which he divided into three diſtinct ſpaces; Firſt, the re-building of the Temple, which was now long paſt, and this Book hath nothing to doe with that: Secondly, the conſummations of the ſeaſons of the age, that is, the deſtruction of the Jewiſh ſtate, which is the firſt main period here. This is not ſo clearly ſet down in our ordinary Engliſh verſion as in the Greek it is: for that reads not as the Engliſh doth, untill the time of that age be fulfilled, confining the continuance of the ſecond Temple to the time of that age; but, ἕως πληρωθῶσι καιροὶ τοῦ αἰῶνος, till the ſeaſons of the age be fulfilled, a phraſe near of kin to thoſe many which are uſed in the New Teſtament, for the deſtruction of this people, the latter days, or ſeaſons, συντέλεια αἰῶνος, the conſummation, or concluſion, of the age, Mat. 24. 3. But in the Hebrew copie ſet out, and rendred by Paulus Fagius, (which appears to be tranſlated skilfully by ſome Jew out of the Original Chaldee) there is a very conſiderable addition to this purpoſe, ועוד יצאו בגלות רב וגדול, And again they ſhall go into a long and great captivity, noting the greatneſſe and duration of this

this beyond all the former. That theſe words in that Hebrew copy are the true reading, appears by the ſubſequent mention of a return, which cannot be ſenſe, without this precedent mention of a captivity. And that it belongs to that deſtruction of them by the Romans, appears by another paſſage, added alſo in that Hebrew copie, and directly parallel to Mat. 24. 31. For as there after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, v. 29. is mention of the Angels ſent to gather the elect Jewes from the four windes, (parallel to the viſion of the ſealing, Rev. 7.) ſo it follows in Tobit, but God, holy and bleſſed, ſhall remember them, and gather them from the four corners of the world. After which follows thirdly, the ſtate of Chriſtianity, the glorious building of Jeruſalem, and the houſe of God, foretold by the prophets, (and that building ſet down, c. 13. 16, 17. with Sapphires, Emrods, precious ſtones, pure gold, Beryll, Carbuncle, ſtones of Ophir, in the ſame manner as 'tis deſcribed in theſe Viſions, c. 21. 18, 19.) and that to continue for ever or, as the Hebrew reads, for ever and ever; and as a prime branch of that period the converting of the nations, and burying their idols, (which is here the ſecond main period) v. 6, 7. This parallel prediction in Tobit may be of ſome force to authoriſe the interpretation of theſe Viſions; in all which, as there may be ſeveral particular paſſages either ſo obſcure (from the nature of prophetick ſtyle) as not to be eaſily explicated, or ſo copious, (and capable of more then one explication) as to render it uncertain which ſhould be preferr'd (in which reſpect I hope, and expect that much more light may be added to it by more ſtrict ſurvaies, and comparing the expreſſions in this Book with the like phraſes or paſſages in the Prophets of the Old Teſtament) ſo for the general matter of theſe Viſions, I ſuppoſe, upon pondering the whole, there will be little doubt but theſe are the true lineaments of it.

And it hath been matter of much ſatisfaction to me, that what hath upon ſincere deſire of finding out the truth, and making my addreſſes to God for his particular directions in this work of difficulty (without any other light to go before me) appeared to me to be the meaning of this prophecie, hath, for the main of it, in the ſame manner repreſented it ſelf to ſeveral perſons of great piety and learning (as ſince I have diſcerned,) none taking it from the other, but all from the ſame light ſhining in the prophecie it ſelf. Among which number I now alſo find the moſt learned Hugo Grotius, in thoſe poſthumous notes of his on the Apocalypſe, lately publiſh'd.

And this is all that ſeemed uſeful to be here premiſed concerning the interpretation of this Book.

The

Ἀποκάλυψις Ἰωάννου

THE title of this Book as it is ordinarily set, Ἀποκάλυψις Ἰωάννου τοῦ Θεολόγου, the Revelation of John the Divine, hath in it some seeming difference from the first words of the Book, which were written by S. John himself, (whereas that other (as the rest of the titles of the Books of the New Testament) was by the Church of the first ages affix'd unto it,) Ἀποκάλυψις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, the Revelation of Jesus Christ. And this difference is to be reconciled, not by making one of them to refer to the person that received, the other to him that gave the Revelation; for as John received it from Christ, so Christ also received it from his Father, and therefore 'tis here added v. 1. which God gave him: but it must be by distinguishing of the time and manner of these revealings. God formerly revealed these future events to Christ the Son of man, as the Mediatour by him now designed to conveigh all knowledge and grace to us; and this he did when Christ entred on his Prophetick office (long before the time here specified) from whence it was that Christ, whilst here on earth, foretold (in the parable of the King and the Husbandmen, Luk. 20. 16. and Mat. 24. and sparsim at other times) many of the particulars represented in this prophecie, especially that of the destruction of the unbelieving Jewes. And in this respect this whole Book is entituled the Revelation of Jesus Christ, that is, that prophecie which Jesus Christ received from his Father, as the vision of Isaiah, &c. is the prophecie which Isaiah received from God, or, that God gave to Isaiah. But then as Christ thought fit to give a representation of this to his beloved disciple, John, and so John received it, as a prophecie, to deliver to others, so 'tis fitly styled (here in the title) the Revelation of John, who received it (in vision, or extasie, v. 10.) by the Angel from Christ, as Christ received it from his Father. For this is the meaning of the word Ἀποκάλυψις Revelation, a word ordinarily used in Daniel, to signifie any knowledge extraordinarily communicated to any by God. Thus is the word used 2 Cor. 12. 1. where he puts together visions and revelations of the Lord (and perhaps expresses it, v. 2. by ἄνθρωπον ἐν Χριστῷ a man in Christ, as here ver. 10. by being in the Spirit snatch'd into the third Heaven,) so again ver. 7. abundance of Revelations. So Gal. 2 2. I went up by Revelation, that is, by impulsion of the Spirit of God, and Ephes. 3. 3. by Revelation (that is, by Christ's speaking to him from heaven, and other the like visions, which, it appears, he had, 2 Cor. 12. 7.) God made known to me the mystery. In other places the word is used in a greater latitude, for an exposition or interpretation of any sacred figure, &c. however come by, though not by immediate inspiration from God, the דרש among the Hebrews, expounding of difficulties (see Note on 1 Cor. 14 b.) and yet more widely 1 Pet. 1. 7. for Christ's revealing himself in judgement on his adversaries, and rescuing the faithful. But here it is according to strict idiome no more then vision or prophecie, and so the title of Enoch's book, cited Jude 15. was Ἀποκάλυψις Ἐνὼχ the Revelation of Enoch, but in S. Jude's style (προεφήτευσεν Ἐνὼχ) the prophecy of Enoch. And if in this notion of the word (which is peculiarly that which here and c. 1. 1. belongs to it) Mr Brightman intituled his comment on this book Apocalypsim Ἀποκαλύψεως, the Revelation of the Revelation (as it seems he did by [a] applying the words of Scripture, The Lord hath spoken, who can but prophesie? to his own performances in that Comment, adding that God not onely spake of old by dreams and visions, but daily now, whensoever he inlightens the minds of his servants to the fetching out any hidden truth of his word: and that when God doth thus communicate with any, he understandeth a necessity imposed on him to make it known to others, and that the danger is not shewn to him for his own private sake) I cannot but affirm that he hath grosselly mistaken his businesse and endevoured to impose false prophecies upon his Reader. For though by the help and grace of God, sought onely by prayer, and by the use of means instrumental to that end, & subordinate to that grace (such are comparing Scripture with Scripture, and Prophetick expressions with the Prophetick style, and Symbols with Symbols, and the observation of the use of words and phrases in the sacred dialect) it be possible to attain to the expounding or revealing some secret senses of Scriptures, which without the uses of these means will not be attainable; yet may not the interpretations of any meer man (which hath not the gift of prophecie) pretend to be the word of God. And whosoever shall professe thus to reveal the Revelation, by God speaking to him, and doth not evidence his calling and mission prophetick, especially if he pretend to have learn'd from the Revelation things so distant from what there we read, as are Germany, and France, and Britanny, of this last Century, from the Churches of Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea, in Asia, then in being when S. John by Christ's appointment wrote this prophecie to them, must needs be look'd on as a false seer or false prophet. And this is done by Master Brightman in expresse words, saying, that he [b] had learn'd out of the Apocalypse that a most heavy trial was now suddenly to invade the Christian world (as if what was said to be sudden near 1000 years since, were sufficiently fulfilled by being near at hand fourty four years ago) that the Churches of Britain, Germany, and France, were most favourably admonished of this tempest by Epistles written to them by name; that he by divine impulsion, or direction, (or what else divinitus can signifie) found these very Epistles, which signifie this thing, and from the inscriptions of them understood to whom they were sent, and durst not but dispatch them to them, lest either by intercepting or concealing them he should be condemned of wrong offered to the divine Majesty. And that [c] those Epistles do not foretell this by any doubtful conjecture, but teach in clear words what he thus thinks fit to affix on them. The least that can be said of this is, that 'tis the adding to the prophecies of this book, c. 22. 18. the obtruding his own fancies for Divine revelations. And if the sad calamities which have befaln this British Church

Church since the writing of this New Apocalypse of his, be conceived to conclude him a true Prophet, in his presaging against the Angel of that Church, it will be as reasonable to ascribe divinity to the heathen Auguries and Oracles also, as oft as any part of the event followed any one of them: whereas indeed of any contingent future event there being only two things possible, either that it will, or that it will not come to passe, and persecutions, and schisms, and commotions, and seditions, and changes of Government being so frequent, that whatsoever Church or Kingdome hath long withstood such onsets, may at last by some advantage industriously sought, and maliciously laid hold on, not improbably sink and fall under them, whatsoever is or can be foretold in this kind with any common prudence, will not be improbable to fall out (in some part) within fourty or fifty years space. Nay whatever 'tis, some advantage it will have toward the completion by having been foretold: As when by the flying of the birds (so casual & unsignificant a thing as that) the Roman Augurs promised the souldiers a victory on their side, the courage thus infused into them by believing that prediction, did oft contribute very much to the obtaining the victory; the same may in some measure be said in this particular. But much more considerable is the influence and consequence of that doctrine which is so frequently inculcated by the Expositors of this Book, That the people are they that must pull down Antichrist, whilst Kings espouse his cause: then which nothing can be more effectual and direct toward the raising and fomenting of commotions, to which the prosperity of them is as probably consequent, as victory to the number and courage of an Army; and so though the prescience of God (which is not his decree) and the predictions of true Prophets, which are but rayes of that prescience, have no proper immediate influence on the effect, nothing of causality in them, yet these vain delusions of those false Prophets may have had much of (improperly so called, yet) real efficiency, and if so designed by them, of guilt in them. All which proves the wickednesse and dangerousnesse of such designes, but gives no Authority to the interpretations.

Having said thus much in general of Master Brightman's Apocalypse, I shall not think it amisse to give the Reader some view or taste of his way of interpreting, and the grounds wherewith he contents himself. And it shall be by mentioning his explications of the prophecies of the seven Churches, which are in themselves the most clear and intelligible of any part of the whole book, (as belonging peculiarly and by name to the chief Episcopal Sees of Asia, sufficiently known to all, and, in respect of the matter and expressions used in them, more perspicuous then almost any part of the prophecies of Isaiah, but much more then those of Ezekiel and Daniel) but by him detorted and wrested from their native intelligible sense to far distant purposes. This view I shall not chuse to give here out of its place, but leave the Reader to make it up, by putting together these few notes on the three ensuing Chapters, ch. 1. g. ch. 2. b. d. g. ch. 3. a.

That the title of Θεολόγυ the Divine is here given to the writer of these Visions, and not Ἀποστόλυ the Apostle, is not from any imagination of those that affix'd it, that the Apostle John was not writer of them, but because that title of Θεολόγ῟ was by the Antients, Origen especially, bestowed on this Apostle, in respect of the divinity and sublimity of his manner of writing, observable in his Gospel, and particularly because he began it with setting down the divinity of Christ (whereas others begin with his birth, or humanity) the Θεὸς ἦν ὁ λόγ῟, the Word was God. This title had by the Platonists been given to Orpheus, in relation to the book concerning the Gods written by him, and so to Linus and Musæus also; those three ordinarily known by the name of Theologi poetæ. b. [a]REVELATION

Ἀποκάλυψις Ἰωάννου

THE title of this Book as it is ordinarily set, Ἀποκάλυψις Ἰωάννου τοῦ Θεολόγου, the Revelation of John the Divine, hath in it some seeming difference from the first words of the Book, which were written by S. John himself, (whereas that other (as the rest of the titles of the Books of the New Testament) was by the Church of the first ages affix'd unto it,) Ἀποκάλυψις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, the Revelation of Jesus Christ. And this difference is to be reconciled, not by making one of them to refer to the person that received, the other to him that gave the Revelation; for as John received it from Christ, so Christ also received it from his Father, and therefore 'tis here added v. 1. which God gave him: but it must be by distinguishing of the time and manner of these revealings. God formerly revealed these future events to Christ the Son of man, as the Mediatour by him now designed to conveigh all knowledge and grace to us; and this he did when Christ entred on his Prophetick office (long before the time here specified) from whence it was that Christ, whilst here on earth, foretold (in the parable of the King and the Husbandmen, Luk. 20. 16. and Mat. 24. and sparsim at other times) many of the particulars represented in this prophecie, especially that of the destruction of the unbelieving Jewes. And in this respect this whole Book is entituled the Revelation of Jesus Christ, that is, that prophecie which Jesus Christ received from his Father, as the vision of Isaiah, &c. is the prophecie which Isaiah received from God, or, that God gave to Isaiah. But then as Christ thought fit to give a representation of this to his beloved disciple, John, and so John received it, as a prophecie, to deliver to others, so 'tis fitly styled (here in the title) the Revelation of John, who received it (in vision, or extasie, v. 10.) by the Angel from Christ, as Christ received it from his Father. For this is the meaning of the word Ἀποκάλυψις Revelation, a word ordinarily used in Daniel, to signifie any knowledge extraordinarily communicated to any by God. Thus is the word used 2 Cor. 12. 1. where he puts together visions and revelations of the Lord (and perhaps expresses it, v. 2. by ἄνθρωπον ἐν Χριστῷ a man in Christ, as here ver. 10. by being in the Spirit snatch'd into the third Heaven,) so again ver. 7. abundance of Revelations. So Gal. 2 2. I went up by Revelation, that is, by impulsion of the Spirit of God, and Ephes. 3. 3. by Revelation (that is, by Christ's speaking to him from heaven, and other the like visions, which, it appears, he had, 2 Cor. 12. 7.) God made known to me the mystery. In other places the word is used in a greater latitude, for an exposition or interpretation of any sacred figure, &c. however come by, though not by immediate inspiration from God, the דרש among the Hebrews, expounding of difficulties (see Note on 1 Cor. 14 b.) and yet more widely 1 Pet. 1. 7. for Christ's revealing himself in judgement on his adversaries, and rescuing the faithful. But here it is according to strict idiome no more then vision or prophecie, and so the title of Enoch's book, cited Jude 15. was Ἀποκάλυψις Ἐνὼχ the Revelation of Enoch, but in S. Jude's style (προεφήτευσεν Ἐνὼχ) the prophecy of Enoch. And if in this notion of the word (which is peculiarly that which here and c. 1. 1. belongs to it) Mr Brightman intituled his comment on this book Apocalypsim Ἀποκαλύψεως, the Revelation of the Revelation (as it seems he did by [a] applying the words of Scripture, The Lord hath spoken, who can but prophesie? to his own performances in that Comment, adding that God not onely spake of old by dreams and visions, but daily now, whensoever he inlightens the minds of his servants to the fetching out any hidden truth of his word: and that when God doth thus communicate with any, he understandeth a necessity imposed on him to make it known to others, and that the danger is not shown to him for his own private sake) I cannot but affirm that he hath grossely mistaken his businesse and endevoured to impose false prophecies upon his Reader. For though by the help and grace of God, sought onely by prayer, and by the use of means instrumental to that end, & subordinate to that grace (such are comparing Scripture with Scripture, and Prophetick expressions with the Prophetick style, and Symbols with Symbols, and the observation of the use of words and phrases in the sacred dialect) it be possible to attain to the expounding or revealing some secret senses of Scriptures, which without the uses of these means will not be attainable; yet may not the interpretations of any meer man (which hath not the gift of prophecie) pretend to be the word of God. And whosoever shall professe thus to reveal the Revelation, by God speaking to him, and doth not evidence his calling and mission prophetick, especially if he pretend to have learn'd from the Revelation things so distant from what there we read, as are Germany, and France, and Britanny, of this last Century, from the Churches of Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea, in Asia, then in being when S. John by Christ's appointment wrote this prophecie to them, must needs be look'd on as a false seer or false prophet. And this is done by Master Brightman in expresse words, saying, that he [b] had learn'd out of the Apocalypse that a most heavy trial was now suddenly to invade the Christian world (as if what was said to be sudden near 1600 years since, were sufficiently fulfilled by being near at hand fourty four years ago) that the Churches of Britain, Germany, and France, were most favourably admonished of this tempest by Epistles written to them by name; that he by divine impulsion, or direction, (or what else divinitus can signifie) found these very Epistles, which signifie this thing, and from the inscriptions of them understood to whom they were sent, and durst not but dispatch them to them, lest either by intercepting or concealing them he should be condemned of wrong offered to the divine Majesty. And that [c] those Epistles do not foretell this by any doubtful conjecture, but teach in clear words what he thus thinks fit to affix on them. The least that can be said of this is, that 'tis the adding to the prophecies of this book, c. 22. 18. the obtruding his own fancies for Divine revelations. And if the sad calamities which have befaln this British Church

a. Μαρτυρία Ἰησῦ

V. 2. The teſtimony of Jeſus] The teſtimony of Jeſus is the Goſpel, as it was preached and teſtified by him, the μάρτυς πιὸς, moſt creditable authentick witneſſe, ver. 5. and accordingly 'tis called 1 Cor. 1. 6. the teſtimony of Chriſt, and 2 Tim. 1. 8. the teſtimony of our Lord, and the teſtimony of God, 1 Cor. 2. 1. For as there is the μαρτυρία record or teſtimony that God teſtified of his Son, Joh. 8. 18. both the voice from heaven, and the miracles which he did, &c. and as the Apoſtles office (and the Baptiſts, Joh. 5. 30.) was peculiarly, that they ſhould teſtifie of Jeſus, Joh. 19. 35. and 21. 24. Act. 1. 22. ſo it was the great Prophetick office of Chriſt that he ſhould teſtifie of the truth, declare the will of God, and demonſtrate (by prophecies, by miracles, by laying down his life, and by his Reſurrection, and deſcent of the holy Ghoſt) that it was ſuch, (ſee Note on ch. 3. c.) Thus in the ninth verſe of this Chapter, where John is ſaid to be in the Iſle Patmos, (that is, baniſhed for the word of God, and for the teſtimony of Jeſus,) the meaning is evident, that he was in that exile for having preached that Goſpel of Chriſt: Λόγ☉ Θεῦ, εὐαγγέλιον ὃ ἔγραψεν, ſaith Andreas Cæſarienſis, the word of God, is the Goſpel which he wrote; not that it is certain that he had written it when he was baniſhed into Patmos, but becauſe that very Goſpel which he wrote upon the entreaty of the Aſian Biſhops, for the confuting of Cerinthus, &c. was in ſubſtance preached before by him throughout all Aſia, and many converted to the faith by it.

b. Aria

V. 4. Aſia] That Aſia here ſignifies not that fourth part in the diviſion of the world, but (in another notion of the word known to Geographers) the Lydian or Proconſular Aſia, is largely demonſtrated by the moſt reverend Archbiſhop of Armagh in his diſcourſe on that ſubject. Thus the word is uſed Act. 19. 26. where Paul is ſaid to have perſwaded much people, not only at Epheſus, but almoſt through all Aſia; where Aſia muſt needs be that Province of which Epheſus was the chief Metropolis: and ſo Act. 20. 18. all the Biſhops of Aſia are (by letters ſent to Epheſus) ſummoned to meet Paul at Miletus; where as he foretells them, v. 29. that ſoon after his departure cruel ravenous wolves will enter in, not ſparing the flock, and that among themſelves will ariſe falſe teachers, and accordingly Timothy was then left Metropolitan of Epheſus, that he might charge ſuch μὴ ἑτεροδιδασκαλεῖν, not to diſſeminate theſe falſe doctrines, 1 Tim. 1. 3. ſo it appears it ſoon fell out: for S. Paul tells Timothy, 2 Tim. 1. 15. as a thing known by him, that πάντες οἱ ἐν τῇ Ἀσίᾳ all they that were in Aſia rejected him, which in all reaſon is to be underſtood of the generality of the Biſhops near, if not under this Metropolitan, of whom two are there named by him, Phygellus and Hermogenes. That it was the hereſie of the Gnoſticks that thus infeſted theſe Churches, may appear by the Epiſtles to Timothy, where they are diſtinctly named by the Ψευδώνυμ☉ γνῶσις, Science falſly ſo called, 1 Tim. 6. 20. and by the μῦθοι and γενεαλογίαι, fabulous, Poetical Theologie, conſiſting of ſtrange Genealogies, imitated from the heathen Poets, which the Valentinians had from the Gnoſticks, and are deſcribed at large by Irenæus in his deſcription of that hereſie. And accordingly here is Chriſt's meſſage ſent to theſe Biſhops of Aſia, to reprehend and warn them againſt this hereſie. Now in this Aſia as there were many cities, ſo there were ſome metropoles, chief, or mother cities, to each of which the leſſer adjacent cities were ſubordinate. Of this ſort the firſt was Epheſus, ſaith Ulpian, τ μητροπόλεων Ἐφέσ☉ πρώτη, in l. Obſerv. D. de Off. Proconſ. Such again was Thyatira, ſaith Ptolemie, Θυάτειρα μητρόπολις, Geogr. l. 1. c. 2. Such Philadelphia, in the * Council of Conſtantinople ſub Mena; * Act. 5. Ἐπίσκοπ☉ τῆς Φιλαδελφέων μητροπόλεως τ Λυδῶν ἐπαρχίας, the Biſhop of the Metropolis of Philadelphia of the Province of the Lydians. Of the ſame rank are Laodicea, Sardis and Smyrna affirmed to be by Pliny, (Nat. hiſt. l. 6. c. 29.) as cities wherein the Roman Proconſuls reſiding, kept courts for all the adjoyning cities to reſort to; and the ſame he affirms of Pergamus, c. 30. By which it appears that all the ſeven cities here named were Metropoles, and accordingly under theſe ſeven all other Chriſtian Churches of this whole Proconſular Aſia were contained: of which number as it is reaſonable to think that there were more then ſeven at the time of writing this Epiſtle, (Paul having ſpent two years in preaching the Goſpel in Aſia, & all the inhabitants ſaid to have received the faith, Act. 19. 10.) ſo it is evident in Ignatius's time (which was not long after this) that Magneſia and Trallis, upon the banks of Mæander (Τράλλις πόλις Λυδίας πρὸς τῷ Μαιάνδρῳ ποταμῷ, ſaith Stephanus Byzantius πε. πόλ.) being consequently included in this Asia, were Episcopal Churches, or cities, Damas being Bishop of one, Polybius of the other, and so subordinate to the Metropolitan of Ephesus.

c. Ἑπτὰ πνεύματα

Ib. The seven spirits] There is some question what is here meant by the ἑπτὰ πνεύματα seven spirits. Some interpret them to be the holy Ghost, in respect of the seven graces of that Spirit; some the several operations of God's providence, which they conceive to be mentioned ch. 5. 12. and noted by the seven eyes, Zach. 4. 10. and Rev. 5. 6. which are there called the seven spirits of God sent unto all the land: but δοκιμώτερον τοῦ ἀγγέλους ταῦτα νοῆν, 'Tis more reasonable to understand the Angels by them, saith Andreas Cæsariensis. So Clemens Alexandrinus, Strom. 6. Ἑπτὰ μέν εἰσιν οἱ τὴν μεγίστην δύναμιν ἔχοντες πρωτόγονοι ἀγγέλων ἄρχοντες, there are seven which have the chiefest power, the first-begotten princes of the Angels; where the πρωτόγονοι ἄρχοντες first-born princes, is sure taken from Dan. 10. 13. where the Hebrew reads שרים הראשנים the chief princes, of which Michael is there said to be one, or of the first. So Tobit 12. 15. Seven holy Angels, which present the prayers of the Saints. And there appears no reason why the seven eyes in Zachary, and here, chap. 5. 6. interpreted the seven spirits of God, should not be the Angels of God; the same that stood before God, chap. 8. 2. as here they are before his throne; it being ordinary for the Officers employed by persons to be called eyes. These seven Spirits we find again ch. 4. 5. where, in reference to the number of the lamps on the candlestick in the Sanctuary, they are called seven lamps. And they there seem to referre to the seven deacons in the Church of Jerusalem, God being before likened to the Bishop, and the Saints to the 24 Elders. And if it be thought strange that John should pray for Grace and Peace from the Angels, which here he seems to doe from the seven Spirits, I answer, first, that these and the like words, Peace be to, or, with you, are but a form of greeting or salutation, which includes in it all good wishes of the things mentioned, but not a solemn praier to those persons named in the form. This may appear by Christ's taking leave of his Disciples, Joh. 14. 27. where he tels them, he leaves peace with them, and gives his peace to them, that is, he takes his leave of them, greets them at parting (and bids them not be troubled at it, nor affrighted) adding that he gives it to them, not as the world gives it, that is, he greets them heartily and affectionately, and in doing so, doth more then in the world is wont to be done by such salutations. Men are wont to use these words, Peace be to you, &c. formally, and by way of civility, but oft doe not wish it when they say it, and can never doe any more then wish or pray for it; but Christ bestowes it by wishing it. Where first, Christ uses this greeting, and yet doth not pray to his Father in doing so, but actually bestows it, and saith he gives it them: nay the men of the world are said to give it, though not as Christ doth. Both which note a difference betwixt such salutations and praiers. But then secondly, supposing it a praier, yet the action of praier being not address'd to the seven spirits, whether immediately or terminatively, there can be no inconvenience from thence to define the spirits to be Angels. For 'tis certain that the Angels are used by God as instruments to conveigh his mercies to us (and the word Peace, as the Hebrew שלום, in salutations especially, signifies all kind of mercies, all prosperity) and then those mercies come from the Angels immediately, though originally from God. And accordingly Jacob in blessing Joseph's sons, having mentioned God, before whom his fathers did walk, the God which had fed him all his life, Gen. 48. 15. adds, ver. 16. the Angel which redeemed me from all evil (that is, the Angel by whom as by an instrument or servant God had done this for him, and which had so often appeared to him) blesse the lads, &c. where though he praies not to the Angel but to God, yet he may, and doth pray, that God would continue to use the Angel's service in blessing the lads which he had used in blessing him. And if it be farther objected, that these spirits here are named before Christ, and therefore must not be Angels; I answer, first, that the order of setting down is no note of dignity or priority in the Scripture. In these benedictions the Lord Jesus is generally named before God the Father. And secondly, if the spirits should signifie the various operations of the Divine providence, as some, or the graces of the Spirit, as others would have them signifie, this inconvenience will also hold against either of those, that they should be named before the second person in the Trinity, and a farther inconvenience also, that grace should be said to come from graces, or from operations, or that any thing but persons, God or Angels, should have to doe in conveighing grace and peace unto us. But then thirdly, the reason why the mention of Christ is left to the last place is evident; First, because the Angels being God's attendants are accordingly joyned with him, not as one equal with another, but as servants following the Master. And secondly, because there was more to be said of Christ then the bare naming him, as appears v. 5, 6, 7. which made it more convenient to reserve his mention to the last place, in which that might most commodiously be spoken.

d. Βασιλεῖς καὶ ἱερεῖς τῷ Θεῷ

V. 6. Kings and priests] This phrase βασιλεῖς καὶ ἱερεῖς τῷ θεῷ is taken out of the Jerusalem Targum, Exod. 19. 6. There the Hebrew reads ממלכת כהנים a kingdome of priests, but that Targum reads מלכין וכהנין Kings and priests, and the Septuagint βασίλειον ἱεράτευμα a royal priesthood. From the Septuagint S. Peter, 1 Pet. 2. 9. reads βασίλειον ἱεράτευμα a royal priesthood, writing to the Jewes of that dispersion which had the Septuagints translation in their hands, and S. John here, and ch. 5. 10. βασιλεῖς καὶ ἱερεῖς Kings and Priests, in respect of those Jewes again who had that Targum in their hands also. And the meaning of both the phrases is to be conceived the same, agreeing with the first notation of the Hebrew phrase, a kingdome of priests. that is, a nation not going on in the waies or customes of other people, but populus alius, a several distinct people, as the Targum reads it, v. 5. consecrated, as it were, and set apart for the service of God, as the Priests office is to wait upon God's service continually. Such were the Jewes to be by God's command, and by their entring into covenant with God, Exod. 19. 6. And such must the society of Christians be now with Christ, who requires them to perform these offices of Devotion, and that in publick assemblies instituted for that turn, & not only at some few set feasts or times, but continually (morning and evening at least,) the whole Christians life being typified by the Jewes sabbath, and so the necessity lying on them to serve God truly, praise him, blesse him, pray to him solemnly all the daies of their lives. That we should doe so was the main end of Christ's redeeming us, Lu. 1. 74. Tit. 2. 14. and in relation to that 'tis here said, that Christ washed us from our sins by his blood, and made us kings and priests to his God and father, that is, by his blood bought us to be the constant servants of God, waiting on him and serving him (the whole Christian Church) avowedly, all the daies of our life. To this sense is the place of S. Peter, 1 Pet. 2. 9. to be understood: For ver. 5. he is upon an exhortation, that they, as living stones of this holy building built on Christ a living foundation, joyn together into a spiritual house, an holy priesthood to offer, &c. that is to joyn together into a Christian assembly or Church, meeting together continually (as the Priests were wont) to serve God, and pray to him, and praise him, which God will

accept of through Christ, as he did of the corporeal sacrifices of the Jewes. To this he adds a testimony out of the Old Testament to enforce it, v. 6. which foretells God's purpose to gather a Church that should believe and confesse him publickly (that is the meaning of not being ashamed of him, Rom. 10. 10, 11.) which testimony being applied to them (as also in another part of it, which comes in as an accessary to the former) ver. 7, 8. he comes back again, v. 9. ὑμεῖς ὁ γένος ἐκλεκτὸν, βασίλειον ἱεράτευμα, but you are a choice stock, a royal priesthood, which in all probability is, as the first verse had been, not only, (or so much) an affirmation what they were, but an exhortation what they ought to approve themselves to be; or if an affirmation, yet that in the force of an exhortation (like that in Exodus, whence 'tis taken, Ye shall be to me a kingdome of priests, that is, I command or require you to be so, or, If you will obey my voice, you shall, that is, this act of obedience I require from you; so there) ye are a choice kindred, a kingdome of priests (that is, Christ hath bought you that you should, and therefore you ought to be so) a peculiar people, set apart on purpose to this office, as it there follows, to praise and magnifie God, and declare the power of his grace, which hath wrought such a change in you. And this is most effectually done by a constant publick service of him. To the same purpose also is that other place, wherein these words are again made use of, Rev. 5. 10. where the living creatures and Elders offering up the praiers of the Saints, ver. 8. (that is, the persecuted Christians alive then, before the destruction of the Jewes, approaching and drawing nigh, v. 9.) & those praiers, it seems, prophetick praises (expres'd there by incense) for what they foresee Christ would speedily doe for them, they sing a new song; the effect of which is, that Christ having been crucified by the Jewes, slaughter'd, as other Prophets had been, should yet have the privilege beyond all them to work a notable vengeance upon those bloody men, that is, to open the seals of the book which contained all those woes in it against that people, ver. 9. and by doing so, by acting that revenge on his crucifiers, and the persecutors of Christians, it follows there in the song, that God had gathered them, (that is, the Saints that praied) and brought them back from their dispersions and captivities, as it were, and made them kings and priests unto God, that is, a kingdome of priests, a congregation, or Church, or multitude of men daily serving God, meeting at the publick assemblies to worship and sacrifice to him: which was remarkably the effect of the Jewes destruction at that time, those having been the chief persecutors of Christianity, and hindring their publick assemblies where they had power, and where they had not, yet so calumniating the Christians to the Roman Emperours and Officers, that they had for some time brought great persecution upon them, and most severe interdicts of all publick meetings. As for that which this place in the Epistle to the Churches peculiarly referres to, I suppose, it is that degree of indulgence which the Christians now had received from the Emperors in some degree, from Vespasian and others after him, according to that of Tertullian, in his Apologetick, Quales ergò leges, quas adversum nos soli exequuntur impii, injusti, turpes, truces, vani, dementes, quas Trajanus ex parte frustratus est, vetando inquiri Christianos, quas nullus Adrianus, nullus Vespasianus, quanquam Judæorum debellator, nullus Pius, nullus Verus impressit, The laws against Christians Trajan took away in part, and neither Adrian, nor Vespasian, nor Antoninus Pius, nor Antoninus Philosophus required to be executed on them. So saith Eusebius of Vespasian, μηδὲν καθ' ἡμῶν ἄτοπον ἐπινοήσας, he practised no cruelty against the Christians (see 2 Thess. 2, 1.) And this is there expres'd, Rev. 5. 10. by, we shall reign upon the earth, that is, we shall live here (in stead of a state of persecution) in a royal, chearful way of liberty, to assemble and serve God publickly. And so ch. 20. 4. ἐβασίλευσε they were kings, or reigned, with Christ a thousand years, that is, enjoyed peaceable daies of Christian profession. As Dan. 7. 18. The saints of the most High shall take and possesse the kingdome signifies, that the Jewes should be delivered from the persecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes (as it fell out in the time of the Macsabees) and have liberty to serve God publickly in the assemblies again. And so Rev. 20. 6. being priests unto God, and reigning a thousand years, signifies the Churches enjoying freedome and tranquillity (under the Christian Princes favour) to serve God in the congregation. That these are called ἡμέρα ἀναψύξεως daies of refreshing, see Act. 3. 19. This gives a ground of probable conjecture concerning the time when this entire book of Visions, put all together; was, with this Preface, sent to the Churches, v.z. in those daies of Vespasian, wherein (as farre as concern'd the Emperors Edicts) the Church received this great tranquillity, but that not perfected to them till the Jewes were destroyed, at which time 'tis again repeated, Rev. 5. (see Note on ch. 17. d.) And if against all this it be objected, that these persecutions of the Christians, though for a while superseded in Vespasian's and Titus's times, yet soon returned again in Domatian's, and in some degree in Trajan's, and soon after were very frequent in great violence, so as to fill up the number of the Ten persecutions within 270 years after Christ: To this I shall answer in the words of Eusebius Eccl. hist. l. 8. c. 1. speaking of the times immediately before Diocletian the last persecutor, To shew, saith he, what glory and liberty the Christian doctrine had obtained among all men, both Greeks & Barbarians, before the persecution of Diocletian, requires too great a work for me to perform. Thus, saith he, appears by the good will of the Emperors, and the great favour of their officers to whom they intrusted the governing of countreys, who have granted the Christians liberty and security, permitted them in their palaces, and in their sight, them and their whole families, &c. Who, saith he, can recount the multitudes of assemblies in every city? who can describe the confluxes to the Oratories, and the spacious Churches which they built from the foundation, not contenting themselves with the antient edifices? These, saith he, no envy could suppresse, no evil spirit bewitch, nor man hinder, as long as Christians lived worthy of God's protection. But when the lives of Christians degenerated through too much liberty into softnesse and sloth, and Christians hated and reproached one another, and with those weapons of the tongue invaded and fought with one another, when Bishops set upon Bishops, and people raised seditions against people, when hypocrisie and shews of piety fill'd all places, then by little and little the judgments of God, as they are wont, began to visit us; and when we used no means to appease God, but multiplied sin upon sin, as if God did not respect or consider our sins, and so there was nothing left among Christians but contentions, emulations, hatred, enmity, ambition, tyranny, &c. then God, as he said by Jeremy, made the daughter of Sion dark, and cast down the glory of Israel, and remembred not his footstool in the day of his wrath &c. and all this, saith he, was fulfill'd upon us; Churches pull'd down, Bibles burnt, Bishops of the Church contumeliously used, &c. Of which all that I have to say, is to justifie the righteous judgment of God: and so he proceeds to set down the words of the Emperors edict against the Christians, chap. 3. In which words is contained a full answer to this objection; For God's promises being but conditional, and the mercies contained in them no longer ascertained to us then that condition is perform'd by us, this tranquillity and peaceable enjoyment of assemblies, which is here promised, and afterwards oft repeated, cannot be expected to continue any longer then Christians walk worthy of it; and when they doe not, the greater the blessing is, the fitter is it to be withdrawn from them; the discipline which is provided for Christians being a delivering up to Satan, when they offend against the Christian rule, that so they may be taught amendment. But beside this, other uses there are of the frequent returns of persecutions, to teach them vigilance, and make trial of their Christian fortitude, and to give them occasion to practise all other Christian duties, of patience and meekness, and so make their light shine before men, which would otherwise be more dimme. And in this matter it is observable, that as Christ's promise of the greatest temporal felicities, the richest harvest, the hundred-fold more in this life, hath the mixture of θλίψεις persecutions joyned with it, so this promise of being Kings and Priests unto God had its mixtures also. When the Jewes were destroyed by Titus, and so the Christians persecutions ceased under Vespasian and Titus, yet in Adrian's time the Jewes under Barchocheba raise a sedition again, and lie very heavie upon the Christians, because they would not rise and joyn with them, (see ch. 11. 7.) and so there were some gleanings of evils still behind from the Jewes after this signal cessation here spoken of. And when the Jewish malice was at an end, then the heathen Emperors are stirred up by the Devil, Magicians and Oracles, to persecute the Christians; and so it often fared with them till Constantine's time, that is, till the Roman Emperour was converted to the faith; and then the promise is, c. 20. that for the space of a thousand years they shall live and reign with Christ, that is, that for that space Christian religion shall be no more interdicted or persecuted: and that promise was perfectly performed. And so still the objection is of no force against the truth of this promise thus interpreted. This hath been here thus largely said once for all, to clear the many passages of this nature which are to be met with in these Visions, and in other parts of these Books.

c. V. 7. Cometh with clouds] That Christ's coming denotes this middle coming of Christ in vengeance on his enemies, and for the rescue of his constant servants, this especially now approaching in the destruction of the Jewes, hath been shewed, Mat. 24. Note b. And that the addition of the clouds, with which he comes, is not an argument against this sense, may appear by the cloud in the wilderness, which signified God's presence to defend the Israelites, and the cloud on the Tabernacle, which noted God's special presence there, and by the Psalmist calling the clouds his chariot, the ordinary way wherein God exhibits himself present to men, to protect, or to punish, (and not only at the day of the final doom) and by Isa. 4. 5. where the cloud upon mount Sion is the defence in the end of the verse, and by the very same phrase, Dan. 7. 13. the Son of man coming with the clouds of heaven, when dominion, glory, and a kingdome are given unto him, v. 14. (which is not by any pretended to belong to the day of doom, but to Christ's kingdome here in, though not of this world) and by the same phrase repeated, Mat. 24. 30. the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory (which yet was to be within the compasse of that generation, ver. 34.) and so Luk. 21. 27. And so among the heathen we have the like phrase; as when God is said by Homer to come to Diomedes, Iliad. l. 5.

having his shoulders wrap'd in a cloud, and that there on purpose to defend him. And in Virgil, when Jupiter came to assist Æneas, Æn. 7. it is said of him, that

——radiis ardentem lucis & auro
Ipse manu quatiens ostendit ab æthere nubem, He shewed a cloud from heaven burning with rayes of light and gold. By all which appears how properly is signified by this phrase Christ's protecting his constant servants, as well as punishing his enemies, which are two special acts of his Regal power, to which he is installed by his Resurrection.

f. V. 15. Fine brasse] That χαλκολίβανον should be rendred fine brasse, will be lyable to this exception, that 'tis against analogie that the former part of the word, χαλκο, should be set to denote the thing it self, which must rather denote some attribute of, or ingredient in the thing spoken of; as χαλκέντερος sure is one that hath entrails of brass, not brasse that hath entrails, and χαλκοχίτωνες they that have coats of brasse (armour) not brasse that hath coats; so χαλκόμυια is not brasse like a flie, but a kind of flie, whether in colour or something else, having a resemblance of brasse. And so in all other the compounds, the latter part of the word noting the thing or person, the former some attribute of it. That interpretation of Andreas Cæsareensis seems more reasonable, who after the former (and one more for brasse that is digged out of mount Lebanon) gives a third notion of the word, that 'tis χαλκοειδὴς λίβανος, ὃν ἰατροὶ παίδας ἄρρενα καλοῦσιν, εὐώδεις, πυρὶ ὁμιλοῦντα, ἀτμὸς ἀποπέμποντα, Amber that looks like brasse, which Physicians call the male-amber, which coming near the fire sends out a perfume. Of this Dioscorides speaks thus, Πρωτεύει δ' ἄρρην καλούμενος σταγωνίας, the male is more excellent called Stagonias. And of this doth Suidas farther speak, Χαλκολίβανον, εἶδος ἠλέκτρου, τιμιώτερον χρυσοῦ· ἔστι δὲ τὸ ἤλεκτρον ἀλλόπτον χρυσοῦ μεμιγμένον ὕελῳ καὶ λιθείᾳ, ὁποίας ἔστι ζωοθέσιος ἡ ἁγία τράπεζα τῆς μεγάλης ἐκκλησίας, It is a sort of amber more valuable then gold. Now this amber is mix'd with glasse and stone, of which mixture is the Communion-table of the great Church. Thus Ezech. 1. 27. I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire, round about within it: where as the appearance of fire and the colour of amber are of the same importance, so here his feet that are said to be like amber, are in the next words again expres'd, ὡς ἐν καμίνῳ πεπυρωμένοι, as it were set on fire in a furnace. This Amber being of all things neareſt the colour of fire, and not of the flame of fire, for to that before his eyes were compared: which two being joyned with his head and hair, white as a fleece, make up the representation complete. For as in a great flaming fire, the lower part, the fire it self, looks like Amber, then the flame being higher then the fire, differs in colour from that, but the top of the flame looks perfectly white: so 'tis here, the head and the hair are white (being the uppermost part) the eyes or countenance, as an ordinary flame, but the feet, or lower part, of the colour of amber. All together making up a fiery flaming appearance, (see ch. 9. Note f.) to represent the gloriousnesse of this coming of Christ to judgment upon his enemies, as he doth in the subsequent Visions. After the same manner God sitting in judgment is represented Dan. 7. 9. he himself, his head, hair, and garments, white as snow or wool, then under that, the throne like a flame of fire, and under that the wheels as burning fire.

g. V. 19. The things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and——] The phrase καὶ ἃ εἰσι, καὶ ἃ μέλλει γίνεσθαι may possibly be rendred, and which are, and which shall come to passe: and if it be so, then it must denote these two other sorts of things, the one then present, and the other future, over and above what he had now seen, v. 13. (which was only the laying of the scene, and the title as it were and breviate of the ensuing Visions of the seven Churches, his care of them, and his severity to all that provoke him to it.) But 'tis much more probable that the first καὶ should be rendred both, thus,

Write

Write the things which thou haſt ſeen, viz. the ſeven lamps, v. 13. and ſeven ſtarres, &c. v. 16. (of which 'tis here added, v. 20. ὃν εἶδες, which thou haſt ſeen, where the εἶδες, thou haſt ſeen, belongs to this, not to any former Viſions) both which are, and which ſhall come to paſſe after them, noting this Viſion (if it belong only to that) to deſcribe both the preſent and future eſtate of thoſe Churches; but if it extend farther to the reſt of the prophecie, then noting the ſubſequent Viſions to contain theſe two heads of matter, the preſent and future dealings of Chriſt with his Church, permitting them for their trial to ſuffer a while, but at length upon their perſeverance rewarding them. Of both theſe it will then be here ſaid, γεάψον ἃ εἶδες, write the things which thou haſt ſeen, of both theſe ſorts, ſome the repreſentation of preſent events, the preſent eſtate of Chriſtianity, and then others the repreſentation of what ſhould for the future come to paſſe; in both which Chriſt's care of his faithfull ſervants, and puniſhing of his enemies, and of all that fall off from him, will be diſcernible. In the expounding theſe words Mr. Br. hath made uſe of a ſpecial ſubtilty, and on that (as he * confeſſes) built his enſuing interpretations. For having rightly concluded from the plain words, that the ἃ εἶδες, the things which thou haſt ſeen, are tam res futuræ quàm præſentes, things future as well as preſent, he interprets that thus, that every one of thoſe ſeven Churches ſignifies two things, one literally, then preſent (of which, being the only true, he hath generally little to ſay) and another by way of antitype in that prophetically contained (as the Church of Epheſus, beſide that which literally it ſignifies, muſt be the whole primitive Church from the Apoſtles to Conſtantine, and the like) and by that means hath obtained a liberty of phanſying whatſoever he will, though never ſo diſtant, and affixing it as the antitype, or ſecond interpretation of thoſe Viſions of the ſeven Churches. The falſineſſe of which proceſſe is farther viſible from the very words on which he laies all his weight (confeſſing the obſervation of that little thing to have been his key to the whole interpretation.) For if, as he would have it, the thing there affirmed were, that the ſame things were both preſent and future, the phraſe muſt then be ἃ καὶ ἐστι καὶ μέλλ γίνεσθ, which both are and ſhall be, whereas the phraſe is quite otherwiſe, the things which thou haſt ſeen, καὶ ἃ ἐστι καὶ ἃ μέλλ, both which are and which ſhall be, or poſſibly, and which are, &c. which clearly is a diſtribution of the Viſions in reſpect of the matter of them, into two ſorts; one, the matter of which was then preſent, the other, the matter of which was to come to paſſe not long after; and no way a diſtribution of their completions, that theſe Viſions were to be doubly fulfilled, once at that preſent, a ſecond time 1600 years after. The groſsneſſe of this deceit was here to be diſplayed, as being the one (groundleſſe) ſupport of the whole enſuing interpretation, which all preſently vaniſheth (as far as concerns this ſecond completion) without any farther confutation.

* Cujus exiguæ rei obſervatio viam mihi aperuit ad intelligendum, ut arbitror, parœnetares Epiſtolas, p. 16.

h. Ἀγγέλοι

V. 20. Angels] *Ἀγγελοι here are, no queſtion, the governours of theſe ſeven Churches, ἐπὶ ἐκκλησίαις ἐπισκόποις ἕπορσι *Ἄγγελοι, ſaith Andr. Cæſareenſ. ſo many overſeers for ſo many Churches, ſo many ſingular perſons to rule, one in each of them; thus called, as the officers and miniſters of Chriſt (aſcending, as it were, and deſcending on Jacobs ladder between God and them) in ruling them, delivering Gods meſſages to them, and alſo returning their meſſages or prayers to God. Thus in a Saxon MS. Biſcopaſ ſýndon ȝoðeſ býðelaſ, Biſhops are Gods bydels, that is, meſſengers or officers. See Sr Hen. Spelman's Gloſſary in the word Bedellus. This title was given to the chief prieſt in the Old Teſtament, particularly in Malachie, For he is the Angel or meſſenger of the Lord of hoſts, whoſe lips therefore were to preſerve knowledge, and from thence, as from the oracle, the people were to require the Law, to receive knowledge and direction for their duty. Theſe Angels are by antient writers known and affirmed to be Biſhops, one in every of thoſe Sees, (and not only ſo, but Metropolitans, to whom the Biſhops of the adjacent cities were ſubordinate: ſee Note b.) And this courſe of government is here owned and approved by Chriſt himſelf, by his ſending thoſe meſſages to thoſe Angels in theſe Churches, and by his holding the ſtarres, which reſemble them, in his right hand, v. 10. & ch. 2. 1. whileſt he viſits, or walks, in the midſt of the Candleſticks or Churches. As for Mr. Brightman's only argument to the contrary, becauſe there is mention of many Biſhops or Elders of Epheſus, Act. 20. 17, 28. that is eaſily anſwered, that the Biſhops of Aſia were the men underſtood in that place, who met Paul at Miletus; but that they are Epiſcopi Epheſi, Biſhops of Epheſus, is a direct falſification of his, there being no ſuch phraſe uſed in that place. And for that one objection which by ſome is drawn againſt their being ſingle perſons, becauſe ch. 2. 24. after ſpeaking to the Angel of Thyatira it is ſaid, ὑμῖν δὲ καὶ λοιποῖς τοῖς ἐν Θυατείροις, but to you and the reſt that are in Thyatira, as if the Angel before were the ὑμεῖς you here, the anſwer will be eaſie, if it be obſerved, that in the antient Greek MSS. particularly that at S. James's, the καὶ is left out, and the words read, ὑμῖν δὲ λέγω τοῖς λοιποῖς ἐν Θυατείροις, to you the reſt, or, to the reſt of you that are in Thyatira, and who have not known the depths, as they call them, but thoſe depths of Satan, &c. Where the ὑμῖν τοῖς λοιποῖς, you the reſt, or the reſt of you, is ſet in oppoſition to the Gnoſtick complying party among them, before mentioned, and belongs not to the Angel or Biſhop, but as one and the prime of that pure, conſtant party. I need adde no more for anſwer to this ſo ſlight an objection. Theſe Angels are here deſcribed by the hieroglyphick of ſtarres, in token of their office to illuminate, and ſend out influences to rule the faithfull under them, as the Sun and the reſt of the ſtarres do this inferiour world; and the Churches where they preſide are called λυχνίαι ſockets for lamps, or candleſticks, as being the places where theſe ſtarres, as ſo many lamps or torches, do ſhine, where they are ſet or faſtned, to give light to all that come into the room. Now becauſe theſe Angels are ſo conſiderable parts in the Churches, therefore it is that the meſſages which are ſent to the whole congregation of Chriſtian profeſſors under them are here addreſs'd particularly to the Angels, c. 2. 1. And ſo in the reſt, where though the Angels were ſingle perſons, yet what is ſaid to them is not ſaid only to their perſons, but to the univerſality of the people under them, whoſe non-proficiency, or remiſſion of degrees of Chriſtian vertue, eſpecially their falling off from the conſtancy and courage of their profeſſion, do deſerve (and are accordingly threatned with) the removal of that Chriſtian knowledge, that grace, thoſe privileges of a Church which had been allowed them, c. 2. 5. which is not ſo properly appliable as a puniſhment of the Biſhop, as of the people under him. And therefore in the Paraphraſe I have generally changed the Singular into the Plural number, by that means to leave it indifferently to the Biſhop of each Church and the people under him, and yet farther to the other Churches ſubordinate to each of the Metropoles here named. (Of the word *Ἀγγελος ſee more Note on Act. 12. e.)

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. II.

1. To the Biſhop and, with him, the Church of Epheſus deliver this meſſage, Thus ſaith Chriſt, (deſcribed c. 1. 13, and 16.) ſuſtaining and honouring with his right hand the ſeven Governours or Biſhops of the ſeven Churches, and coming now to viſit and examine, and (according to deſert) to puniſh or reward the members of theſe Churches, and to admoniſh them timely what may be mended in them;

1. UNto the Angel of the Church of Epheſus write, Theſe things ſaith he that holdeth the ſeven Starres in his right hand, who walketh in the midſt of the ſeven golden Candleſticks;]

a. 2. I obſerve and approve your labour and great induſtry in the Goſpel, and your moſt conſtant patience and perſeverance in the faith, your no kind of compliance with the vitious men that creep in among you: Ye have put the falſe teachers to the teſt, examined their doctrine and miſſion (ſee note on Joh. 20. b.) and found them to be counterfeits.

2. I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canſt not bear them which are evill: and thou haſt tryed them which [a] ſay they are Apoſtles and are not, and haſt found them lyars;]

3. And haſt born, and haſt patience, and for my names ſake haſt * laboured, and haſt not fainted.]

3. And you have formerly undergone many preſſures and perſecutions, and held out againſt all aſſaults of terror or difficulty, and for the profeſſion of Chriſtianity have endured very ſore and ſharp afflictions, and were not then diſheartened in your courſe by perſecutions in the way.

* undergone hard labor, or, toile] κεκοπίακας

b. 4. But one charge or accuſation (ſee Mat. 5. 23.) I have againſt you of this Church, that that vehement, pure, Chriſtian love, (caſting out all fear of danger) which at firſt was in you, and evidenced it ſelf by your confeſſion of the faith with courage, and without fear, you ſince have ſomewhat remitted, and are not altogether ſo fervent, and intenſe, and valiant, as at the firſt you were.

4. Nevertheleſſe † I have ſomewhat againſt thee, becauſe thou [b] haſt left thy firſt love.]

5. Call to mind therefore that degree of Chriſtian zeal and courage which was in you at the firſt, and being ſenſible of the decay, return to it again, and act as Chriſtianly and valiantly in all things as at firſt you did, or elſe I will ſuddainly puniſh you by removing the light of the Goſpel from you, by leaving no Church among you.

5. Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and doe the firſt works; or elſe I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candleſtick out of its place, except thou repent.]

c. 6. Yet one thing is to be ſaid in your commendation, that the temptations of the Gnoſticks being of two ſorts, the baits of luſts, as well as the terrors of worldly ſufferings, though you have been wrought on by the latter of theſe, yet for the former you are free, you deteſt thoſe abominable villanies of luſt, which come from the Nicolaitans, and are gotten into other Churches, v. 15. and 20.

6. But this thou haſt, that thou hateſt the [c] deeds of the Nicolaitans, which I alſo hate.]

7. Let this warning of mine in this viſion be laid to heart by the Chriſtians of Epheſus, and all that are under that metropolis, for it is of near concernment to all: And as it brings terrors to all who ſhall be involved in the ſin mentioned, ſo every one that ſhall hold out, and overcome the temptations, he ſhall have deliverance here, and hereafter eternal life beſtowed upon him; which is the meaning of eating of the tree of life Gen. 2. 22. and may be encouragement and reward ſufficient to thoſe that ſhall lay down their lives for Chriſt, and ſo here is fitly mention'd to thoſe who would not confeſſe Chriſt in time of perſecution.

7. He that hath an eare, let him hear what the Spirit ſaith unto the Churches. To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midſt of the paradiſe of God.]

d. *8. Another meſſage deliver to the Biſhop of Smyrna, another metropolis of Aſia, in theſe words, Thus ſaith Chriſt, the eternal God, that was ſo deſpiſed and contemned by men, who was put to death, but roſe from the dead (ſee c. 1. 11.) and ſo is fit to encourage you in your patience, and ſure to reward you, whatſoever it coſt you, though it be the loſſe of life and all;

8. And unto the Angel of the [d] Church in Smyrna write, Theſe things ſaith the firſt and the laſt, which was dead and is alive;]

e. 9. Your works have been very pious and Chriſtian, your diligence remarkable, and great perſecution and poverty you have ſuffered (but this very thing tends to the encreaſing of your wealth treaſured up for you, and your contentednesſe is at the preſent all riches) and you have been tempted by the contumelies and reproches and railings caſt upon you by the Gnoſticks, who are a ſort of men that take upon them to be Jewes, to avoid perſecutions from them, but indeed are not, live not according to the Law, Gal. 6. 13. that profeſſe to dive into the ſecrets and myſteries of the Old Teſtament (for the underſtanding of which they call themſelves Gnoſticks) and from thence to fetch great ſecrets, which are all nothing but helliſh abominations, and their practices conſequent to them meerly diabolical, accuſing, calumniating, and perſecuting the Orthodox Chriſtians. And therefore if they are of any ſociety, or Synagogue, any religion, 'tis not that of Moſes (from God,) but of the devils inſtitution. Theſe I know have reproached and railed at you, and ye have ſuffered much from them.

9. I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, but thou art rich; and I know the * blaſphemy of them that [e] ſay they are Jewes, and are not, but are the Synagogue of Satan.]

* contumely λοιδορίαν

f. 10. Take courage againſt all poſſible dangers, remembring me, as I have repreſented my ſelf to you, v. 8. And now I tell you before-hand, that your conſtancy to the faith muſt in reaſon be expected to raiſe you up enemies, both at this preſent the Jewiſh zelots for the Synagogue, v. 9. (incenſed againſt you by the Gnoſticks) and afterwards the Romane officers, aſſertors of the diabolical Idol-worſhip againſt Chriſtianity; and theſe latter ſhall apprehend and impriſon ſome of you, being permitted by God to doe ſo, on purpoſe for the farther tryall of your conſtany. And this perſecution, which ſhall come upon you when the Jewes are deſtroyed (in the time of Marcus Aurelius and Verus, under which Polycarpe the Biſhop of this Church ſhall ſuffer death) ſhall then laſt for a little while: and all this ſhall prove a foundation of greater glory to you, and help them to the reward and crown of Martyrdome which ſuffer in it, and that is all the hurt which your conſtancy ſhall bring you.

10. Fear none of thoſe things which thou † ſhalt ſuffer: behold, the devil ſhall [f] caſt ſome of you into priſon, that ye may be * tried, and ye ſhall have tribulation ten daies. Be thou faithfull unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.]

11. They that hold out to the end, that perſevere in deſpight of all theſe temptations, ſhall continue a proſperous flouriſhing Church, ſhall not have their Candleſtick removed from them, as all they ſhall that by the ſharpneſſe of perſecutions are ſcandalized and fall off from Chriſt (ſee note on c. 20. d.)

11. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit ſaith unto the Churches. [He that overcometh ſhall not be * hurt of the ſecond death.]

* injured ἀδικηθῇ

g. 12. This is the meſſage of Chriſt to you, who looketh upon you as a judge, and ſeeth ſomewhat in you which ſhall be puniſhed moſt ſeverely if you repent and reform not ſpeedily;

12. And to the Angel of the Church in [g] Pergamos write, [Theſe things ſaith he who hath the ſharp ſword with two edges;]

13. I know thy works, and where thou dwelleſt, even where Satans [h] ſeat is: and thou holdeſt faſt my name, and haſt not denyed my faith, even in thoſe daies wherein [i] Antipas was my faithfull Martyr, who was ſlain among you, where Satan dwelleth.]

13. I cannot but commend your Chriſtian behaviour and conſtancy, and that the greater, being conſidered with the circumſtances of the place of your abode, in the midſt of ſuch temptations to the contrary, and of the times approaching, wherein Antipas, for his fidelity and courage in preaching the Goſpel, will be (I foreſee) cruelly martyr'd, and where the inſtant malices of the adverſary might poſſibly have terrified you. h. i.

14. But I have a few things againſt thee, becauſe thou haſt there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac to caſt a * ſtumbling-block before the children of Iſrael, to eat things ſacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication.]

* ſcandal, or inare σκάνδαλον

14. But yet for all this courage, great faults there are among you, though the whole Church be not guilty of them, viz. the doctrines and practices of the Gnoſticks are gotten in among you, which are but a tranſcript, as it were, of that famous counſell of Balaam to Balac, which brought that curſe and ruine upon the Iſraelites, when nothing elſe could doe it, conſiſting in joyning and complying with the Idolaters (ſee note b.) and committing all abominable uncleanneſſe (ſee Jude f.)

15. So haſt thou alſo them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate.]

15. In like manner there is gotten in among you, and permitted, or not puniſhed by your Biſhops, that unclean doctrine and practice of the Nicolaitans (ſee note c.) which being moſt odious to me, ought moſt ſharply to have been puniſhed by them.

16. Repent; or elſe I will come unto thee quickly, and fight againſt them with the ſword of my mouth.]

16. And if this lenity be not ſpeedily mended, I will viſit and deſtroy you ſuddenly by judgments parallel to the ſword that fell on thoſe Iſraelites that were corrupted by Balaams counſell, Num. 25. 5.

17. He that hath an eare, let him heare what the Spirit ſaith unto the Churches, To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the [k] hidden Manna; and I will give him a [l] white ſtone, and † in the ſtone a new name written, which no man knoweth ſaving he that receiveth it.]

17. And for all thoſe that keep themſelves pure and ſpotleſſe from theſe temptations, this compliance and uncleanneſſe, let them know that the joies and comforts that come in to them by the practice of the contrary Chriſtian vertues of courage and purity, are, though inviſible, yet far greater then thoſe which theſe carnal Goſpellers enjoy, 1 Cor. 2. 9. and beſides this portion of inward bliſſe (adherent to the practice of duty at the preſent) prepared for them by God, and ſhowr'd down like Manna upon their ſouls, they ſhall over and above (as victors have a ticket given them by the judges, to receive the reward that belongs to them; the value or quality whereof, and their names, is written in that ticket) have a token or ticket given them, with the name of Chriſt written on it, ſignifying the Chriſtian reward of grace and glory, but that ſuch as is not to be conceived what or how valuable it is, but by the enjoying of it. k. l.

18. And unto the Angel of the Church in [m] Thyatira, write, Theſe things ſaith [the Son of God, who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like † fine braſſe.]

† amber, note on ch. 1. d.

18. Chriſt, that appeared to thee ſo gloriouſly c. 1. 15. in token of the judicature which he means to exerciſe, the rewards and puniſhments which he hath in his diſpenſing. m.

19. I know thy works and charity, and * ſervice and faith, and thy patience, and † thy works; and the laſt to be more then the firſt.]

* adminiſtration διακονίαν

† or thy laſt works more then the firſt, for the Kings MS. reads τὰ ἔργα σε τὰ ἐσχατα-

19. I take notice of your Chriſtian actions, and courage in confeſſing of Chriſt (ſee note b.) and your charity or liberality to the poor brethren, and your conſtancy againſt all terrors, and all theſe Chriſtian actions daily improving, and growing greater and more abundant in you.

20. Notwithſtanding I have a few things againſt thee, becauſe thou ſuffereſt that woman [n] Jezebel, * which calleth her ſelf a propheteſſe, to teach, and to ſeduce my ſervants to commit fornication, and to eat things ſacrificed unto Idols.]

* or, which calling her ſelf a propheteſſe doth teach & deceive, for the Ks. MS. reads ἡ λέγουσα ἑαυτὴν προφῆτιν, καὶ διδάσκει καὶ πλανᾷ

20. Yet one quarrel I have againſt you, that you permit that hereſie of the Gnoſticks that take upon them to underſtand myſteries beyond all others, to delude ſome members of your Church, and infuſe their falſe doctrines into them; and among others, thoſe foremention'd v. 14. of filthineſſe, and communicating in Idol-worſhips. n.

21. And I gave her ſpace to repent of her fornications, and ſhe repented not.]

21. And theſe filthy hereticks have not made uſe of the warning by me given them to repent, but ſtill goe on in their impieties.

22. Behold, † I will caſt her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her, into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.]

22. And therefore you may expect that the judgments that ſhall ſuddenly fall upon them, and all that join with them, ſhall be very heavy, if not prevented by their ſpeedy reformation.

23. And I will kill her children with death, and all the Churches ſhall know that I am he which ſearcheth the reins and hearts: and I will give unto every one of you according to your works.]

23. And all that are either leaders or followers in this impietie, ſhall be deſtroyed, to be an example to all the Chriſtian Churches in the reſt of Aſia, that theſe doctrines and practices may be avoided by them, upon ſight of my ſevere viſitation upon theſe; which may aſſure you all, (you Churches of Aſia) that according as you behave your ſelves, ſo you may expect to be rewarded by me.

24. But unto * you, I ſay, and to the reſt in Thyatira, as many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known the depths of Satan, as they ſpeak, I will put upon you none other burthen.

* you I ſay the reſt. for the Kings MS. reads ὑμῖν δὲ λέγω λοιποῖς

25. But that which ye have already, hold faſt † till I come.]

† until the time when I ſhal come, ἄχρις οὗ ἂν ἥξω

24, 25. But to the reſt of you, thoſe of Thyatira which are not thus guilty, which have not given ear to theſe ſecret depths of Gnoſtick villany, to you this acknowledgment and commendation is due, that you are ſuch, that God requires nothing more of you but perſeverance, that you hold out untouch'd and untainted, till this judgment comes upon thoſe wicked that are now among you, and till I come to reward your fidelity and conſtancy.

26. And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto ° the end, to him will I give power over the Nations,

27. (And he ſhall * rule them with a rod of iron, † and as the veſſels of a potter ſhall they be broken to ſhivers) * even as I received of my Father:

28. And I will give him the morning ſtar.]

* feed ποιμανεῖ

† as the potters veſſels are broken together ὡς τὰ σκεύη τὰ κεραμικὰ συντρίβεται

* as I alſo ὡς κἀγὼ

26, 27, 28. And they that thus perſevere in the performance of all Chriſtian duties, pure and ſpotleſſe from all theſe abominable heretical mixtures, they that hold out againſt all perſecutions and temptations, firm and ſpotleſſe, ſhall, when the daies of perſecution are over, be made uſe of to propagate the Goſpel to the Nations, convert the Gentile idolaters to the faith, and become Biſhops of other Churches. And this they ſhall doe ſucceſſefully and efficaciouſly over the Eaſtern Nations. o.

29. He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit ſaith unto the Churches.

a. Φάσκοντες εἶναι Ἀποστόλους

V. 2. Say they are Apoſtles] Who theſe Pſeud-Apoſtles were that this Church of Epheſus had tried and found lyars, may perhaps be reaſonably affirmed out of the ſtories of thoſe times. Gaius in Euſebius l. 3. c. κη'. ſets down the ſtory of Cerinthus the leader of an hereſie, that he pretended Revelations, written ὡς τοῦ Ἀποστόλου μεγάλου, by ſome great Apoſtle, and related τερατολογίας prodigious narrations, ὡς δι' Ἀγγέλων αὐτῷ δεδειγμένας, as ſhewed him by Angels, and then delivered his doctrines of a temporal kingdom of Chriſt after the Reſurrection, and that men ſhould in Jeruſalem live again, and δουλεύειν ἐπιθυμίαις καὶ ἡδοναῖς, ſerve luſts and pleaſures, and ſpend the ſpace of a thouſand years ἐν γάμῳ ἑορτῆς, as in a nuptial feſtivity. The ſame doth Dionyſius Alexandrinus in his ſecond book περὶ ἐπαγγελιῶν ſet down, ſpeaking of Cerinthus and his followers and their doctrine, ὅπερ ἔστιν τῷ τῦ Χριστῦ Βασιλείαν, that Chriſt's kingdom ſhould be an earthly one, and (agreeable to his fanſie who was φιλοσώματος καὶ πάνυ σαρκικὸς, a very carnal man and lover of the body) that it ſhould conſiſt in the ſatisfying of the panch and luſt, σιτίοις, πότοις καὶ γάμοις, in meats, drinks and marriages, and to that purpoſe (that there might be the more plenty of theſe) ἑορταῖς, καὶ θυσίαις, καὶ ἱερείων σφαγαῖς, in feaſts, and ſacrifices, and killing of beaſts or victims. And Irenæus lib. 1. goes farther, mentioning ſome ἀπορρητότερα ψευδοδοξίαι, doctrines of filthineſſe not fit to be named, which he taught his diſciples. And this, it ſeems, in Aſia, and 'tis very probable in Epheſus it ſelf, of which we now ſpeak. For that John after his return from baniſhment lived there, we find affirmed by Clemens in his narration of him tranſcribed by Euſebius, Eccl. Hiſt. l. 3. c. κγ'. And that he going into a Bath on a time, and finding Cerinthus to be there, leaped back, and went out, not enduring to be under the ſame roof with him, for fear, as he ſaid, that it ſhould fall, when ſuch an enemy of Chriſtianity as Cerinthus was in it, is the affirmation of Irenæus, l. 3. out of a tradition of Polycarp: ſee Euſeb. l. 3. c. κη'. And two circumſtances more to our preſent purpoſe will be obſervable in that Author: Firſt, that the Nicolaitans here mentioned to be hated by this Church, v. 6. did riſe immediately after Cerinthus and his followers, (ὅσοι τότων ἦσαν, ſaith Euſebius) and are therefore ſet down immediately after them in the courſe of his Hiſtory, c. κθ'. Secondly, that Dionyſius Alexandrinus comes to take him in, in his diſcourſe on occaſion of this very book, the Revelation, ὅθεν ἡ Ἰωάννυ Ἀποκαλύψεως εἰ πού τινα § l. 3. c. κη' ὡς ἐκ τῆς ἀνέκαθεν ἔδοσεως, ſaith § Euſebius, having expounded ſome parts of the Revelation out of an antient tradition. Whether this were the place of the Revelation which he ſo expounded, I cannot affirm; but of this I am ſure, that he and his followers, pretending to have received their Revelations from ſome prime Apoſtle, and affirming the prodigies he ſpake of to be ſhewed him by Angels, may well be ſaid to ſay they are Apoſtles (that is, to have commiſſion from heaven for their doctrines) when aſſuredly they were not ſuch. And that the Church of Epheſus was not deceived by him, but found out and rejected his errors, appears by S. John avoiding him in that place, as one that was ſo known an enemy of the truth, that he ſpeaks to all that were with him, φεύγωμεν, &c. Let us not come near this vile perſon; which is an interpretation of the ὑ δύνῃ Βαστάσαι κακοὺς here in this verſe, their not enduring theſe vile carnal Goſpellers, but ſeparating from them.

b. Ἀφῆκας τὴν πρώτην ἀγάπην

V. 4. Haſt left thy firſt love] The phraſe ἀφῆκας τῷ πρώτῳ ἀγάπῃ is to be rendred, thou haſt remitted, or abated, thy firſt love; for ſo ἀφιέναι ſignifies (being applied to things of this nature) remiſſion of degrees of any thing, as that is contrary to intenſion of them. Maſter Brightman's fanſie on the word is very obſervable (and from thence it will be eaſie to judge of the ſolidity of the grounds on which he proceeds in his interpretations) * Every one of the Churches, ſaith he, hath ſuch a name given it as will declare its whole condition, as it were by marks written in the forehead. Thus, ſaith he, ἀφῆκας, thou haſt remitted, doth ſufficiently teach what the † Spirit conſidered in this city, viz. that 'twas Epheſus, as it were ἄφεσις, omiſſion, &c. from whence he preſently gathers that by Epheſus is meant the whole Primitive Church till Conſtantine's daies. Thus pitifully ſlight are the marks and characters by which he paſſeth his judgment, and on which he founds his interpretations. For beſides that Epheſus is the name of a city and Church known in the Scripture, and doth as punctually ſignifie that, and nothing but that, as London ſignifies London, (and it may be as reaſonable to ſay that the Epiſtle of Paul to the Epheſians had a particular aſpect on the whole Church till Conſtantine, as that this part of S. Johns Epiſtle to the Angel of the Church of Epheſus belongs to it) the alluſion of aphecas, (for that is the word, ἀφῆκας) to Epheſus, is as remote in ſound as one could well imagine; but then in ſignification much more, ἔφεσις ſignifying deſire or appetite, but ἄφεσις remiſſion or looſing. Now for the other part of this phraſe, πρώτην ἀγάπην, 'tis here not the love or care of the Biſhop toward the flock, as Maſter Brightman would have it, but the great love toward Chriſt, which firſt was in them (not their firſt love as that ſignifies the object of it, Chriſt; for the leaving or utter forſaking of him were not reconcileable with the other commendations which are here given of them, particularly, the ὑπομονὴν ἔχεις, thou haſt patience, at the preſent, thou perſevereſt ſtill in the Chriſtian faith: but it is) their firſt zeal and fervency of love toward Chriſt (ſee Mat. 24. 12.) which it ſeems was in proceſſe of time much remitted in the Chriſtians of that Church. This love, when it is perfect, caſteth out fear; he that hath it, will make no ſcruple to die, or undergo any danger for Chriſt: And thus had this Church formerly behaved themſelves toward Chriſt, κακοπάθησας καὶ ὑ κέκμηκας v. 3. they had endured, and paſs'd through difficulties, and not fainted. But now it ſeems they were fallen into a great and dangerous remiſſeneſſe in this particular; of which therefore if they repent not, they are threatned with removal of their Candleſtick. What this remiſſeneſſe was, may perhaps be gueſs'd by what we ſee propheſied of by Chriſt, Mat. 24 12. & by what we finde affirmed of the Gnoſticks (and among them of a famous leader, Baſilides) who, we know by S. Pauls Epiſtles, had crept at that time into the Churches, particularly into that of Epheſus. Now of their many doctrines and opinions, this one is by Euſebius (and before him by Origen l. 6. contra Celſ.) diſtinctly mentioned l. 4. c. ζ'. ἀδιαφορεῖν εἰδωλοθύτων ὑπομενόντας καὶ ὁμνύντας ἀδιαφυλάκτως τῷ πίστιν, καὶ τοῦ ΠΝ διωγμῶν καιροὺς, that it was an indifferent thing, and no ſin to eat things offered to Idols, and confidently to abjure the faith in times of perſecution. This is clearly, though ſarcaſtically, ſet down by * Lucian, or whoſoever was the writer of Philopatris, ſcoffing at the Chriſtians of his time, under the perſecuter Trajane, in that Dialogue. There Triephon, that goes for the Chriſtian, firſt indeavours to convert Critias to his religion: and as in that Dialogue it appears that the Chriſtians talk'd much of the approach of † ruine to the Romane Armie and greatneſſe (which might make Triephon ſo well pleaſed with his profeſſion, and ſo forward to invite others to it, as to a party that would ſoon be very proſperous) ſo at length in the cloſe close of the Dialogue, when Cleolaus brings them news of the Romans good successes in Persia, and Assyria; and Ægypt, and Scythia, which fell out about the fifteenth of Trajane, then Triephon would speak no more of Christianity, but, as an Apostate or desertor, betakes himself to the * unknown God at Athens, and joines with Critias in that worship, as that which was likely to yield him most safety, and then laughs at the Christians, and gives them leave to say what they please, flatter themselves with their imaginarie hopes; but ὁ φεγγὶς Ἱπποκλείδης, in the Proverbial speech, he considers them not, looks no more after them. To this also the Emperor Adrian's Epistle seems to refer, which is set down by * Vopiscus out of Phlegon, where speaking of the great levity of Ægypt (in reference, I suppose, to these heretical Christians in those parts, followers of Simon Magus, Basilides, &c. whom, under the title of Samaritæ, he distinguishes from Christians) that it was * light, pendulous, flying from one side to the other upon every slight report; he after expresseth it distinctly, * Those that worship Serapis are Christians, and those who call themselves Bishops of Christ are devoted to Serapis: and again, * The very Patriarch, (that is, either some High priest of the Jewes, or some Gnostick Pseudo-Patriarch of Alexandria, or some venerable grave man among them) when he comes into Ægypt, is by some (that is, by the heathen officers) forced to worship Serapis, for fear of persecution from them, and by others (that is, the Christians) to worship Christ. Adding in fine, that * they have one God, whom Christians, and Jews, and all, even the Gentiles, worship. This doctrine of the Gnosticks had, it seems, gotten into other Churches; for to it the Apostle distinctly speaks (at least as far as belongs to the first part of it, which generally was attended with the other, the eating of Idol-sacrifices being designed by them to avoid the persecution of the Pagans, as well as the other of renouncing the faith was to avoid the persecution of the Jews) 1 Cor. 8. 1. and thereupon it is that he speaks of γνῶσις knowledge so much, v. 1, 2. 7, 10, 11. and opposes to it ἀγάπη, charity or love, v. 1. this love of Christ, the thing which now we speak of, and bid them take heed how they use their ἐξουσία, the Christian liberty, upon which they grounded the indifferency of doing thus. And upon this ground, and in this sense of loving the Lord Jesus Christ, it is, I suppose, that ch. 16. 21. he pronounceth anathema in the highest degree against him that loves not our Lord Jesus Christ, viz. him that renounces him in time of temptation. For as for want of inward love, not expres'd in some such scandalous act, that cannot come under the Churches censure, nor be fit matter for an anathema. And so Phil. 3. 18. he mentions them under the title of the enemies of the crosse of Christ (mentioned also by Polycarp in his Epistle to them, p. 23.) that is, those that were not at all for the suffering of persecution for the faith, (the other part of that doctrine of theirs) whose end, saith he, is destruction, their God their belly, (by which they are again described Rom. 16. 18.) minding earthly things, (and, it seems, nothing else) and therefore would not lose any of them for the profession of Christ. And in many passages in the Epistle to the Ephesians, it appears, by his fortifying them against the deceits of these Gnosticks, that they were a creeping into that Church also. And particularly c. 5. where not only the prohibition of all the ἀκαθαρσία, αἰσχρότης, and the μὴ ἀνήκοντα, all that abominable filthinesse, was by the Apostle set down on purpose, in opposition to the doctrine and practice of the Gnosticks, v. 3, 4, 5, 6. (as appears by the μηδεὶς ἀπατάτω κενοῖς λόγοις, let no man deceive you with vain words, perswading you, as the Gnosticks did, that this was part of Christian liberty, and but an indifferent thing also) but particularly his close of salutation to all those that love the Lord Jesus ἐν ἀφθαρσίᾳ, so as not to be corrupted by any of the baits and seductions of those evil times, in opposition, as I suppose, to the Gnosticks in two particulars; both in the ἀφθαρσία, incorruption or purity, contrary to their filthy doctrines and practices called φθοραὶ corruptions, and in that fervent sincere love of Christ which they wanted, being, as he saith, lovers of lusts more then lovers of God, 2 Tim. 3. 4. And so again in his commanding them to walk in love, c. 5. v. 2. which he expresses by the example of Christs love, which made him sacrifice his life for us, by that means shewing what love it was that needed stirring up in them, even that which the Gnosticks profess'd to have none of, and which here, through their infusions, the Ephesians are said much to have remitted, viz. that sincere love to Christ (ἀγάπη ἀνυπόκριτος, love without hypocrisie, commended to the Romans, c. 12. 9. in reflexion on the Gnosticks also among them, as many other passages in the latter part of that Epistle, ch. 13. 1. in respect of their doctrines of liberty, and v. 13. of their luxury and uncleanesse) which would make them that have it perfectly, to lay down, that is, venture their lives for Christ, and put off all fear of persecution. According to which it is that S. John, in his first Epistle, defining that perfect love to Christ which is required of us, saith, that it consists in having παῤῥησία ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως, confidence and courage to confesse Christ in the day of Judgment, that is, when by so doing we come to be accused before, or condemned by persecutors to death it self, and that again it casts out fear, v. 18. and that this is necessary to that confessing of Christ, v. 15. of which the same thing is there affirmed (viz. that he that doth so, abideth in God, and God in him) which is affirmed of continuing in love, v. 16. which place, as it was meant by the Apostle directly against this doctrine of the Gnosticks, concerning the lawfulnesse and indifferentnesse of not suffering for Christ, and abjuring him in case of persecution, and is so made use of by Tertullian against these very men, Adv. Gnost. c. 12. and De fuga in persecutione c. 9. so was it by that Apostle directly designed to these Asiaticks, who were his care or charge (τὰς αὐλόθι, that is, in Asia, διέτριψεν ἐκκλησίας, saith Eusebius l. 3. c. κγ'. and that he died in this Ephesus, the principal part of this his charge, see the * Epistle of Polycrates then Bishop there) that Epistle of his being addres'd as a defensative against the Gnosticks that were creeping in among them. And so was S. Peters also to the same Asiaticks, who from the point of uncleanesse, and contemning of superiours, which were two parts of the Gnosticks character, 1 Pet. 2. 12, 13. proceeds to this of suffering for Christ v. 19, &c. and c. 3. 15, 17. and 4. 16. the disliking of which, and not thinking themselves obliged to it, was another part: and so 2 Pet. 2. where he describes these very hereticks, ψευδοδιδάσκαλοι false teachers, bringing in villanous base heresies, v. 1, 3. and which he foretells them ἔσονται should come among them, he saith they are ἀρνησάμενοι αὐτοὺς δεσπότην ἀρνούμενοι, such as deny and renounce the Lord that bought them, that is, deny (Christ in time of persecution, counting that an indifferent thing, and thinking themselves Christians for all this, (for otherwise they would have been censured by the Apostles as more then false teachers, perfect Apostates, and not hereticks only) and making it one of their δόγματα or doctrines of liberty which they laboured to bring into the Church. The same is said of them again, Jude 4. παρεισέδυσαν &c. ἀσεβεῖς τὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ χάριν μετατιθέντες εἰς ἀσέλγειαν, there are certain men crept in--ungodly men, turning the grace of God into lasciviousnesse, which is clearly spoken of the Gnosticks and their followers, οἱ ἀρνούμενοι ἀρνούμενοι, &c. that deny and renounce our only Master and Lord Jesus Christ. The very same is noted of these Gnosticks in the Epistle to the Galatians, c. 6. 12. who would make them to be circumcised only ἵνα μὴ τῷ σταυρῷ τοῦ Χριστοῦ διώκωνται, that they might not be persecuted for the crosse of Christ, that is, by the Jews. And accordingly this doctrine and practice of the Gnosticks was so taken up by the other following hereticks of those first times, that Eusebius speaking of some of the confuters of Montanus, and the οἱ κατὰ Φρύγας the hereticks about Phrygia, and setting down the words of a principal one of them, he saith first, that he had a combat with some of them in that very Church of Galatia; and then among other things he observes of them, that when all other Christians were persecuted either by Jews or Heathens, not one of them either ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων ἐδιώχθη or ὑπὸ παρανόμων ἀπεκτάνθη, was persecuted by the Jews or killed by the Heathens. Which was a special intimation of this δόγμα of compliance among these hereticks and all that sprang from them. To the same pertains again that of the Hebrews, c. 10. 25. who forsook the assemblies, and that sure for fear of persecutions; and there they are said ὑποστέλλεσθαι, to draw back, (in opposition to the just mans living by faith) v. 38. and so have need of ὑπομονὴ patience, perseverance, v. 36. and are exhorted to take heed of apostasie, c. 3. 12. By all this it is clear what is meant by the Ephesians remitting their first love, that is, receiving some infusions of this Gnostick doctrine, which consisted in an opposition to Christ's doctrine of confessing the truth, especially before persecuters of it, (and is express'd by δειλία and ἀπιστία cowardise and unfaithfullnesse, Rev. 21. 8. attended there with all the filthy practices of the Gnosticks) in a παῤῥησία, or couragious espousing of his cause; which courage having formerly been in this Church, was now remitted, not only through some weakenesse, but, it seems, by imbibing this doctrine, which made it an ἀδιάφορον, or indifferent thing even to forswear Christ, rather then die for him: and yet did these conceive themselves to continue Christians for all this, and so indeed were, so farre as believing in Christ, but they were not so farre advanced as to that greater pitch of love that express'd it self in confessing him when that doctrine was persecuted among men. To this I conceive S. Paul referres, when in the qualification of the πρεσβύτας, Tit. 2. 2. he adds not only ὑγιαίνοντας τῇ πίστει, healthy or sound in the faith, in opposition to heretical doctrines of those times, but also τῇ ἀγάπῃ and ὑπομονῇ, in love and patience, in opposition to the practices of these Gnosticks, who did not love Christ so well as to persevere in confessing him, or to suffer any thing for him. What is thus observed of the Gnosticks doctrine and infusions against confessing in time of persecution, is by * Epiphanius affirmed also of one of Elxai in the 6th of Trajan's reign, who, saith he, affirmed it to be no sin to abjure the faith in time of persecution, so it were retained in the heart. From these, saith he, came the Helkesaitæ in after-times, mention'd not only by Epiphanius, but also by Eusebius Hist. l. 6. c. λη'. out of Origen upon Psal. 82. who sets it down for one of their doctrines, ὅτι τὸ ἀρνῆσασθαι διάφορον δεῖ· † καὶ ὁ μὲ νοήσας τῷ σώματι ἀρνήσηται οὐ ἀνάγκαις, τῇ δὲ καρδίᾳ ᾖ χρὴ, that it is an indifferent thing to deny Christ: that he that thinks aright, may in time of distresse deny with the tongue, so he doe not with the heart. The same is also by Tertullian in Scorpiaco affirmed of Prodicus and the Adamites, Non esse palam confitendum Christum, nec pro eo subeundum martyrium, that Christ must not be openly confess'd, nor martyrdome suffered for him.

c. Νικολαϊτῶν ἔργα

V. 6. Deeds of the Nicolaitans] This Church of Ephesus, though infected with one doctrine of the Gnosticks, (see Note b.) was not, it seems, in any considerable manner defiled with their other carnal infusion, against which S. Paul had fortified them, Ephes. 5. 3, 11, 12. and this is here express'd by the Spirits testimony of them, that they hate the deeds of the Nicolaitans. Who these Nicolaitans were, may appear by Eusebius Eccl. Hist. l. 3. c. 29. out of Clemens Alex. l. 3. Strom. thus Nicolas the Deacon mention'd in the Acts, having a beautifull wife, was by the Apostles (after Christs ascension) reproached and upbraided that he was jealous of her, whereupon he brought out his wife before all men, and gave any that would leave to marry her, saying, that this was agreeable to that saying, ὅτι παραχρῆσθαι τῇ σαρκὶ δεῖ, that men ought to abuse the flesh. The same is affirmed by Irenæus l. 1. c. 27. Others which followed him, and laid hold of this action and speech of his ἁπλῶς καὶ ἀβασανίστως, simply and without examination of the meaning of it, ἀναιδῶς ἐκπορνεύσει, saith Clemens, commit all kinde of filthinesse upon this score, without any kinde of shame. This speech used by Nicolas, and so abused by his followers, is by Eusebius said to be the saying of Matthias, σαρκὶ μὲν μάχεσθαι καὶ παραχρῆσθαι, that we must fight with the flesh and abuse it, καὶ μηδὲν αὐτῇ πρὸς ἡδονὴν ἐνδιδόναι, and not allowing it any thing for pleasure, ψυχὴν αὔξειν διὰ πίστεως καὶ γνώσεως, encrease the soul by faith and Christian knowledge. And this, saith he, was Nicolas's meaning in the use of those words; and his bringing forth his wife, of whom he was said to be jealous, was, saith he, ὑπερβολὴ πάθους, a disdaining of all that carnal pleasure or desire, καὶ ἡ ἐγκράτεια τῶν σαρκικῶν ἡδονῶν, a containing from those pleasures that are so desired by men. An argument of the truth of which, saith he, was this, that he never used any other woman but his wife; and having children by her, they all remained perpetual virgins. Which relation of his concerning the person of Nicolas, be it true or no, 'tis yet clear that his followers, which are by Eusebius said τὸ αἵρεσιν αὐτῶν μιλιόνλες, to enter on his heresie, and here are called Νικολαΐται Nicolaitans, were guilty of all abominable, shameless uncleanesse, and called that the abusing of the flesh, and so made a Christian duty of the most abominable sin, and put off all shame and reverence in the acting of it.

d. V. 8. Church in Smyrna] The strangeness of Mr. Brightman's interpretations will here again appear, so farre from being the speaking of God by him (as he pretends) that it is manifest that any thing that any mans phansie could represent to him, (or incline him to wish that it were the meaning of a part of this prophecie) might as commodiously be affix'd to it, as that to which 'tis here applied. For first, saith he, it must observed that Smyrna is northward from Ephesus, and Pergamus from Smyrna, and thence he concludes that this order similem Ecclesiæ progressum proculdubio monstrat, doth without all doubt shew the like progresse of the Church, still farther from the sun, the fountain of light, that is, from the first purity to greater darknesse, till at last it comes to Pergamus, the utmost Northern point, and then turns back again toward the South. What the progresse of the Church hath been, from greater to lesser purity, need not be disputed; but that any such degeneration was noted by the situation of Smyrna toward Ephesus is so farre from being proculdubio, farre from all doubt, that 'tis certainly a fansie of the writers own brain, without all ground imaginable in this vision, which doth not at all take notice of this situation, or descend in the least degree to such minute considerations. After this, his second observation is, that Smyrna signifies myrrhe, and that sweet and gratefull to God: which being so contrary to the former observation of degeneration to greater impurity, noted thereby, it may well be expected that the artifice of accommodating it to his purpose must be very strange; and so it is: for, saith he,

Σμύρνα

* Though

* Externâ quidem specie deformior est, nullo legitimæ politiæ ornatu splendida, quâ ratione septentrionalis recessus illi convenit; piorum tamen ardens studium, qui pro veritate fortissimè propugnabant in illo misero squallore, excitabat Deo suavissimum odorem, f. 28.

* Though in the outward shew that Church was more deformed then the other, wanting the splendor and ornament of the due polity, or Church-government, in which respect the Northern situation agrees to it; yet the ardent love of the godly, who valiantly contended for the truth in that state of deformity, raised up to God a most sweet savour.

Thus easy is it for a licentious fansie to transform any thing into any thing, even into the most contrary shape, to make the sweet myrrhe denote the most ungratefull, corrupt state of the Church, because, forsooth, there were some in it sweet and gratefull. But I demand, Were those pious defenders of the truth denoted by Smyrna, or not? If they were, then was it most unjust to affirm that the degeneration from the primitive purity was noted by it: if they were not, then is it a grosse deceit to render this reason of this denomination; the same directly as if he should say, that the Church of that age which he referres to was impure and corrupt, and that was expresly signified by the name, which signifies the greatest purity and acceptableness to God.

e. Λέγοντας Ἰουδαίους εἶναι ἑαυτοὺς συναγωγὴν τοῦ Σατανᾶ

V. 9. Say they are Jewes] Those that here are said to say that they are Jewes, when they are indeed the Synagogue of Satan, might probably enough be thought the followers of Helxai in Epiphanius haer. 19. of whom he saith that he was a Jew by birth, and of Jewish opinions, and join'd himself to the Hereticks of that party, but did not live according to the Law. But because this Helxai was of a later beginning then the matter and persons spoken of in this prophecie seem to be, and because such men as he, when they did arise, (I mean, Hereticks of all sorts, in those times) did join together in that great heresie of the Gnosticks, we must not fasten this part of this Vision upon any such inconsiderable person as Helxai, but resolve that the men here spoken of are directly the Gnosticks, who, that they might not be persecuted by the Jewes, made men circumcise themselves, which was directly the pretending that they were as good Jewes as any, Circumcision being a mark of the Proselytes of justice, and supposing the observation of the whole Law (of these see Gal. 6. 12. and Note b. on this Chapter) but were not really observers of the Mosaical Law, Gal. 6. 3. ἀλλὲ γὰρ οἱ περιτεμνόμενοι αὐτοὶ νόμον φυλάσσουσι, for they doe not themselves keep the Law (perhaps were not themselves circumcised; for the ἀλλὲ may belong to the whole complexum περιτεμνόμενοι νόμον φυλάσσουσι, and not to φυλάσσουσι only, thus, they that make others to be circumcised, are not circumcised themselves, doe not themselves keep the Law) but only doe εὐπροσωπεῖν δὲ προσωπῶν, as he there saith, make a fair appearance, make advantage to themselves, to avoid the fury of the Jewish zelots, by causing others to be circumcised. And of these it is that Ignatius speaks Ep. ad Philadelph. when he warns them not to learn Judaisme περὶ ἀκροβύστου, of those that are not circumcised. Now why these that thus pretend to be Jewes are here called the synagogue of Satan, is clear, viz. because their heresie was made up of all filthinesse and abominable carnality, which is intimated in many places of the Scripture by ἀσέλγειαι, ἀκαθαρσίαι, πονηρίαι, κακίαι, ἀσέμνοι αἰσχρολογίαι, πλεονεξίαι, &c. all words to denote these defiled practices of theirs; and set down distinctly by Epiphanius and others, but are too unsavory to be here described. How commodiously these are by M. Brightman affirmed to be the Arians, pretending to be the purest Christians, when they are not, (representing the purest Christians by the Jewes, which were their greatest enemies and persecuters) I shall not here endeavour to examine.

f. Μέλλει βαλεῖν ἐξ ὑμῶν εἰς φυλακήν

V. 10. Cast some of you into prison] This persecution here foretold seems to have fallen out in the time of the joint reign of Marcus Aurelius Verus, commonly called Philosophus, and Lucius Verus his brother, assumed by him into the Empire anno 161. who reigned near twenty years. In his time (as it appears by Eusebius l. 4. c. 15. and the Epistle of the Church of Smyrna there) μέγισοι τῶν Ἀσίαν ἀνεδαφύσησαν διωγμοὶ, very great persecutions disturbed Asia. Of this persecution 'tis remarkable that it fell very heavy on this Church of Smyrna, and that Polycarpus was martyr'd in it, being till that time (at the age of 86.) Bishop of this Church, which therefore wrote a full narration of it to the other Churches in that famous Epistle of theirs recorded by Eusebius, and set out lately at London by the Archbishop of Armagh. Before him many others were martyred διὰ παντὸς εἴδους κολάσεων καὶ βασάνων, with all kind of punishments and tortures, set down to the life in that Epistle. But of Polycarpus the story is most large, and may there be viewed, out of which three things only I shall mention, in order to the explicating of this place: first, That he himself received a Vision a little before it, and saw in his sleep his pillow whereon he lay on a suddain set on fire and consumed, and as soon as he waked, told those which were near him, that he should διὰ πυρὸς ζωὴν μιᾶς ἁλῶναι, be burnt for Christ, which signifies this martyrdome of this Angel of the Church of Smyrna (this ὁ τῆς Ἀσίας διδάσκαλος, ὁ πατὴρ τῶν Χριστιανῶν, as the persecuters called him, the doctor of Asia, the father of the Christians) to have been so considerable a passage of the Divine œconomy, that it was thought fit to be matter of a Vision to him, and so might also well be to S. John at this time: And not only this in a dream, but, as he was a going to the stake, a voice was heard by many bystanders, coming from heaven, Ἰσχυε, Πολύκαρπε, καὶ ἀνδρίζου, Polycarpus, be strong and valiant. The second thing is, That this death of his was the quenching of those flames, the ending of that Emperors persecution against the Christians, who ὥσπερ ἐπισφραγίσας διὰ τοῦ μαρτυρίου αὐτοῦ κατέπαυσε τὸν διωγμὸν, saith the Epistle, he did as 'twere seal up by his martyrdome, and so give a conclusion to, the persecution: which, I suppose, is the meaning of the time of ten daies here set down for the affliction, noting some determinate (not very long) time in that Princes reign, wherein it should last, and then be quieted again. The third thing is, That not only upon Polycarpus, but upon many others, (particularly on Germanicus) great persuasions were used by the Heathens to make them renounce their faith and save their lives, which is the meaning of the ἵνα πειρασθῆτε πειρασθῆτε, that you may be tempted: and although some (as Quintus a Phrygian) were overcome with these temptations, τῷ φυχῷ μαλακισθέντες, &c. yet great multitudes continued constant and faithfull unto death, and so were rewarded with this crown of life, that is, the honour of Martyrdome first, and then the blisse.

Δέκα ἡμερῶν

V. 12. Pergamus] That by Pergamus is here meant the Christian Church from Gratian, An. Chr. 380. to the year 1300. is the phansie of Mr. Brightman, somewhat about the proportion of the rest of his interpretations. For, for this his only ground of affirming is, that Smyrna was distant from Ephesus but 320 furlongs, but Pergamus from Smyrna a greater space, about 540 furlongs. But to see how fansie rules this interpreter, and not any rule of proportion. For supposing that these distances of these cities had any mysterious signification in them (whereas they are not so much as taken notice of in the Visions) yet when the 320 furlongs had been set to denote no longer space then from Constantine to Gratian, that is, not above sixty years, what appearance or pretence of reason can there be, that the addition of 220. furlongs to that number, which wants a third part to be double to the former, should improve that 60 into 920 years, which is almoſt ſixteen times as much as that former? But more wonderful it is, that having proceeded by this rule of proportion, wherein 540 furlongs, that is, about 68 Engliſh miles, ſhould ſignifie the ſpace of 900 years, yet afterwards the 80 Engliſh miles, whereby Thyatira was diſtant from Pergamus, ſhould ſignifie but 220 years: the unproportionableneſſe of which being diſcerned by him, was ſure the reaſon that he there choſe to ſet down that ſpace in Engliſh miles, whereas the former had been ſet down by furlongs, the eighth part of a mile, that ſo the greater number of thoſe in one place, then of miles in the other, might amuſe the Reader, and keep him from taking notice of the unproportionableneſſe. pag. 37.

h. Θρόνος ὁ τοῦ Σατανᾶ

V. 13. Satans ſeat] This throne of Satan ſurely ſignifies the power of Satan, exerciſed in their idolatrous worſhips and ſacrifices. Thus, ſaith Surius, there was a Temple of Diana at Pergamus at this time. And in the Greek Μηνολόγιον, where Antipas's Martyrdome is commemorated, though there be not mention of this Temple, yet there is of the Idolworſhippers and their ſacrifices, of the Devils (Δαίμονες σεβόμενοι παρ' αὐτοῖς) that were worſhipp'd among them, and did then acknowledge themſelves οἰκεῖν ἐν τῷ τόπῳ, to inhabit and reſide in that place, and receive τὰς προσαγομένας θυσίας, the ſacrifices that were brought them, and, in a word, of the ἡ τῶν Ἑλλήνων παλαιὰ θρησκεία, the old religion of the Grecians that was amongſt them, with which Chriſtianity began now to be Competitour. To all this Metaphraſtes adds the great barbarity and profeſs'd injuſtice of that place, whoſe Citizens, ſaith he, took themſelves to be juſt, and valiant, and good, (interpreted it a ſpecial piece of vertue) if they did but accuſe a Chriſtian, or bring him to his martyrdome. By other Authors it appears that Æſculapius had a Temple there, and Andreas Cæſareenſis ſaith of it, κατεσκολον ἦσαν ὑπὲρ τὴν Ἀσίαν πᾶσαν, that it was fuller of Idols then all Aſia beſide.

i. Ἀντίπας

Ib. Antipas] The ſtory of Antipas's ſufferings in the reign of Domitian is ſet down compleatly by the Menology April 11. That he was contemporary with the Apoſtles, ordained Biſhop of the (Aſiatick) Church about Pergamus, ἦν χὶ Πέργαμον * τῆς Ἀσίας ὁπίσκοπος καθεστώς· that in his very old age, ἐποίμανεν, he fed and ruled the flock in all godlineſſe, and was therefore apprehended by the Idolaters, the Devils that were worſhipp'd among them, appearing to them and telling them, that they could not dwell there, nor receive the ſacrifices which were brought them, ἀλλὰ ἐξελαύνεσθαι ὑπὸ τοῦ Ἀντίπα, but that they were driven away by Antipas. Hereupon he was carried before the Prefect, who endeavoured to perſwade him ὅτι τὰ πρεσβύτερα τιμιώτερα ἦν, that the old religion of the Gentiles was more venerable, that Chriſtianity was but ὀψέ ποτε ἀρξαμένη, newly ſprung, received by few, and ſo not ſo venerable as the Grecian worſhip. To which he oppoſed the ſtory of Cain, and in him the antiquity of impiety, Which yet ſure, ſaid he, was not fit for godly men to ſet before them for an example. Whereby the Prefect being enraged put him into a brazen bull, τῷ χὶ τύπον θεὸς τεχνεργηθέντι χαλκευργήματι, wherein praiſing the mercy and power of God, and giving him thanks ὑπὲρ ὧν ἠξιώθη δι' αὐτὸν παθεῖν, for what he was thought worthy to ſuffer for him, &c. he was there ſcalded to death; and to him this inſcription is ſet in a diſtich,

Ὃς σε φλογίζειν εἶχεν, ἀ κατέζεν,

Thou art, O Antipas, ſet to wreſtle with a bull, which could ſcald, but was not able to gore thee. As for Mr. Brightman's wanton phanſie of this name * Antipas, that it doth denote that the Martyrs of that age, to which he refers that part of the Viſion, ſhould be Antipapæ, or Antipopes, it is too vain to be ſeriouſly repeated or conſidered.

* perhaps it ſhould be ἐκκλησίας, for ſo after it follows, ὑπάρχων ὁ τῆς κατὰ Πέργαμον ἐκκλησίας Ἀρχιερεύς

* Ἐρεσίτω Antipas non ficto ſed vero nomine, quod tamen toti penè literis & ſyllabis Martyrii hujus temporis declarat fuiſe Antipapas. E. 23.

V. 17. Hidden Manna] Manna, that bread that came down from heaven among the Iſraelites, was ſo called from מָנָה, præparavit, ἄρτος ἕτοιμος ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ, bread ready to eat, ſent down to them from heaven, in the phraſe of the Book of Wiſdome. By this may fitly be denoted all the inward comfort and refreſhment and ſuſtenance of ſouls which God affords Chriſtians in this life, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him, 1 Cor. 2. 9. and particularly the inward joy that ariſeth from the practice of Chriſtian vertues, which carry with them a bleſſedneſſe in this life, eſpecially of confeſſing and ſuffering for Chriſt; and that is here ſaid to be beſtowed upon the Conquerour, that is, on him that holds out, falls not away to eating of the Idol-feaſts, which they that did, and by that means promiſed themſelves advantage and ſafety, are ſaid by Euſebius (ſpeaking of thoſe times) to have failed of thoſe very advantages they looked for, being put to death by the perſecutors under pretence of ſome other cauſe, as guiltie of homicide, &c. and ſo to have periſhed without all comfort or hope, of which the faithfull Confeſſors were ſo full. A notable teſtimony we have of this in Euſebius l. 5. c. 1. Ἐνταῦθα μεγάλη τις οἰκονομία θεοῦ ἐγίνετο, &c. there was a ſtrange diſpoſal of divine providence obſervable at that time (ſpeaking of Polycarp's Martyrdome:) For they that, when they were apprehended, denied Chriſt, were yet impriſoned as Chriſtians, and there kept as murtherers and abominable perſons, and ſo were doubly miſerable above others, whoſe afflictions were alleviated, ſaith he, by the joy of ſuffering for Chriſt, by the hope of Gods promiſes, by their love to Chriſt, and the Spirit of the Father; which all together make up the Manna here ſpoken of. And this is fitly here called κεκρυμμένον hidden or ſecret, becauſe it is enjoyed in the heart of the Chriſtian only. k. Μάννα κεκρυμμένον

Ib. White ſtone] Ψῆφος ſignifies properly calculus, a ſtone, ſuch as they uſed in popular Judicatures or Elections, the cuſtome being to give their votes in either of theſe by ſuch ſtones. Theſe were either white or black; the white was a token of abſolution or approbation, the black of condemnation or rejection. Agreeably hereunto, as there were Judges in the Agones, ſo there were calculi too, by which the Victors reward was aſſigned to him, a white ſtone noting it, and the Victors name with the value of the prize written on it. That theſe are here referred to, appears by the phraſe, νικῶντι δώσω, to him that overcometh will I give, noting that reward which the βραβευταὶ did adjudge to them whom they approved of, viz. to the δόκιμοι, or νικῶντες, approved and conquerours, as it is in the Oracle, l. Ψῆφος λευκὴ

Καὶ δοκίμους στέψει, ——

Chriſt will be ſure to give them their due rewards, and will crown thoſe that are approved. Accordingly the Roman Cæſars in their games, which were in ſome kind imitations of the Grecians, had their teſſeræ lignea, which they threw among the people, with the name of Corn, or Plate, or Servants, or Garments written on them, which being caught by any, and carried to ſuch an Officer, brought him that, whatſoever it was, which was written on it. And ſo Ariſtides the Orator ſaith, he received ψῆφος from Æſculapius. See Canter. Novar. Lect. l. 5. c. 21. And this reward is here ſaid to be a new name, that is, the name of Chriſt on this white ſtone, noting the reward of perſeverance in Chriſtianity to belong to him of whom 'tis here ſaid, that 'tis an honour and dignity that no man can judge the advantages of but he that hath received it; as amongſt us, he that draws in a Lotterie hath Ὄνομα καινὸν ὃ οὐδεὶς οἶδεν, εἰ μὴ ὁ λαμβάνων hath in the paper (answerable to the ψῆφος here) which he draws the name of the prize which belongs to him, and that he so draws, that no man but himself knows what it is. Thus c. 19. 12. speaking of Christ's victory over his enemies by bringing some to Christianity, and destroying others, it is first said, that he hath many crowns upon his head, each of those being a testimony of a victory over some kingdom: and then to the same purpose it follows, he hath a name that no man knows but himself, that is, such a ψῆφος, or white stone, or counter, on which his name is written, by which he is to receive his reward, which according to this custome here may be looked on and seen by himself, but by no body else without his permission. And what that reward was, is after set down in that place, v. 16. (under the title of his name) to be King of Kings, &c. that is, for the Princes of the world to be converted to Christianity.

m. Θυάτειρα

V. 18. Thyatira] That Thyatira is the name of a City then in being really, appears from Act. 16. 14. As for Mr. Brightman's fansie that the word is θυάτειρα a young or new-born daughter, and so notes the growing piety of the Church from the year 1300 to 1520, which, saith he, as a young child, grows till it comes to perfection; this may go in the number of his profound inventions, of which he would perswade the Readers that they are the dictates of the holy Ghost, which was somewhat necessary to be pretended, there being so little shew of sense or reason in them.

n. Ιεζαβὴλ

V. 20. Jezabel] The heresie of the Gnosticks is here described by Jezabel, and the destruction thereof here set down v. 22. It began in Simon Magus: see Euseb. l. 2. c. α'. He, saith he, seeing Philip's miracles, and pretending faith in Christ, so far as to obtain Baptisme from him, set up μαιοτάτην αἵρεσιν, a most polluted abominable heresie. Then c. κγ'. he did many magical miracles by help of the Devil's working in him, and was counted a God in Rome in Claudius's time, and was generally worshipp'd by the Samaritans, and by some few ὀλίγοις ἔθνεσι in other nations (whether Judæa or Galilee, or in other places where the Jews were dispersed) ὡς πρῶτον θεὸν as a chief, or first, or prime God. This was the meaning of δύναμις θεοῦ (as the antient MSS. have it, see Act. 8. 10.) ἡ καλουμένη μεγάλη, the power of God, called the great power, that is, the supreme Divine power, (see 2 Thess. 2. 4.) To him was joined a famous whore of Tyre, and she was styled his πρώτη ἔννοια, his first conception. Now those that followed this Sect of his, saith he, τὰ σώφρονα καὶ διὰ καθαρᾶς βίου ζῶντα πᾶσι βεβοημένην χειτιανῶν φιλοσοφίαν ὑποκινοῦμοι, &c. pretending the Christian Religion, so famous for temperance and purity of life, thinking to keep free from idolatry, which by receiving Christianity they had forsaken, by the treachery of his heresie were brought to it again, καταπίπλοντες ὅτι γεγραφὰς καὶ εἰκόνας αὐτῶ τε τῶ Σίμωνι καὶ τῆς συνοίκου αὐτῶ Ἑλένης, θυμιάμασί τε καὶ θυσίαις καὶ σπονδαῖς τύτοις θρησκεύειν ὀλιγωρῶντες, falling down before images and pictures of Simon and Helena, and doing them worship with incense and sacrifices, &c. As for the ὑποῤῥητότερα the more secret and mysterious practices of these men, they are such, saith he, ὧν τὸ πρῶτον ἀκούσαντα ἐκπλαγήσεσθαι, that he that first hears them will be amazed, or, as they themselves speak (θαμβωθήσεσθαι) strucken into astonishment, the things which are practised among them being so full (θάμβους, ὡς ἀληθῶς, καὶ φρενῶν ἐκστάσεως καὶ μανίας) of true horror, and ecstasie, and madnesse, ὡς μὴ μόνον μὴ δυνατὰ εἶναι παραδοθῆναι γραφῆ, ἀλλ' οὐδὲ χείλεσιν αὐτὰ μόνον δι' ὑπερβολὴν αἰσχρουργίας καὶ ἀῤῥητοποιΐας ἀνδράσι σώφροσι λαληθῆναι, that not only they cannot be delivered in writing, but even that they cannot be spoken by any sober men for the excesse of filthynesse, and actions not to be uttered (see Eph. 5. 12.) for, as he concludes, ὅτι ποτὲ ἂν ὀνηνοῖεν παῖδες αἰσχῦ μιαρώτερον, τῦτο πᾶν ὑπερκόντισεν ἡ τῶνδε μυσαρωτάτη αἵρεσις, ἡ ἀθλίους καὶ παντοίων ὡς ἀληθῶς κακῶν σεσωρευμένους γυναιξὶ καταπαίζοῦσα, Whatsoever can be thought on as more abominable then all uncleannesse, that is much exceeded and overcome by this detestable heresie of men which deceive and defile miserable women, laden with all kinds of sins. Which is the very phrase by which they are express'd 2 Tim. 3. 6. Of these again we have the same Author speaking in Adrian's time, l. 4. c. ε'. ζ'. that the Devil in stead of persecutions used other engines against Christianity or the Church, πονηροῖς καὶ γόησιν ἀνδράσιν, wicked men and sorcerers, ὀλεθρίοις ὀργάνοις ψυχῶν, διακόνοις τε ἀπωλείας, the instruments of destroying souls, and ministers of corruption or perdition, who, being γόητες and ἀπατηλοὶ, sorcerers and deceivers, ὑποδυόμενοι τὸν αὐτὸν ἡμῖν τῦ δόγματος περιτομέα, and being called Christians, and so conceived to have entertained and to teach those doctrines, ἧ πεσῶν τὸν πρὸς ἀυτῶν ἁλισκομένους εἰς βυθὸν ἀπωλείας ἄγεσι, lead those Christians that are insnared by them into the abysse, or depth, of perdition, and withal deterre all that have not received the faith from embracing it, by seeing what such men, that are called Christians, practise. A next successor of this Simon, or that took up his heresie and improved it, was Menander, of whom Eusebius relates the story, l. 3. c. κε'. as we have elsewhere set it down; and his conclusion is, that 'twas the Devils designe διὰ τινῶνδε γόητων καὶ χειτιανῶν περιτρεπόντων, τὸ μέγα θεοσεβείας μυτήριον ὅλη μαγίᾳ σπεδάζειν διαβαλεῖν, διασύρειν τε καὶ ὠθῶν τὸν ἐπὶ ψυχῆς ἀθανασίας καὶ νεκρῶν ἀναστάσεως ἐκκλησιαστικὰ δόγματα, by these sorcerers, pretending to be Christians, to defame the mystery of godlinesse, and so root out the Christian doctrines of the Church, of the immortality of the soul, and resurrection of the dead. After these came into the Church also Cerinthus (see Euseb. l. 3. c. κη'.) as great a pretender to authority, revelations by Angels, working of miracles, and withall as great an instrument to Satan, in advancing of lusts and Idol-worships, as any. Adde unto these the Nicolaitans, formerly described at large Note c. (see Eusebius l. 3. c. κθ'.) and then Saturninus and Basilides, which divided Menander's heresie, or improved his beginnings, between them, and set up, one in Syria, and the other in Ægypt, θεομισῶν αἱρέσεων διδασκαλεῖα schools of impious heresies (see Eusebius l. 4. c. ε'.) and contemporary to them Carpocrates (see Euseb. l. 4. c. ζ'.) the father of another sort of the Gnosticks who surpassed all the former, bringing into publick Simon's sorceries, and professing, by way of acknowledg'd doctrine, the practice of all uncleannesses, as necessary to all that would arrive to the perfection of their μυσταγωγία, or religion, and that there was no other way to escape the κοσμικοὶ ἄρχοντες, earthly rulers, as they called them, but by paying them their dues by this ἀῤῥητοποιΐα, doing such things as are not to be spoken. And these, saith he, the Devil used for ministers, when persecution was at an end, to deceive and seduce some, καὶ οἰκείως ὅπως εἰς ἀπώλειαν ἀνδραποδίζειν, and miserably to captivate, or emancipate, them to perdition, and to give the Gentiles that believed not πολλὸν καὶ θείᾳ λόγῳ λυσφημίας αἰτίαν, much matter of reproach against the word of God, the fame of these being spread every where to the reproach of Christians. These particulars set down by Eusebius thus by way of story, but very much more by Irenæus, Epiphanius and Tertullian, that have written against these Hereticks ex proposito, may suffice to give light to the interpretation of this part of the Vision. As for the destruction of these, though in one place Eusebius say that some of the spawn and followers of them remained until his time (and though it be clear by Tertullian's books against the Gnosticks, that some of these Hereticks continued some space in the Church) yet in another place he ſaith that they were ſuddenly and remarkably extinguiſhed and brought to nothing, that is, very much brought down by the hand of God upon them. Now this hereſie of the Gnoſticks, having not any one acknowledged author whoſe name it owns, but being a colluvies of all the Hereſies then abroad, made up of Simon Magus, Menander, Baſilides, Carpocrates, Cerinthus, and the reſt, is deſcribed in this Book by ſeveral names of the moſt odious perſons in the Old Teſtament, which arrogated much to themſelves. Thus before 'tis called the doctrine of Balaam, as alſo by S. Peter and S. Jude; and now here deſcribed by Jezabel, that is, a proud, imperious, painted woman, perſecuter of the Prophet Eliah, very zealous for Idolatry, guilty of the blood of Naboth, and ſo full of all abominable wickedneſſe, (which is a fit character of their doctrine and practices) and this perſon moreover ſuppoſed to arrogate to her ſelf (that which Jezabel did not) the honour and title of a Propheteſſe, that is, pretending to divinity and revelation from God, a deep myſterious underſtanding of Scripture, and the βάθη θεοῦ depths of God, 1 Cor. 2. 10. beyond all others, and from thence grounding the particular matters of this hereſie (though they were indeed but the βάθη Σατανᾶ depths of Satan, v. 24.) and calling it γνῶσις knowledge, as pretending all the followers of this hereſie to be prime ſpecial Chriſtians of great perfection, for to ſuch onely is that title applied by Clemens Alexand. 'Tis true indeed that Epiphanius (and out of him others) referres this title of Jezabel to thoſe women-hereticks which followed Montanus, and took upon them to be Propheteſſes, about Commodus's reign, Priſcilla, Maximilla and Quintilla, under the pretence of Revelations ſpreading many monſtrous hereſies (of Montanius's being the Paraclete) which, ſaith he, were in this Church of Thyatira not long after S. John's time. But becauſe the Text referres to the known doctrine, and particularly the uncleanneſſe of the Gnoſticks, and becauſe the hereſie of the Montaniſts was not a licentious hereſie, but rather of too much ſtrictneſſe, and thereby ſeduced Tertullian to it, and laſtly, becauſe Helena that went along with Simon Magus was a woman more capable of this title, therefore I cannot adhere to that interpretation. But without defining (that which is ſomewhat obſcure) what City this of Thyatira was (one of that name being placed by Strabo in Myſia, another by Stephanus in Lydia, another by Pliny in Ionia, who alſo mentions a whole Iſland of that name) I ſhall rather interpret the hereſie (which is here ſaid to be permitted in that Church) of that known, unclean ſink of men, the Gnoſticks (deſcribed v. 14. in the ſame manner as here) that ſo over-run Aſia, then leave it to any more uncertain ſubject to be applied to.

V. 26. Unto the end] What is here meant by τὸ τέλος, the end, may appear not onely by what hath been oft ſaid of it, that it notes the end of the Jewes Commonwealth, (ſee Mat. 24. Note c. d.) but by the parallel phraſe that here goes before, ἄχρις οὗ ἂν ἥξω until the time wherein I ſhall come. For that the coming of Chriſt notes that notable deſtruction of his enemies, the Jewiſh crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecuters of Chriſtians, hath been often ſhew'd, (ſee Mat. 24. b.) By comparing of theſe two phraſes together, the ſenſe of this whole paſſage will be diſcoverable. To thoſe in this Church of Thyatira, and the other cities under this Metropolis, which had not fallen off to the Gnoſtick-hereſie, he gives no other counſel for the preſent, till this time come of deſtroying the Jewiſh perſecuters and Judaizing Gnoſticks, but that they continue as they are, do as they do, hold faſt what they have already, ver. 25. And he that ſhall do ſo, that is, continue thus conſtant againſt all temptations of either ſort, the offer of immunity from perſecutions on one ſide, and the carnalities on the other, and ſo overcome, and keep Chriſt's works, keep faſt to the Faith, till that long expected period, here is an honourable promiſe made to him, as the reward of this his conſtancy and perſeverance; When that end comes, and Gnoſticks and Jews be deſtroyed, and ſo peace and purity reſtored to the Church, then theſe conſtant Chriſtians ſhall be employed by Chriſt to propagate the Goſpel to thoſe who have not yet received it: and this is expreſs'd by Chriſt's giving him power over the Nations, even as he received of, or from, his Father. For firſt, it muſt be obſerved, that thoſe words in the former part of ver. 27. taken out of the ſecond Pſalm, muſt be read in a parentheſis, and ſo the end of v. 26. and the latter part of v. 27. will connect together, thus, To him will I give power over the Nations, even as I received, that is, as I received from my Father. What this ſignifies, is apparent from John 20. 21. As my Father ſent me, ſo ſend I you. The ſame commiſſion that Chriſt had from his Father he gives to his twelve Apoſtles, that is, authority to govern the Church after him. This authority is here the ἐξουσία power. And as the Apoſtles had this power for their time, and ſome others derivatively from them, and thoſe that ſo derived it may yet be ſaid truly, though not immediately, to have received it from Chriſt; ſo here they that are made Biſhops in the Church after the Apoſtles, receive this power from Chriſt, and he is truly and properly ſaid to give it them. And as the Apoſtles power and commiſſion was firſt to plant, then to govern Churches; ſo here the power that is promiſed theſe perſevering Chriſtians of this Church, is to preach the Goſpel, and propagate it farther then it was yet received, and having converted, then to govern Churches; and theſe being now made up, not (as before) of Jewes diſperſed and their Proſelytes, but of Gentile-Idolaters that ſhould now flock in to the Faith of Chriſt, the converting them, and (having planted Churches) ruling, as Biſhops, among them, is that which is here ſtyled ἐξουσία ἐπὶ τῶν ἐθνῶν, power over the Gentiles. And then to theſe are accommodated thoſe words out of the ſecond Pſalm, And he ſhall feed them (ſo the Septuagint reads, ποιμανεῖ feed, from the Hebrew תִּרְעֵם, from רָעָה pavit, as a paſtor feeds his flock, though now the Hebrew copies have תְּרֹעֵם ſhall break, from רוּץ fregit) with a rod of iron, as the Potters veſſels are broken, that is, ſhall begin with the exerciſe of Regal (inſtead of Paſtoral) power, bring ſome to repentance, and then deſtroy the reſt, and by conjoyning of theſe two means, (both the inſtruments of his power, the one of his ſpiritual power, in ſubduing ſouls to the faith, the other of his ſecular power, in acting vengeance on the rebellious and obdurate) expulſe heatheniſme, and plant Chriſtianity in the place. For it muſt be remembred, firſt, what is the ground of this figurative expreſſion, feed with a rod of iron, viz. an elegant variation from the cuſtome of Paſtors; they feed their ſheep, and need no more then a rod or ſtaffe to manage their whole flock, but the paſtor that comes to feed any heathen nation with the ſpiritual food of the pure word of God, muſt come with aids of power, ſtrike their hearts, and powerfully convince them of ſin, bring them to contrition, and really deſtroy thoſe that will not by the preaching of the Goſpel be thus convinced: This is to feed them with a Scepter, an iron rod, an exerciſe of Regal rather then paſtoral power, a powerful work, firſt of grace, and then of vengeance, both neceſſary to reduce an heathen nation to Chriſtianity. And ſecondly, that thoſe words were firſt to be verified of Chriſt himſelf, in ſubduing the Gentiles to the Faith; and then as his power given him by his Father, is by him communicated to others, ſo this prophecie is appliable to others alſo. Thus is the phraſe used c. 12. 5. of the Church established at Rome, of which it is there foretold that it shall be very powerful and efficacious in converting many to the Faith, μέλλει ποιμαίνειν πάντα ἔθνη, it shall feed all the Nations, (in a larger manner then here is said of Thyatira, where the πάντα all is omitted) that is, propagate the Faith very far. And because this conversion of them to the faith consists in their repentance, and forsaking of their Gentile-sins, and rendring future obedience to the faith of Christ, and because repentance is in Scripture expres'd figuratively by breaking and shivering of the heart, Psal. 51. 17. which we ordinarily style contrition, and because that contrition, if it be sincere, excludes all turning again to the forsaken sins, and that cannot better be expres'd then by the breaking of a pot or earthen vessel, which when 'tis broken can by no art be made whole again, as pots of silver or other metal may by being melted again; therefore this coming in of Converts to the Faith is rhetorically described, both in the Psalm and here, by breaking men as a Potters vessels are broken. Thus saith Chrysostome T. 6. p. 855. l. 5. Κατηχ. πρὸς τὸν μελλ. φωτιζ. the words of the Psalme must be understood, περὶ τῶν πιστῶν ὁ λόγος, he speaks of the faithfull, &c. All which being thus far cleared to be the meaning of these two verses, 26, and 27. that they that were then (at the writing of this Epistle) but members of the Church of Thyatira, should after prove eminent propagators of the Gospel, and Bishops of their Gentile-converts, there will be little doubt but the 28. verse, And I will give to him the morning star, (that is, to him that hath the power given him, v. 27.) is thus to be interpreted also. The morning star ἀστὴρ πρωϊνὸς is the Greek for the Hebrew כוכב הבוקר the star of the morning, and it is sometimes called φωσφόρος the star that brings light, ushers in the Sun, 2 Pet. 1. 19. sometimes ὁ ἀστὴρ ὁ λαμπρὸς καὶ ὀρθρινὸς, Rev. 22. 16. the bright and morning star, and sometimes ἀνατολὴ the East, or day-spring, Luk. 1. 78. And though every of these in all those places signifie Christ, in respect of his light and lustre; yet it is certain that in other respects other things may be represented by it: so in Isaiah the King of Babylon is called Lucifer, Son of the morning, in respect of his power or spendor above other Kings: and so 'tis possible it may here note some eminent Prince or Nation, that the Church of Thyatira, that is, the constant Orthodox pure Christians in that Church, should propagate the faith to, when the heretical Gnostick professors there were finally destroyed. That that is the meaning of Christs δώσω αὐτῷ, I will give unto him, may appear by what hath been said of the phrase of Gods giving unto Christ, Joh. 6. Note d. giving unto him for an inheritance or possession, from Psal. 2. 8. which being applied and communicated here by Christ to men, as it is there by God to Christ, will denote the conversion of them to the Faith by the preaching of those men, commission'd by Christ. Thus the phrase I will give is used c. 3. 9. I will give them of the Synagogue, that is, as followeth, I will make them that they shall come and worship before thy feet, that is, they shall be subdued unto thee. And seeing this phrase is here also taken out of that second Psalm, as the former of ruling them with the rod of iron, &c. it is not improbable that from thence it may be explained. There it is said to Christ, I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth for thy possession; the former part whereof is here, v. 26. giving him power over the Nations, and then why may not this be parallel to the latter part? The utmost parts of earth, are the extreme points, East and West, and the morning star may properly signifie one of these, the East, in respect of the point wherein it is wont to arise and usher in the Sun, and so is styled ἀνατολὴ Luk. 1. the East, or day-spring. And then their converting the Gentiles of the Eastern Nations to Christianity, propagating the Faith over the East, much farther, after those times of persecution were over, may very probably be the meaning of this verse.

CHAP. III.

Paraphrase.

1. And unto the Angel of the Church in a Sardis write, [These things saith he that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars; I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead.]

1. Thus saith Christ, who hath at his command those seven Angels of God mentioned c. 1. 4. and hath authority over all the Bishops or Governours of the Churches, and the congregations under them, to punish or reward them; I know your actions, and judge by them, and not by your pretensions, and therefore do passe this sentence upon you, that although you professe to be Christians, yet you renounce the faith when any persecution approacheth.

2. Be watchful, and * strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die; for I have not found thy works † perfect before God.]

† fulfilled πεπληρωμένα

2. And some that have not as yet faln, are yet ready to do so, if they be not speedily fortified, wherefore a great care must be taken of those, that they be upheld: For though there be faith in this Church, yet there wants that love which must consummate this faith, and this that perfect love that casts out fear, that will make men confesse Christ in time of greatest hazard, this, I say, is wanting among you.

3. Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast and repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.]

3. Remember therefore the pure Christian doctrine, which requires confession with the mouth, as well as faith, and be strong and constant, and make amends for your former failings. And if by continued negligence you thus fall again, expect that my judgments on you shall be sudden and unpreventable.

4. Thou hast a few names even in Sardis, which have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me in white: for they are worthy.]

4. Some few names, that is, persons (Act. 1. 15.) there are in this Church, which have not failed in this kind, have held out constant against all terrors, and confessed, and suffered for my name; and these shall not fail of the reward of Martyrs, they shall be clothed in shining garments, that is, gloriously or royally, and this as a reward of their Christian constancy, for they have behaved themselves as they ought.

5. He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment, and I will not blot out his name out of the b book of life, but I will confesse his name before my Father, and before his Angels.]

5. He that holds out against all temptations, and confesses Christ before men, shall be rewarded with the richest Martyrs reward, and though he be slain here, he shall be sure to gain life by losing it: I will make good my promise to this Confessor of mine, in confessing and owning him before my Father and his Angels at the day of Judgement.

6. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the Churches.

7. Chriſt, that is pure and faithful to us, and that loveth, and owneth, and rewardeth thoſe that continue pure and faithful, undefiled, and conſtant to the profeſſing of him, that hath as a King (ſee note on Mat. 16. h.) ſupreme, independent, abſolute power and authority put into his hand over the Church of God, and ſo whatſoever he doth, ſhall ſtand againſt all controll.

7. And to the Angel of the Church in Philadelphia write, Theſe things * ſaith [he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man ſhutteth, and ſhutteth, and no man openeth ;]

* ſaith the holy, the true, λέγει ὁ ἅγιος, ὁ ἀληθινός

8. You have behaved your ſelves couragiouſly, and ſo as I approve of, and this behaviour ſhall be a means of enlarging the bounds of Chriſtian doctrine, of bringing in Proſelytes to Chriſt, in deſpight of all the cunning or force of the adverſary; and this, becauſe that little Church, or hoſt, or congregation among you, hath been kept entire, and neither defiled with the impure mixture of the Gnoſticks, nor with their doctrine of renouncing Chriſt in time of perſecution, but hath held out againſt all.

8. I know thy works: behold, I have † ſet before thee an open door, and no man can ſhut it: for thou haſt a little * ſtrength, and haſt kept my word, and haſt not denyed my name.]

* hoſt δύναμιν

9. And for the Gnoſticks, that have joined with the Jews to perſecute you, that have not onely been thus careful to preſerve themſelves by ſubtle compliances, to appear to be Jewes, to eſcape perſecutions from them, (ſee note on c. 2. e.) being indeed the moſt polluted villains in the world, but farther have joyned with them to annoy the Chriſtians, let them know that their cunnings and ſubtilties ſhall ſtand them in little ſtead, the time ſhall come, that they ſhall ſee that thoſe which have ſerved Chriſt moſt faithfully and couragiouſly ſhall fare beſt, even in this world, and that Gods love is more uſeful and worth having, then any other acquiſition which is gotten with the loſſe of that, and in ſtead of being able to prevail againſt you, they ſhall be themſelves ſubdued and deſtroyed: ſee note on c. 2. l.

9. Behold, I will make them of the Synagogue of Satan (which ſay they are Jews, and are not, but do ly) behold, I will make them to come and worſhip before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee.]

10. And becauſe you have obſerved my command of conſtancy, perſevered in the confeſſion of Chriſt, even in time of perſecution, and have been content to ſuffer for me, I will preſerve and deliver you from thoſe perſecutions which are about to fall upon the Chriſtians every where, as a ſharp trial to them.

10. Becauſe thou haſt kept the word of my patience, I will alſo keep thee from the hour of temptation, which ſhall come upon all the world, to † try them that dwell upon the earth.]

† tempt πειράσαι

11. This patience and purity of yours I ſhall ſpeedily reward: Be ye therefore ſure to perſevere now this little while, that all that hitherto you have ſuffered be not loſt and unrewarded, as it would if now at laſt you ſhould fail.

11. Behold, I come quickly: hold that faſt which thou haſt, that no man take thy crown.]

12. He that thus holds out, ſhall be a pillar of the Church, and live quietly to perform the office of an Apoſtle in it, he ſhall no more be diſturbed, or caſt out (Mat. 8. 12.) And I will acknowledge him as a perſon truly godly, a true member of the pure Catholick Chriſtian Church, known by the name of the new Jeruſalem deſcending from heaven (ſee note on c. 21. b.) one that is approved by me as a faithful true Chriſtian (ſee note on c. 2. l.)

12. Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the Temple of my God' and he ſhall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the City of my God, which is new Jeruſalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name.]

13. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit ſaith unto the Churches.

14. This is the meſſage of Chriſt, the Amen, in whom all the promiſes of God are fulfilled, the faithful witneſſe, that hath confirmed the doctrine brought from his Father by laying down his life for it (and ſo is a witneſſe that deſerves to be believed) and requires all his diſciples to do the like, when there is occaſion for it, he that is the father of the Chriſtian Church;

c. 14. And unto the Angel of the Church of the Laodiceans write, [Theſe things ſaith the Amen, the faithful and c true witneſſe, the beginning of the creation of God;]

d. 15. I have examined and conſidered your temper, and find it ſuch as I can no ways like: you profeſſe the Chriſtian faith, know and receive the Goſpel, and ſo are not quite cold, and yet have no Chriſtian zeal or love to endure any thing for Chriſt.

15. I know thy works, that thou art d neither cold nor * hot: I would thou wert either cold or hot.]

* fervent ζεστὸς

16. And ſo you are of a very indifferent temper, though there be none of thoſe which directly renounce the faith among you, yet on the other ſide, there be none that confeſſe it with any warmth or zeal: and certainly the faith of Chriſt is ſuch, that if it be at all received, may deſerve our utmoſt fervency, the laying down our life for it, and if it be not thought worth that, 'twere better never to have received or profeſs'd it at all. This indifferency of yours, like luke-warm water, nauſeous to the ſtomach, and cauſe of vomiting, is matter of loathing to God, and will bring utter rejection upon you.

16. So then becauſe thou art luke-warm, and neither cold nor hot, I will ſpue thee out of my mouth:]

17. A great opinion you have of your ſelves, that ye are in an excellent ſtate, have need of nothing, are beyond all others, when indeed you have nothing of a Chriſtian in you, no zeal or fervency of love towards Chriſt, ye never think of ſuffering for him, or getting any part of the Chriſtians crown.

17. † Becauſe thou ſayeſt, I am rich, and increaſed with goods, and have need of nothing, and knoweſt not that thou art wretched, and * miſerable, and poor, and blind, and naked.]

* piteous ἐλεεινὸς

18. My advice therefore is, that you be content to endure ſome ſmart for Chriſt, if you mean to receive any crown from him, that you be courageous in the confeſſing of Chriſt, and contend for that ſhining royal robe that belongs to Martyrs, without which (in intention at leaſt of mind) you are ſtill imperfect, and under the reproach of cowardiſe, and want of love: and to this purpoſe that ye look deeper into the nature of Chriſtian Religion, the precepts, doctrines, and examples thereof, and there ye ſhall find what yet ye ſee not, that caſe and proſperity here are no ſigne of God's favour, but on the other ſide

18. I counſel thee to buy of me gold *tried in the fire, that thou mayeſt be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayeſt be clothed, and that the ſhame of thy nakedneſſe do not appear; and † anoint thine eyes with eye-ſalve, that thou mayeſt ſee.]

* refined πεπυρωμένον ἐκ

† ſalve to anoint, for the King's MS. reads κολλύριον ἐγχρίσαι

19. The expreſſion of his fatherly love to his children, is the beſtowing ſome chaſtiſements upon them, thereby to fit them for his love.

19. As many as I love I rebuke and chaſten.] Be zealous therefore and repent.

20. Behold,

*I have ſtood ſtyrgs

20. Behold, * I ſtand at the door and knock: If any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will ſup with him, and he with me.]

20. Lo, I have waited long, and called for, and expected this loving reception from you, and the doors being barred within by a cuſtome of ſinning and negligence, I have not yet (though I have the key in mine hand v. 7.) found any admiſſion: And now I am admoniſhing of you, calling you to repentance; and whoſoever ſhall thus open, and receive me into a pure Chriſtian heart, I will enter into a moſt free commerce of love with him, and this converſion of his ſhall be matter of mutual rejoicing and feſtivity to both of us.

21. To him that overcometh will I grant to ſit with me on my throne, even as I alſo overcame, and am ſet down with my Father in his throne.]

21. And upon his ſuffering and enduring for me, and conſtant perſeverance in that love even to death, in deſpight of all temptations to the contrary, he ſhall be partaker with me of that honour that my Father hath exalted me to as the reward of my ſufferings, (ſee note on c. 2. 6.)

22. He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the Spirit ſaith unto the Churches.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Σάρδεις

V. 1. Sardis] That Sardis is the firſt reformed Church, in the Antitype, that of Germany, begun at Wittemberg by Luther, An. Dom. 1517. is the affirmation of M. Brightman: but without any other proof, but either that Sardis is more ſoutherly then Thyatira, and ſo, according to his phanſie, muſt have more of the life of truth in it; or becauſe there is no mention here of Balaam and Jezebel (which he had reſolved muſt ſignifie the doctrines of Chriſtian Rome) the abſence of which muſt ſignifie to him a breaking off from the Roman communion; or that ſhe had a name to be living, but was dead, which, ſaith he, muſt referre to the doctrine of Conſubſtantiation among the Lutherans, an argument that they were hugely amiſſe, and ſpiritually dead after that reformation. But, alas, how farre are theſe from being marks in the forehead, or the writing an Epiſtle to Germany by name, which in his Epiſtle he promiſed to ſhew us? This were a ſtrange rate of interpreting of dreams, which no Oneirocritick would allow of, but a much ſtranger of explaining of Prophecies. The ſame courſe hath he taken in the other two remaining Churches: Philadelphia muſt needs be the Helvetian, Swediſh, Genevan, French, Dutch, Scotch reformed Churches; but no reaſon for it again, but that the city of Philadelphia was yet farther ſouth then Sardis, and ſo muſt needs ſignifie ſome encreaſe of reformation; and ſecondly, that the name of Jezebel was not in it; and thirdly, that the word Philadelphia, ſignifying brotherly love, cannot be applied to any but this pattern of all piety (to which the Author had ſo much kindneſſe) the Church of Helvetia and Geneva, &c. And the reformed Church of England muſt be the Church of Laodicea, not from any denotation in the name, or characters in the forehead (which he promiſed to all in his Epiſtle, and attempted to ſhew in the former of them) but onely becauſe Epiſcopacy was here retained, and ſo was a mixture of cold with that of heat in the purity of the doctrine, and conſequently is the lukewarm Church which is here found fault with. How eaſily any favourer of Epiſcopal Government might apply this reaſon to any reformed Church that hath caſt out Biſhops, and ſay that they were warm in reſpect of Primitive purity of doctrine, but cold in reſpect of a government which is contrary to the Primitive, and conſequently that Geneva it ſelf were Laodicea, is obvious to every man. And yet after this manner doe his groundleſſe looſe interpretations proceed, which in each of theſe ſeven Churches I have pointed at, to give the Reader a γεῦσις, or taſt, of the interpretations of this man, whoſe licentious phanſie and love of change hath aſſiſted him to make them, and whoſe authority among many, & the opinion of the Apoſtolicalneſs of his writings hath holpen him to ſeduce & blind ſo many. Having given the Reader this view of ſo many ſeverals, I ſhall not hereafter give my ſelf that ſcope, but in the enſuing prophecies leave him to be judged of by any who ſhall be at leiſure to conſult him.

b. Βιβλος ζωης

V. 5. Booke of life] This book wherein names are ſaid to be written, and from thence blotted out ſometimes, is here uſed by analogie with Regiſters in cities containing the names of all citizens, and from which rebels and deſertors were blotted out. Cenſores populi cavitates, ſoboles, familias cenſento, Let the Cenſors ſet down, or regiſter, all mens ages, children, families, ſaith Tully de Leg. 3. Theſe were at Athens called ληξιαρχικὰ γεγραμματεῖα. See ch. 13. 8. and c. 20. 12. where this book of life is diſtinguiſh'd from the books which were the records of what was done, (ſuch as are mention'd Eſth. 6. 1, 2.) out of which it ſeems the records are brought, by which the wicked are judged κατὰ τὰ ἔργα according to their wicked works, which are there recorded, from which certainly it is that any man's name is blotted out of this book of life, or is not found written in it. And ſo S. Chryſoſtome and the ancients underſtand this book of life to be that in which, according to their qualifications and demeanours in their lives, and eſpecially at their hour of death, men are ſaid to be written or blotted out. See Luk. 10. 20. and Note on Phil. 4. 3.

c. Μάρτυς

V. 14. True witneſſe] The word μάρτυς a witneſs is in this book, and ſince in the ordinary uſe of the Church, ſet to ſignifie one that for the teſtifying the truth of God laies down his life. And he that doth thus, as he is πιστὸς faithful to God, who hath employed him, ſo is he ἀληθὴς true (in the ſenſe that on the Goſpels we have oft given of that word,) one that deſerves to be believed: and both theſe words, πιστὸς and ἀληθὴς, faithful and true, are the juſt rendring of the Hebrew אמן, which is here expreſs'd by Amen, a word which comes from the root אמן, which in Hiphil ſignifies credidit, believing, but in the Noun, fidus, fidelis, verus, and fide dignus, faithful, or worthy of belief. This title then of Amen, or μάρτυς ὁ πιστὸς καὶ ἀληθὴς, faithful and true witneſs, is here beſtowed on Chriſt, who to teſtifie the meſſage or doctrine (which he brought) to come from heaven, laid down his life. And therefore the Church-writers, which have ſorted the Martyrs of the Church into ſeveral ranks or forms, and given them diſtinct titles accordingly, to Stephen that of πρωτομάρτυς, the firſt martyr of the Church, to the reſt of the Apoſtles, Biſhops and Eccleſiaſtical perſons, that of ἱερομάρτυρες ſacred martyrs, to the great or noble men that of μεγαλομάρτυρες noble martyrs, to the virgins and women that of καλλιμάρτυρες fair martyrs, to the common people of ἁγιομάρτυρες holy martyrs, have reſerved unto Chriſt the title of ὁ μέγας μάρτυς, the great witneſſe, or Martyr.

d. Λαοδικεία

V. 15. Neither cold nor hot] All that is here ſaid of this Church of Laodicea ſeemeth very intelligible by applying to them that one part of the doctrine of the Gnoſtickes, that ſeems to have gotten in among them (though not thoſe other carnal villanies) viz. that it was ἀδιάφορον an indifferent thing, perfectly lawfull, to renounce Chriſt in time of perſecution. This is clearly the luke warmneſſe here, which is a middle indifferent temper between being Chriſtians and no Chriſtians, and in ſtead of that God commends to them πυρωμένον χρυσὸν refined gold fetch'd out of the fire, that is directly the crown of Martyrdome (contrary to that mixture and allay of droſſe that is now in them) and the white or ſhining garments, the enſigne and character of the Martyrs every where in this book. And for their ſaying that they are rich, &c. and not knowing that they are wretched, &c. this is again the mark of thoſe Gnoſticks, which had ſuch great ungrounded opinions of their own perfections. A phyſical diſcourſe on this place may be ſeen in Valeſius Sac. phil. c. 90.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. IV.

1. In this chapter, being the beginning of another viſion, is firſt repreſented the calling and admiſſion of John into heaven by way of viſion, (as we read of S. Paul, that he was ſnatched into the third heaven, 2 Cor. 12. 2.) to receive revelations of ſome things which ſhould ſhortly come to paſſe; and the manner of calling him was by a ſhril voice, imitating the ſound of a trumpet, (by which aſſemblies are wont to be called) but that it was articulate.

1. After this [a] I looked, and behold a dore was opened in heaven: and the firſt voice which I heard was as it were a trumpet talking with me, which ſaid, Come up hither, and I will ſhew thee things which muſt be hereafter.]

2. And accordingly, ſaith he, I was (in an extaſie or viſion) preſently tranſported thither, and there was repreſented to me a throne erected for judicature, and God the Father ſitting on it (ſee Ezech. 1. 26.) like the Biſhop of Jeruſalem in council.

2. And immediately I was in the ſpirit; and behold a throne was ſet in heaven, and [b] one ſat on the throne.]

3. And he ſate as in majeſty, and the appearance of him, or the colours wherein he was repreſented to me, were like the colour of a Jaſper and Sardine ſtone, the former having its name in the Hebrew (Exod. 28. 19.) from the firmneſſe and hardneſſe of it, as being unmalleable, thereby to ſignifie God's omnipotence; the ſecond, (Exod. 28. 17.) from the redneſſe or fierineſſe of it, to ſignifie him terrible in his judgments as a flaming fire, Heb. 12. 29. But withall there was a rainbow round about the throne, which was Gen. 8. 13. a token of God's covenant with man, and is uſed Ezech. 1. to deſcribe a glorious appearance of God, (the appearance of the likeneſſe of the glory of the Lord, v. 28.) and ſo again here ch. 10. 1. and the colour of it was like an Emerald, that is, of a moſt pleaſant greenneſſe, fitly ſignifying the Evangelical covenant of mercy, mixing, in all God's judgments, moſt mercifull preſervations to the faithfull in the midſt of his puniſhing the obdurate, ch. 7. 2, &c.

Annotati-

a. Εἶδον

V. 1. I looked] The word εἶδον here is not to be taken in the ordinary notion of seeing, looking or beholding, but in that (so solemn among the Prophets) of the Hebrew חזה, from whence their prophecies are called חזון vision, and each prophet חזה a Seer; and so 'tis generally taken in this book, and is best explained by ἐγενόμην ἐν πνεύματι, I was in the Spirit, ch. 1. 10. This joined here with μετὰ ταῦτα denotes either a distant matter or a distant Vision from the former, and having no Accusative case after to restrain it, it is a general title belonging to the whole passage after it, as farre as that Vision goes: For it hath formerly been said, that these Visions were delivered at several times (see the Præmonition.) At what distance or space one from another, or in what order distinctly they were received, it is uncertain, save only that they were not before Claudius, nor after Domitian. But for the completion, there is no necessity that that should begin at the end of the completion of the former, that is, that the destruction of the Jews here represented in this Vision should not commence till after the judgement threatned ch. 2. 3. to the Churches; (as it might be conceived to doe if the whole book were but one continued Vision) it being very possible that that which should first come to passe, might by God be chosen to be matter of a second Vision, nay that the same thing might be severally represented by God, and so made the matter of several Visions.

b. ὁ καθήμενος ἐπὶ τῷ θρόνῳ

V. 2. One sat on the throne] Who this person is which is here, in Vision, brought in sitting upon the throne, will be best understood by those that sit upon the four and twenty thrones round about him, ver. 4. That God the Father coming to judgment, and his saints as assessors about him, are meant by the representation, there is no doubt: The whole question is, who they are which are here used to represent and signifie these. And it might be thought to be the head of the Sanhedrim at Jerusalem, or some other Consistory, which thus sat in council, the head in the midst, in a chair or throne, and the members, chief Priests, Elders, and Doctors of the Law, on each side of him, in so many chairs also: But the number of the assessors here will not then agree to it, there being then 70 persons in the Sanhedrim, and 23 in the lesser Consistories. And though perhaps the Elders in the Sanhedrim made up that number of 24, yet there were chief Priests, and Doctors of the Law, which sat in the Sanhedrim as well as they. But if we applie it to the Christian Church, which hath much of likeneſſe with (and seems to have been copied out from) that pattern of the Jewish Sanhedrim, but differs from it in some lesse weighty, inconsiderable circumstances, (such is the number of assessors) then it will accord very well. And the first constitution of this Church being at Jerusalem, and that place being nearly concerned in the judicature which is here represented, and James, the first Bishop there, being by them put to death, and that a special ingredient in their destruction (saith Josephus and Eusebius) that place will in all probability be the scene of this representation, and the Christian Bishop thereof will be he that here sitteth upon the throne or Bishop's chair; this Bishop sitting in council, (as Act. 15. we know he was) and with him the Apostles (those that were at Jerusalem) and the Bishops of all Judæa, the Bishop of Jerusalem, as of the Metropolis of all Judæa, sitting in the middle chair, or seat, or throne, that of the greatest dignity, which belonged to James, and thereupon the determination of the Council was delivered by him, Act. 15. 19.

c. Κυκλόθεν τοῦ θρόνου

V. 4. Round about the throne] The meaning of κυκλόθεν τοῦ θρόνου, round about the throne, will probably be discerned by the antient manner of sitting in Council or Consistory among the Jews first, and afterward among Christians. A representation we have of it, Dan. 7. 9. (from which place this here seems to be taken, as many other things in this, out of that prophecie) I beheld till the seats, or thrones, were pitched, (not thrown down, as we read, but pitched or set;) donec throni positi sunt, saith the Vulgar, and ἕως οἱ θρόνοι ἐτέθησαν, say the Seventy, and Theodotion; and the Chaldee word is the same that is used by the Chaldee Paraphrase, Jer. 1. 15. for the setting of thrones, where the Hebrew hath ינתנו, and the Seventy, καὶ θήσουσιν, they shall set every one his throne: and then it follows, and the antient of the daies did sit, placing him in the midst of the other thrones, as the father or head of the Consistory, and the judgment was set, v. 10. that is, the whole Sanhedrim, the rest of the Elders, &c. seated on those thrones round about, or on each side of the head, or Prince of the Consistory, and the books were opened, preparative to the judicature. So in like manner in the Christian Church, where the Bishop and his Presbyters in any lesser city, and the Metropolitane and his bishops in the Metropolis, are thus placed; the Presbyters, or the Bishops, sitting at the East end of the Church in the form of a semicircle, and the Bishop, or Metropolitane, in a chair or throne of some eminence in the midst of the Presbyters or Bishops seats, with those on each side of him and then the Deacons attending or waiting on them. So in Ignatius's Epistle to the Magnesians we find, Μᾶλλον δὲ ἀξιοπρεπέστατα ὄντα ὑμᾶς, καὶ πνευματικῷ στεφάνῳ τῷ πρεσβυτερίῳ (as the Laurentian copie now rightly reads it, not στεφάνῳ πρεσβυτέρων, as the printed Copies were wont to have it) with your most reverend Bishop, and the spiritual crown of the Presbyterie; noting the Presbyters sitting on each side of the Bishop in the fashion of a crown, not of a full circle; for a crown was not so antiently, but a large semicircle with two ends, by which 'twas put over and tyed about the head, and accordingly the Constellation in heaven so called is not a whole or complete circle. And thus in the Apostol. Constit. l. 2. we have Ἐκκλησίας στέφανος, the crown of the Church, that is, the Bishops and Presbyters in Consistory. And indeed this manner of sitting in an half-circle was but the same with their accubitus or lying at meat in an half-round, called Sigma, from the old fashion of that letter, Ϲ; where the most honourable place was that in the middle, as some learned men have collected from 1 Sam. 20. 25. The King sate upon his seat, as at other times, even upon his seat by the wall; where supposing the form of sitting to be semicircular, the seat by the wall will be necessarily the middle of the circle. And thus in the Apost. Constit. l. 2. Κάθου μέσος ὁ τῆς ἐπισκόπης θρόνος, παρ' ἑκάτερα δὲ αὐτοῦ καθιζέσθω τὸ πρεσβυτέριον, Let the Bishops seat, or throne, be placed in the midst, and on each side of him let the Presbyterie sit, καὶ οἱ διάκονοι παεισάσθωσαν, and let the Deacons stand by. And so Greg. Nazianzen a Bishop in his dream describes himself sitting in the midst and his Presbyters in chairs on each hand of him. And in Theodoret Eccl. Hist. l. 5. c. 3. ὁ μέσος θρόνος the middle seat is the Bishops chair; and the way propounded to compose the difference between Paulinus and Miletius is, to set the Gospel in that middle seat, and they καθίσαι ἑκατέρωθεν to sit on each side. And the Author of the Ecclesiastick Hierarchie c. 3. ὁ μὲν Ἱεράρχης ἐν μέσῳ τῷ θείῳ θυσιαστηρίῳ καθίζεται, The Bishop is placed in the midst, not of the Altar, but of that part of the Church which was called θυσιαστήριον: which what it is will best appear by the † Scholiast on Nazianzen's first σκηλίδι. Σηκὸς καὶ τέμενος, saith he, σημαίνει τὸ ἱερὸν ὅλον, ὁ ναὸς θυσιαστήριον, ἐν ᾧ ἡμῖν ἡ θεία ἡμῶν μυστηρίων πρόκειται τράπεζα, The word Σηκὸς and τέμενος

τέμενος signifie the whle Church, but the word ναὸς the nave signifies the θυσιαστήριον in which the divine table of the myſteries, or communion-table, is placed: by which it appears, both that the θυσιαστήριον is the whole ſpace within the Sept, and not only the Altar or Table therein, and alſo that the Biſhops being ſeated in the midſt of the θυσιαστήριον is the taking his place at the upper end of the Church, within the Sept, with the Presbyters on each ſide of him; which is alſo the way of interpreting and underſtanding all that is ſaid in the ancient Writers and Liturgies, of encompaſſing the θυσιαστήριον, that is, of the Biſhop and Preſbyters ſitting in a ſemicircle at the upper end of the Chancel. Which is alſo the reaſon, why in Ignatius (Ep. ad Epheſ.) being ἐνὸς τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ, within the θυσιαστήριον, ſignifies living obediently to the Biſhop and his Conſiſtory in all things, and aſſembling with them in the publick ſervice of God in the Church.

d. Πρεσβύτερος

V. 4. Four and twenty Elders] Having ſeen what was meant by him that ſitteth on the higheſt or middle throne, God in the thing ſignified, but the Biſhop of Jeruſalem in the repreſentation, it will preſently follow that the πρεσβύτεροι Elders on the thrones round about him are thoſe which ſate in Council with this Biſhop, in the ſame manner as, Act. 15. we find the πρεσβύτεροι Elders mentioned. That thoſe πρεσβύτεροι Elders ſignified the Biſhops of Judæa (not the Preſbyters, as we now call them, of that one city) hath been ſaid, Note on Act. 11. b. For indeed it no way appears that at that time there were any ſuch Presbyters, (as ſoon after, and now we have) any middle order between the ſingular Biſhop in each Church, and the Deacons attending on him: And beſide it is ſaid of every of theſe, that he had on his head a golden crown, parallel to that of Joſuah the High-prieſt, Zach. 6. 11. that is, a golden mitre, ſuch as the High-Prieſt had under the Law, call'd indifferently a crown, and a mitre, which cannot belong to inferior Presbyters, but doth fitly repreſent the power of rulers, that is Biſhops in the Church, without attributing any thing of regality to them. And therefore in all probability they muſt ſignifie here the Archbiſhop of Jeruſalem, the Metropolis of all Judæa, and all the Biſhops of that Province ſitting in Council with him. Otherwiſe, the manner of ſitting being the ſame of the Preſbyters of each city (where there were ſuch) about their Biſhop, and of the Biſhops of the Province about their Metropolitane (ſee Note c.) it might as properly be applied to Presbyters as to Biſhops. Now for the number of twenty four, that, I ſuppoſe, was exactly the number of the Biſhops of Judæa at that time, all beſide the Metropolitane Biſhop of Jeruſalem, (anſwerable to the number of the heads of the courſes of the Prieſts, 1 Chron. 24. who ſeem, as ſuch, to have been taken into the Sanhedrim) though the records of thoſe times being obſcure afford no demonſtration of this circumſtance.

V. 5. Seven ſpirits] The ſeven ſpirits of God here are the miniſtring ſpirits, or Angels, (ſee Note on ch. 1. b.) that attend and wait upon God as apparitors, or ſerjeants, or officers to attend the judicature, to cite and bring malefactors before it, and are repreſented here by the ſeven Deacons in the Church of Jeruſalem, attending on the Biſhop, Act. 6. but thoſe like lamps of fire burning, in reſpect of the glory and brightneſſe wherein Angels are wont to appeare.

f. ἐν Μέσῳ τοῦ θρόνου

V. 6. In the midſt of the throne] That which is here ſaid of the placing of the living creatures ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ θρόνου, and κύκλῳ τοῦ θρόνου, in the middle of the throne, and round about the throne, may, I ſuppoſe, be thus moſt commodiouſly explained, that ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ θρόνου in the midſt of the throne ſhall ſignifie at the former part, that which is moſt viſible to the company; ſo to be ſet ἐν μέσῳ in the midſt, Act. 4. 7. is in a conſpicuous place, all one with before them, Act. 22. 30. and being called forth, Act. 24. 2. and in like manner to ſtand up in the midſt, Act. 1. 15. is, ſo as he may be ſeen and heard beſt by all that are preſent: And then κύκλῳ, about, which muſt needs be oppoſite to that, will ſignifie behinde, or at the hinder part, and ſo κυκλόθεν, about, will ſtraight appear to be all one with ὄπισθεν at the back, or behinde, (ſee Note i.) Which being granted, the ἐν μέσῳ in the midſt will neceſſarily denote the two foremoſt points of the chair or throne, where two of the living creatures are placed, and κύκλῳ about the two hindmoſt, and ſo all the four living creatures will be diſpoſed of, at each corner one. Others, I ſee, have conceived the two which are here ſaid to be ἐν μέσῳ in the middle of the throne, to have been placed one before, and the other behind (and conſequently the two that are κύκλῳ about, to be one on each ſide:) but this cannot well be imagin'd without incommodating the judge, before whom he ſtands, unleſſe one be placed upon the ſteps of aſcent to the throne, and ſo below the ſpace on which the throne was ſet; which cannot probably be yielded, becauſe the throne and this place where this living creature would be placed, would not then make up one ſpace, as it ſeems to doe, ch. 5. 6. where the lamb is ſaid to be in the midſt of the throne, and of the four living creatures, ſuppoſing all theſe to make up but one ſpace. But howſoever this be, this placing of the living creatures ſo near the throne, doth by the way make it appear, that this repreſentation here referres not (as might be thought) to the encamping of Iſrael about the Ark, Num. 2. becauſe here the four living creatures are ſet cloſe to the throne, and (as appears chap. 5. 6.) nearer then the four and twenty Elders; whereas the ſtandards in Numbers are appointed to be pitched farre off, c. 2. 2. the Tribe of Levi immediately environing the Tabernacle, and the camps environing that, v. 17.

Κύκλῳ

Ib. Four beaſts] Who theſe four living creatures were in this repreſentation, may, in proportion and analogie with what hath ben ſaid, be conjectured alſo. And to that purpoſe it may be obſerved, that they are both here, v. 9, and 10. and c. 5. 6. ſet betwixt him that ſat upon the throne, and the four and twenty Elders, which may probably conclude them to be four Apoſtles, who will be acknowledged to be ſuperiour to the Biſhops of Judæa, and may alſo in ſome ſenſe be conceived inferiour, in that Council of Jeruſalem, to James, advanced to be Biſhop, that is, ſupreme ruler there, (at leaſt to be there in another capacity then he was, as tranſcendent perſons, accordingly ſtanding about the throne, and not as regular members of the aſſembly.) For thus ſaith Clemens, Hypotypoſ. l. 5. Peter, James and John choſe James the brother of the Lord Biſhop of Jeruſalem, (where Ruffinus reads, Epiſcopus Apoſtolorum, Biſhop of the Apoſtles;) and though they three were ὑπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου προτετιμημένοι by Chriſt preferred and more honoured then all the reſt of the twelve, yet did they not contend one with another for this dignity, but unanimouſly conferred it on James the Juſt, who is therefore in Scripture oft called an Apoſtle (ſee Note on Gal. 2. f.) Now that Apoſtles are meant by theſe living creatures, and alſo who thoſe four Apoſtles were, may appear by comparing this Council or judicature here repreſented with the Councill of Jeruſalem, Act. 15. There it is certain that the Biſhop James preſided, v. 13. together with the Elders or Biſhops of Judæa, v. 6. and then beſides and before theſe Elders are mentioned Ἀπόστολοι the Apoſtles, ver. 2, 4, 6. and Peter is one of them, v. 6. and (though not there named) John alſo, Gal. 2. 9. (his brother James, that was wont to be there, being before this put to death, Act. 12. 2.) And ſo there are two of them; and why may not Paul and Barnabas (ſeparated before that time to Apostolacy, c. 13. 2.) certainly present in this Council, be the other two? That any other Apostle was then there doth not appear, and 'tis evident that these four were, and from them, and the Elders jointly, are these decrees sent to the Churches of Syria and Cilicia, v. 23. The learned H. Grotius, I perceive, hath fallen very near upon this conjecture, only he hath placed James the brother of the Lord (that is, the Bishop himself, which cannot be imagined) in stead of John, and Matthew in stead of Barnabas, upon no other reason but because Matthew is found to have continued long in Judæa. But referring the matter, as the representation here doth, to a Councill at Jerusalem, it will be most fit to pitch on those four who were (in that one Scripture-Councill) there present. And if it be objected that Paul and Barnabas were sent thither from Antioch at this time, and therefore may not seem so properly to belong to that place; to that I answer, First, that those two being by the holy Ghost's appointment separated to be Apostles, they were not affix'd to any Diocese or Province (as ordinary Bishops were) but had an unlimited jurisdiction, like other Apostles, and consequently had as much to doe at Jerusalem, to which, as at Antioch, from which they were sent. Secondly, that Jerusalem being the place from whence the Gospel first went out, and began to be preached, and the faith being from thence sent out to all other Churches, it was very reasonable that all other Churches, at that time especially, whilst the Apostles resided there, should look upon that as the chief mother-city of all Christians: And in that respect, although Antioch was the Metropolis of Syria, and that which had the third place of all the world that was under the Roman power (ἡ μητρόπολις ὅτε ἦ Συρίας, τείτην ἀδηλότως ἢ ὡσὰ Ῥωμαίων οἰκουμένης ἔχουσα τόπον, saith Josephus De bell. Jud. l. γ'. c. γ'.) yet it may truly be said of Jerusalem at that time, that it was the Metropolis of that Metropolis; and accordingly 'tis the affirmation of Agrippa, in Philo, concerning Jerusalem, Μητρόπολις ἦ ὑμῶν χώρας Ἰουδαίας, ἀλλὰ καὶ πλείστων, διὰ τὰς ἀποικίας ἃς ἐπεμψεν εἰς τὰς ἐγγὺς ὁμόρους, Αἰγύπτου, Φοινίκης, Συρίας τῆς τε ἄλλης, καὶ Κοίλης προσαρρευομένης, εἰς ἦ τὰς πόρρω διωκισμένας, Παμφυλίαν, Κιλικίαν, &c. It is the Metropolis not only of one Province or Region, Judæa, but also of most others, because of the Colonies which it sent out to Ægypt, Phœnicia, Syria, and Cœlosyria, and to some farther removed, Pamphyla, Cilicia, &c. Which being supposed, & this question being sent from Antioch, the Metropolis of Syria, there is no reason but they that brought it, being themselves not Messengers, but solemnly Apostles equal to any others, (though they came later in) and being as able to speak from their own knowledge to the point in hand as any, and so speaking at large, Act. 15. 12. and indeed sent this journey by immediate commission from heaven, Gal. 2. 2. should be reckoned together with those other two Apostles that before were there, and considered in the same capacity with them. And then supposing, as I now doe, that this representation here is copied out from that Council of Jerusalem, which alone is mention'd in the story of the Scripture, there will be small doubt but these are two of the living creatures here mentioned.

g. Ζῶα τέσσαρα

h. Τίνα παραζῷα

V. 7. First beast was like——] Of these four likenesses here, 'tis first observable from the Rabbins, Aben Ezra, &c. on Num. 2. that they were those that made the four Standards of Israel, viz. the likeness of a Lion in the Camp of Judah, of a Man in the Camp of Reuben, of an Oxe in the Camp of Ephraim, of an Eagle in the Camp of Dan; and accordingly חיות, rendred by the Septuagint τὰ ζῶά σε, thy living creatures, Psal. 68. 10. are said to be those enfignes or standards in their Camps, but by us rendred, thy congregations: see A. Masius on Joshua c. 6. 9. Secondly, it is evident that these four resemblances are the same that are set down Ezech. 1. 10. All the difference is that here is μόσχος a calf, which is not there, but (as in Numbers before) an oxe in stead of it. But that will be easily salved: For in the Septuagint ταῦρος, βοῦς, μόσχος, bull, oxe, calf, signifie the same thing. See St. Augustine Quæst. l. 2. qu. 25. Vitulos appellant Ægyptii grandes boves, ut nos Pœni Pullos gallinas cujuslibet ætatis, The Ægyptians call great oxen Calves, &c. So πῶλος is used for an horse or mare, which literally notes a foale, and puella, a little wench, for a woman great with childe, Fast. 2. and Horat. Od. l. 3. od. 22. and many the like. In that place of Ezechiel 'tis certain that the Cherubims, or Angels, that attend on God, are signified; and so here, supposing him that sits on the throne to be God, these in the midst and round about the throne must needs be the Angels also. But because God is here represented in this Vision by the Bishop of Jerusalem sitting in Council, with the four and twenty Elders, or Bishops, of Judæa on so many Chaires, or seats, on each side of him, this resemblance in proportion must be held, for these four living creatures also to signifie, as was said, those four Apostles in this honourable relation, as the standard-bearers of the Christian Israel, they that thus travailed to plant, and defend, and contend for the Christian faith over all Judæa, and in other cities where the Jews were, and, as long as they would endure to hear it, not departing to the Gentiles, but being so rejected by them and persecuted, they are now fit to be next to God about this throne, for the judging of the Jewes. And that which some learned Jewes have observed to be the meaning of those hieroglyphicks (those four likenesses on the standards) all together, will here be applicable. There is little sense in that of Aben Ezra, that the Man was in Reuben's standard, because he found Mandrakes, &c. or in that of the Talmudists, that there are four proud creatures in the world, the Lion among wilde beasts, &c. All which are vaine and ridiculous. And the account which Photius gives of this matter, Epist. 157. is little better. The most sensible explication of the hieroglyphick given by them is, that by the slowness of the Oxe, the anger of the Lion, the swiftness of the Eagle, and the humanity, mercy, kindness of the Man, is meant the representation of God, as he was at first towards the Fathers in the wilderness, and to their posterity ever after, and even now when he comes to execute vengeance on them most remarkably, slow to anger and swift to mercy; the same in effect which is attributed to God by Joel, when he is considered in this very businesse of punishing this people, in the great and terrible day of the Lord, Joel 2. 13. the subject of this ensuing Vision. As for the truth of that which is thus supposed to be represented by it (viz. the great patience and μακροθυμία of God, expres'd in the inflicting of these his judgements on the obdurate Jewes, and the wonderfull mercy in delivering the penitent believers) I shall onely transcribe one passage from Eusebius, being his observation (after the setting down of the story) to this very purpose, Ταῦτα δ' ἂν εἴη δίκαιον ἐπιθεῖναι, ἃ γένοιτ' ἂν ἐξεταστικὰ φιλανθρωπίας τῆς παναγάθου προνοίας, &c. It is but justice to adde the mention of that which will set before mens eyes the great mercy of the all-gracious providence of God, which forty years after their crucifying of Christ deferred the destroying of them, in which time, saith he, many Christians, Apostles and others (James the Bishop of Jerusalem, &c.) being then alive and among them, ἔρκος ὥσπερ ὀχυρώτατον παρέμενον τῷ τόπῳ, were as a strong hedge, or wall, to the place; and the θεία ἐπισκοπὴ, saith he, God's visitation, did yet endure with much patience (μακροθυμοῦσα, the very word compounded of the two things signified by the Oxe and Lion, the slowness or μακρότης of the Oxe, and the the θυμὸς of the Lion) ἐὰν ἄρα ποτὲ μετανοήσαντες, συγγνώμης καὶ σωτηρίας τυχεῖν, if so be at length repenting of what they had done, they might so obtain pardon and deliverance: where as the pardon and deliverance are the thing figured by the mercy of the Man, so are the ἐι ἄρα ποτὲ if so be at length, answerable to the (Eagle-like) swiftness to it; whensoever they repent, he instantly pardons. As for any more particular application of these four likenesses to the persons of those four Apostles, Peter, John, Paul, and Barnabas, as that Peter should be the Lion, both in respect of his fervour and fiery zeal, generally observed in him (notwithstanding his fall) and in respect of his primacy, πρῶτος Σίμων first Simon in the Gospell, John the Eagle, in respect of his high speculations about the Divinity of Christ, in his Gospell, Paul the Oxe, in respect of his labour more abundant then they all, and Barnabas the Man, in respect of his title of humanity, by which his name is interpreted, sonne of consolation; I shall not any farther insist on them, because they are but conjecturall.

V. 8. Six wings about him——] In this verse (which hath in it some difficulty of construction) it is first evident, that the phrase full of eyes belongs to the living creatures, and not to the wings; for so the Greek γέμοντα full concludes, which agreeth with ζῶα creatures, but cannot with πτέρυγας wings, and so before it had been, v. 6. τέσσαρα ζῶα γέμοντα ὀφθαλμῶν four living creatures full of eyes: and so it appears by the use of the wings to cover the face and secret parts, and to flie; which cannot be applied to the circuit or ambience. Next, if the Greek be consulted, it will be also as clear that the κυκλόθεν καὶ ἔσωθεν round about and within are not so to be divided, as in our ordinary Translation they are, the former joyned with the six wings (six wings round about them) and the latter to the eyes (full of eyes within) but are both together to be joyned with the full of eyes, κυκλόθεν καὶ ἔσωθεν γέμοντα ὀφθαλμῶν about and within full of eyes. What is meant by κυκλόθεν καὶ ἔσωθεν round about and within may be resolved by v. 6. where the same thing is expres'd by other words; there it is full of eyes ἔμπροσθεν καὶ ὄπισθεν, before and behind, here round about and within. The way of reconciling these distant phrases is, I conceive, by considering the two parts of a superficies, the convex or ambient part, that is, the circumference, and the concave or inner part. These two we know are opposed one to the other & are fitly expres'd by either of these two pairs, the outer or ambient by κυκλόθεν round about, the inner or concave by ἔσωθεν within; and so again (being here applied to living creatures with their faces toward us) the ambient superficies by ὄπισθεν behind, or the back parts, and the inner superficies by ἔμπροσθεν before, the back parts of such creatures being most properly the convex, and the foreparts (especially when they have wings, and those wings make a kind of half circle) being the concave superficies. And so by this account, as ἔμπροσθεν before ver. 6. and ἔσωθεν within here are all one, so must κυκλόθεν about here, and ὄπισθεν behind, or on the back, there, be all one also. And accordingly it may be observed that ch. 5. 1. ἔσωθεν within is opposed to ὄπισθεν the back parts, as here to κυκλόθεν about, which makes it consequent that ὄπισθεν the back part and κυκλόθεν about should be all one, as now we set them. What is denoted by these two sorts of eyes as they are applied to the Apostles, may perhaps be thus best resolved: The eyes before are an expression of their foresight, or prophetick Spirit; the eyes behind, those that look back to the Old Testament, and by the faculty of interpreting the prophecies and types are furnished with a great means of conviction to the Jewes to whom they were to preach, in shewing them Christ in Moses and the Prophets own'd by them. The not observing the meaning of ἔσωθεν within, as it is here all one with before ver. 6. hath made others guesse, that their inward gifts may be meant by that, and the outward expressions and exercises of them by κυκλόθεν round about. But that notion cannot be applied to before and behind, ver. 6. and therefore cannot reasonably be thought to have place here. Moses had foretold, that a Prophet should be raised up, that is, the Messias, and they that heard not him, should be cut off; and this the Apostles understood to be the present case of the Jewes, saw this by their eyes behind them, and so by the many other passages in the Prophets to this same purpose: and besides they had many revelations now to this matter, and those are their eyes before, and accordingly wheresoever they come, they warn all of this approaching destruction.

CHAP. V.

a. b. 1. And as God sate on his tribunal, or throne of judgment, behold there was in his right hand a book or roll (see note on Luk. 4. a.) full of writing on the in-side, and on the back-side, a great way down, and that roll'd up, and on the out-side sealed, that no part of it could possibly be read; and this roll consisted of seven rolls, one within another, and every one of them had a seal to it, ch. 6. 1. (This book of rolls containing in it the sealed, that is, secret decrees and purposes of God upon the Jewes, which as they were foretold only by Christ, Mat. 24. Luk. 21. Mar. 13. so are they by him inflicted and executed upon them, and that an effect of his regal power, to which, after his crucifixion, he was by his resurrection installed.)

1. AND I saw a in the right hand of him that sate on the throne, a book b writen within and on the back side, sealed with seven seals.]

2. And I saw one of the Angels, of special dignity among them, making proclamation with a loud voice in these words, Who is able to unloose the seals of this book, and so to open it, to reveal to us what is contained in it?

2. And I saw a * strong Angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?] * mighty ἰσχυρὸν

4. And my desire to know caused me to be much concerned and grieved at this, and so to make my complaint thereof.

4. And I † wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon.] † lamented greatly ἔκλαιον πολλὰ

5. And one of the Elders ch. 4.4. that was in one of the thrones, one of them that sate with God in judgement, comforted me, and told me that Christ, known by those two titles, of the Lion of the tribe of Judah, Gen. 49. 9. and the root of Jesse, Isa. 11. 1. having, by his voluntary suffering of death, received this reward from his Father, to have all power given to him at his resurrection, and so from a slaughtered Lamb, being turned into a roaring devouring Lion, had had this privilege among others beſtowed on him by his Father, to reveal, yea and to execute, the decrees contained in theſe volumes.

6. And I beheld, and lo, in the midſt of the throne, and of the four * beaſts, and in the midſt of the Elders, ſtood a Lamb, as it had been ſlain, having ſeven horns and ſeven eyes, which are the ſeven ſpirits of God, † ſent forth into all the earth.]

6. This was farther exemplified to me: for I looked and ſaw what I had not ſeen before, a Lamb bloody, with wounds viſible in him, as one that had been butchered, Chriſt crucified and riſen from the dead, and ſo indued both with power to ſubdue his enemies (fitly expreſs'd by this ſtyle of horns, ſee Luk. 1. n. and ſo uſed here ch. 17. 3.) and with all knowledge and wiſdome to order it fitly, having inſtruments to execute his will, preſent, and ready preſt at his ſervice, and alſo officers (Angels ch. 4. 5. and Zach. 4. 10.) to viſit, and give him account of all that was done in Judæa and elſewhere, the perſecutions which the Jewes brought upon the Chriſtians.

7. And he came and took the book out of the right hand of him that ſate upon the throne.]

7. And this Lamb, Chriſt, came and took the book out of God's hand, that is, received power from God, as the reward of his ſufferings, to reveal and make known, and then to execute on that people thoſe heavy judgments contained in thoſe rolls.

8. And when he had taken the book, the four * beaſts and four and twenty Elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps and golden vials full of odours, which are the c prayers of ſaints.]

8. And when this power was given to him, this being the inſtating him in that royal authority next to God himſelf (that is, ſetting him on the throne of judgment, called ſitting at God's right hand, or reigning till he brought all his enemies under his feet) the four living creatures, by which the four Apoſtles were repreſented, ch. 4. 6. and the Elders that (ch. 4. 4.) ſat on the four and twenty thrones about the Judge, gave all acknowledgments of ſupreme power to Chriſt, and every one praiſed and magnified God in theſe approaching judgments of his, and preſented to him, beſide their own lauds, the thankſgivings of all the believers then living, who had been perſecuted, and denied the liberty of their Chriſtian profeſſion and aſſemblies (2 Theſſ. 2. 1.) by the malice of the Jewes, but now by their approaching deſtruction were likely to be reſcued from their preſſures to a flouriſhing condition of quiet for ſome ſpace. c.

9. And they ſung a new ſong, ſaying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the ſeals thereof: for thou waſt ſlain, and haſt redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every † kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation:

10. And haſt made us unto our God kings and prieſts: and we ſhall reign on the earth.]

9, 10. And in their names, and their own, they ſang praiſes to him, acknowledging this dignity and regal power to be moſt worthily inſtated on him, as a reward of his ſufferings, by which he overcame Satan, and redeemed all faithfull believers, not onely out of the power of ſin and hell, but alſo of their perſecutors on earth, bringing them to quiet halcyonian daies, giving them tranquillity, and liberty to aſſemble freely to his ſervice, as a choice peculiar people of his (ſee note on ch. 1. d.) and accordingly concluding that this royal benefit they ſhould now enjoy, through this act of vengeance (on Chriſt's and the Chriſtians enemies, the obdurate Jewes) which was here undertaken by him, ver. 6.

12. Saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain, to receive power, and riches, and wiſdome, and ſtrength, and honour, and glory, and bleſſing.]

12. And all ſaid with a loud voice, All power, &c. are moſt worthily attributed to Chriſt as a reward of his crucifixion. All this dignity to himſelf and advantages to believers are a juſt reward of his ſufferings, by which he hath dearly bought them.

13. And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and ſuch as are in the ſea, and all that are in them, heard I ſaying, Bleſſing, and honour, and glory, and power be unto him that ſitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.]

13. And all other creatures in the world made the ſame acknowledgment (noting theſe judgments that ſhould now fall on the Jewes (as they were moſt juſt, ſo alſo) to be moſt ſeaſonable, and infinitely advantageous to his people, who ſhould be reſcued by that means.)

† living creatures

14. And the four † beaſts ſaid, Amen. And the four and twenty Elders fell down, and worſhipped him that liveth for ever.]

14. And a general adoration was paid unto Chriſt as unto God himſelf, noting this puniſhment of the Jewes to be a juſt act of divine revenge on their crucifying of Chriſt, who being by his divine power raiſed from the dead, by the ſame deſtroyeth them, and preſerveth his perſecuted diſciples.

Annotations on Chap. V.

8. Ἐπὶ τὴν δεξιὰν

V. 1. In the right hand] That ἐπὶ τὴν δεξιὰν ſignifies not upon, but in the right hand of God, may appear by v. 7. where it is ſaid to be taken ἐκ τῆς δεξιᾶς, out of his hand, which ſuppoſeth it formerly to be in it. And though this be not the ordinary notation of the Greek ἐπὶ, (and therefore I ſee it is conceived by ſome, that the book was here brought, and layd by him ἐπὶ τὴν δεξιὰν, on his right hand,) yet the promiſcuous uſe of Prepoſitions in theſe books (anſwerable to the Hebrews, whoſe Prepoſitions are uſed more looſly and largely) will give a full anſwer to this. Now this is no nice conſideration, but that which is of uſe to explain that which follows, of the Lambs taking the book out of the hand of God the Father. For this book containing in it the decrees of vengeance and judgment upon the enemies of God, the crucifiers of Chriſt and perſecuters of the Chriſtian faith and Profeſſors, and this power being by the reſurrection of Chriſt ſeated and inſtated on Chriſt as a reward of his ſufferings, and conſequently the execution of theſe decrees of God put into the hand of the Son, whoſe coming and kingdome it is thence ſo often called, and this power being not again delivered up into the Fathers hands till the end of the world, all this is here fitly and fully expreſſed by the Lambs taking the book out of the right hand of God the Father, (and would not ſo commodiouſly be repreſented, if the book had layn by him, and had not been in his hand) and by his looſing the ſeals, and opening the book, that is, bringing forth thoſe judgments of God which lay folded up in his decrees, but were now to be remarkably executed by Chriſt.

Εἴληφε τὸ βιβλίον ἐκ τῆς δεξιᾶς.

Ib. Written within and on the backe-ſide] It may here be thought probable of this book, which is ſaid to be γεγραμμένον ἔσωθεν καὶ ὄπισθεν, ἐσφραγισμένον, that by putting a comma after ἔσωθεν within it ſhould thus be rendred, written within, and ſealed upon the back, b.

γεγραμμένον ἔσωθεν καὶ ὄπισθεν

and ſo that the ſeven ſeals were all on the outſide of the book. But beſides that the ordinary punctation, putting the comma after ὄπισθεν on the back, reſiſts this, there be many other circumſtances clear the other to be the meaning, that the book, or roll, was written within and on the back-ſide; by within meaning the inner concave ſuperficies of the roll, and by the back-ſide the convex, which is outermoſt in rolling up, (ſee ch. 4. Note i.) As firſt, that in the proceſſe it appears that the opening of every ſingle ſeal brings forth ſome repreſentation, which could not be if all the ſeals were on the back-ſide; for then they muſt all be open'd before any part of the book could be diſcovered: and therefore it muſt be ſuppoſed that the main book or roll had ſeven rolls in it, and each of them ſealed. Secondly, the phraſe in this place referres to the like in Ezekiel, c. 2. 10. where a long ſucceſſion of calamities is repreſented by a roll written within and without, that is, a roll written within throughout, and on the back-ſide a great way down, yet leaving enough in the lower part of the back-ſide to wrap up all that was written, and keep it from being ſeen; and ſo for ſealing alſo. And that is perfectly appliable to the phraſe here, written within and on the back-ſide, but ſo, as there ſhould be void ſpace left to cover all, & to ſeal up all. Thirdly, becauſe the word ὄπισθεν on the back-ſide here being all one with without in Ezekiel, and ſo fitly denoting not the out-ſide of the roll when it was made up, or that part of the outſide which appeared then, but the back-ſide of the roll written on a good way, when the inſide or foreſide was all written on. This is fitly appliable to the matter here foretold at the opening of theſe ſeals, a long ſeries of calamities which ſhould fall upon this people, (juſt as in Ezekiel it was:) for that is the reaſon why a roll at any time is written on the back-ſide, viz. becauſe the inſide (which alone is wont to be writ on) will not contain all that belongs to it; Scriptus & à tergo being the expreſſion for a very long roll, or book, that it is written on the back-ſide alſo.

V. 8. Prayers of Saints] Who the Saints are whoſe prayers are here mention'd, as odours, may appear, v. 10. where of them it is ſaid, that they ſhall reign on the earth, that is, that the effect of the execution of theſe judgments of God on the enemies of Chriſtianity, noted by the Lambs opening the book, (Note a) ſhould be this, that the Chriſtians ſhould thereby have a peaceable being upon earth, to aſſemble and ſerve Chriſt, (ſee c. 1. Note d.) By this it is evident that the Saints here are the Chriſtian people upon earth, and not the Saints which reign in heaven. And this alſo is agreeable to the notion of odours, by which their prayers are expreſs'd: For thoſe referre to the incenſe that the Prieſts were wont to offer in the Sanctuary, whileſt the people pray'd without, Luk. 1. 10. and their prayers ſuppoſed to go up with that incenſe to heaven. By this it alſo appears that the four living creatures, and four and twenty Elders, which have here the vials in their hands, as alſo the harps, the one to denote the prayers, the other the praiſes of the Chriſtians, are the Apoſtles and Biſhops of Judæa, (as in the laying of the ſcene appeared, c. 4. Note d. and g.) whoſe office it was to preſent the prayers and praiſes of the Chriſtians to God: and ſo by all theſe together the Chriſtian perſecuted Church of Judæa, (and by conſent with them, all other Chriſtians over the world) are repreſented here, as thoſe that had now their prayers heard, and thoſe by the deſtruction of their perſecuters turned into praiſes.

CHAP. VI.

1. And as the Lamb, that is, Chriſt, opened the firſt ſeal, which cloſed the firſt roll,

1. AND I ſaw when the Lamb opened * one of the ſeals, and I heard † as it were the noiſe of thunder, one of the four beaſts ſaying, Come and ſee.]

* the firſt μίαν, ſee Mat. 28. 1.

I looked, and the firſt of thoſe four living creatures called aloud to me, or in ſuch a kind of voice as is wont to come out of thunder, when a voice is heard from heaven (ſee note on Act. 9. 6.) ſaying, Come and ſee, or, Here is a more full relation and prediction of thoſe things which Chriſt had foretold concerning the Jews, Mat. 24. (ſet down here in this chapter in groſſe, and more particularly, as they have their execution, in the following chapters.)

2. And as I look'd, me thought I ſaw a white horſe,

2. And I ſaw, and behold a white horſe, and he that ſate on him had a bow, and a crown was given unto him, and he went forth conquering, and to conquer.

and one ſitting thereon, that is, an Angel repreſenting Jeſus Chriſt (ſee c. 19. 11.) now in another poſture then that in which he had been, c. 5. 6. There he was a Lamb ſlain, now he is a King riding in pomp, (the white horſe noting his glory) but this a ſpiritual King, the horſe that he rides on being myſtically the Goſpel, in reſpect of the purity and gloriouſneſſe or divinity of its doctrine. And this horſe-man, or Prince, the Lord Chriſt, had a bow in his hand, that is, menaces and terrors held out againſt his enemies, before they be really inflicted on them, as the bow is firſt held in the hand, then the arrow prepared upon the ſtring, before it be ſhot out at them: and he had a crown given to him, as to one now inſtated and inſtalled in his royal office: and his buſineſſe at the preſent was, that which was primarily proper to the white horſe, the Goſpel, to be the power of God to ſalvation to them that believe, to convert the Jews to the faith, and ſo to conquer and melt his crucifiers; and then for the future (as the Goſpel is by conſequence the ſavour of death unto death) to bring down, or deſtroy the obdurate, (theſe two being generally the ways of Chriſt's conquering in this book) and as the Jews, ſo after, the Romans, by converting ſome, and deſtroying others, conquering and breaking the infidelity of ſome, and then bringing down and deſtroying the impenitent.

6. And from the midſt of the four living creatures there proceeded a voice, as the prediction of ſome prophet, ſaying, The ſcarcity of corn is ſuch, that the price of a mans days-labour will buy no more then is wont to be thought ſufficient for a mans food for a day, and if he eat that all himſelf, there is nothing left to provide for wife and children, much leſſe for cloaths for all of them, and ſo in proportion the price of barley; ſuch ſcarcity there is of the neceſſaries of life for men and cattel: whereas of oyl and wine (of which there is no neceſſity, the firſt might wholly be ſpared, and is of no uſe in ſuch times of extreme dearth, and the want of the other might competently be ſupplyed by water) there was ſtore enough: the ſcarcity was to fall heavy upon the neceſſaries of life, but not on the ſuperfluities, which is an expreſſion of the heavineſſe, not lightneſſe or ſupportableneſſe of it. b.

7. And when he had opened the fourth ſeal, I heard the voice of the fourth * beaſt ſay, Come and ſee.]

7. And upon the opening of the fourth ſeal, wherewith the fourth roll was ſealed up, the fourth living creature called to me to come and ſee the repreſentation contained in it.

8. And I looked, & behold, a pale horſe, & his name that ſate on him was c Death, and † hell followed with him: and power was given d unto them * over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with the ſword, and with hunger, and with death, and † with the beaſts of the earth.]

8. And it was a pale horſe, and a rider thereon, ſignifying great death or mortality, whether by extraordinary ways of death, the ſword and famine, or by that ordinary known way of peſtilence, following (as ordinarily it doth) upon thoſe two and ſweeping away many. And theſe three horſes, in the three laſt rolls, that is, ſword, famine, and death or peſtilence, (all named together in this matter, Mat. 24. 7.) ſhould deſtroy the fourth part of the land of Judæa, men and beaſts, or elſe ſhould make ſuch a vaſtation, that the wild beaſts ſhould encreaſe, and be too ſtrong for the inhabitants there. (And all this but a fore-runner of the far greater deſtructions that ſhould afterwards be wrought among them at the ſiege of Titus.) c. d.

9. And when he had opened the fifth ſeal, I ſaw * e under the altar the ſouls of them that were ſlain for the word of God, and for the teſtimony which † they held.

10. And they cryed with a loud voice, ſaying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, doſt thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on * the earth?]

9, 10. And upon the opening of the fifth ſeal, I ſaw in the lower part of the Sanctuary, beneath the altar of incenſe, the ſouls of the Martyrs, (ſee ch. 7. 9, 14.) that had been ſlain by the Jews, for their conſtant preaching of Chriſt, and this blood of theirs, like that of Abel, called to Chriſt, as a righteous and faithful Judge, for judgement upon thoſe wicked men, who were guilty of all the blood of all the prophets (Mat. 23. 35.) even as far as to Chriſt himſelf and his Apoſtles, and other Chriſtians afterwards, whom they perſecuted alſo, and cauſed many to be put to death, Luke 21. 12. e.

Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. Αλλήλους σφάξωσι

V. 4. Kill one another] The great inteſtine broils among the Jewes, thoſe eſpecially of the Seditious and the Zelots, are at large ſet down by Joſephus l. 4. and l. 5. De Bel. Jud. ſo great, ſaith he, that Veſpaſian on purpoſe deferred the ſiege of Jeruſalem, that they might more eaſily be deſtroyed by their own then by the Roman's ſwords: ſee Luk. 21. 10. Thus about the twelfth of Nero, when Florus crucified (beſide great multitudes of the ordinary ſort) μυρίους ὅσους πρὸς Ἰουδαίοις τιμωμένους, ſaith Euſebius out of Joſephus, many myriads of the moſt honourable among the Jewes, there was, ſaith he, firſt in Cæſarea, then in all Syria, ſuch a diſorder and δεινὴ μαχὴ, terrible tumult, of thoſe that dwelt in the countrey againſt thoſe that inhabited the cities, invading and laying them waſt in a moſt hoſtile manner, that one might ſee whole cities full of unburied carcaſſes, old men and children thrown dead together, women ſhamelesly uncovered, καὶ ἡ πᾶσ' ἐπαρχία μεστὴ ἀδιηγήτων συμφορῶν, the whole Province full of inexpreſſible calamities. And the obſervation is once for all, Eccl. Hiſt. l. 2. c. 6. that στάσις καὶ πόλεμοι καὶ κακῶν ἐπάλληλοι μηχαναὶ, ſeditions, and warres, and miſchievous projects one upon the neck of another, never left the city and all Judea, till at laſt the ſiege came upon them. And at that very time when it came, three factions there were on foot among them, under three commanders, Eleazar, John, and Simon. And though Tacitus ſay that the approach of their enemy gave them peace one with another; yet Joſephus, that was an eye-witneſſe, relates it much otherwiſe, only that the three factions εἰς δύο μοίρας ἐστέλλοντο, were divided into two, by the oppreſſion of the third, John upon the day of unleavened bread ſending ſome into the Temple, under pretence of ſacrificing, which kill'd Eleazar and butcher'd his party, and ſeiſed upon the Temple, where before Eleazar and his Zelots had fortified themſelves. And however, though the ſeditious joyn'd a while to repell the enemy, yet they ſoon returned to their former feuds, and one faction fighting againſt the other, the weight and ſmart of both fell upon the communalty, who were plunder'd by each of them. More of theſe civil combuſtions, and the fearfull effects of them, we read of moſt notably in the time of the ſiege; when the ſcarcity began to pinch the beſieged, then the στασιασταὶ broke into all houſes, tormented the poſſeſſors to bring out their proviſion. When mothers, † ſaith he, ſnatch'd victuals out of their babes mouthes, in came the ſeditious, and ſnatch'd it out of theirs, and catching up the children which held faſt the bits in their mouthes, and would not let them goe, they daſh'd them againſt the ground. Thoſe that, to prevent them, eat up what they had before they could come to them, they uſed with moſt horrid cruelties, ὡς ἀδικηθέντες, taking themſelves to be injured by them who thus robbed them of their prey: And thoſe that were ready to die through the famine, they would yet ſearch more ſtrictly, μὴ τροφὴν κόλπον ἔχων βρῶσιν ζητῶν κρύπτοιτο ἢ θανάτου, leſt they ſhould have ſome food in their boſome, and only make as if they were famiſh'd, when they were not; and then δειναὶ βασάνων ὁδοὶ πρὸς ἔρευναν βρώσεως, horrible waies of torment did they uſe to find out food. And ſo true is that which is here ſaid, of their killing one another, that ſaith he, τινὰς ἢ ἐρριμμένους ζῶντας διήλαυνον ὅπλοις πείρας τοῦ ζητεῖν, they would run through thoſe that lay alive (but ready to faint) before them, to trie their weapons. And the horridneſſes of theſe practices of theirs upon one another was ſuch, ſaith he, that if the Romans had delayed the work, the earth would have ſwallowed them up, or fire and brimſtone would have fallen from heaven on them, as on Sodome. And though the whole faction of the Zelots were kill'd by Titus in the Temple (a part of which they fortified and defended) yet ſtill after that, even to Adrian's time, we find mention of their frequent tumults, and butcherings of one another. But the particulars which are here in this place intimated, and the ſame Mat. 24. 6, 7. ſeem to be earlier then theſe, as being both here and there ſet before the famines, and peſtilences, and earthquakes; all which, as they are both there and here mentioned, are but ἀρχαὶ ὠδίνων the beginnings of their enſuing calamities, the ſignes and forerunners of them. And many ſuch ſlaughters there then were in the latter end of Claudius, and throughout Nero's reign, cauſed by ſeditions and tumults, from time to time ſucceeding one another, and famines in like manner conſequent to their ſeditious commotions; and ſo, as it is uncertain, ſo it matters not much in what point of time theſe here are placed. Only for the preventing of miſtakes, we may proceed thus farre in defining of this time; that the famine here mention'd cannot be that foretold by Agabus, nor conſequently can the ſlaughters here mention'd be any preceding that, if what is here ſaid be by way of prophecie. For that famine foretold by Agabus came to paſſe in the ſecond year of Claudius, which was before S. John's baniſhment can be imagin'd to be: For that S. John was at Jeruſalem about the ſixth of Claudius appears by Paul's finding him there, Gal. 2. 9. at his coming up with Barnabas from Antioch to the Council there. And that Claudius did not baniſh the Jewes from Rome till after this, appears, Act. 18. where upon that occaſion, Aquila was but newly come from Rome ver. 2. at the time of Paul's being come from Athens to Corinth: and there muſt be ſome competent time intervening betwixt the Council and this: For after he ſeparated from Barnabas, his buſineſſe was in Syria, Cilicia, Derbe, Lyſtra, Phrygia, Galatia, Myſia, Troas, Philippi, Amphipolis, Apollonia, Theſſalonica, Berœa and Athens. This baniſhment of the Jewes from Rome, Oroſius l. 7. c. 6. relates out of Joſephus to have been about this ninth of Claudius. And that Claudius did any act againſt Chriſtians before they were involved in that expulſion among the Jewes, we have no ground or reaſon to affirm: But on the contrary Suetonius is clear, Claud. c. 25. that he baniſhed the Jewes that followed Chriſt. Which makes it reaſonable to aſſent to the judgment of Chronologers, that in this ninth of Claudius John was baniſh'd from Epheſus to Patmos; all parts of the Roman dominions doing the ſame that was done at Rome. However, that John was not ſent into Patmos before that famine, doth thus appear irrefragably; No manner of perſecution fell upon the Chriſtians from the Roman Emperor, or Proconſul, or Procurator, before they were ſtirred up by the Jewes, the fountains of all the perſecutions, ſaith Tertullian cont. Gnoſt. And the Jewes ſtirred not up the Gentiles untill, by the Apoſtles turning away from them to the Gentiles, they were incenſed and provoked, Act. 13. 46. and that was after the death of Herod Agrippa, which was in the fourth of Claudius. And therefore ſuppoſing the exile of S. John to Patmos to have been toward this end of Claudius's reigne, it is conſequent that to that time alſo, and not before, theſe mutual ſlaughters muſt belong. And of this ſort Joſephus mentions very bloody ones, when the Sicarii raged in the time of Felix, Ant. l. 20. c. 5'. And at the end of that chapter he adds, τὰς ἀπορουμένους ἢ ἱερέων ὑπ' ἐνδείας τελευτᾶν, that many of the Prieſts were in diſtreſſe, and died for want; though becauſe that famine ſeems to have been on the Prieſts only by the oppreſſion of the high-prieſts, it is not certain that that is it which is here mention'd, but ſome other about that time, not particularly mentioned by him. And theſe ſlaughters wrought by theſe ſeditious perſons as they are properly parallel to the ἀρχὰς ὠδίνων the beginnings of pangs, Mat. 24. ſo are they to the ſecond horſe in this Viſion. And preſently after, the ſtate of Judæa is ſo related by Joſephus c. ζ'. as their condition may well be repreſented in this Viſion, v. 8. where the power is given to them to kill upon the fourth part of the land with ſword, and hunger, and death, the Jewes never deſiſting from ſedition, μέχρι δὲ ἢ πόλεμον ἐξῆψαν until they kindled & accended a warre. And this will be a fit ſeaſon alſo in which to place the crying of the ſouls beneath the Altar, which muſt be ſomewhat before the murther of S. James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, ſet down after the death of Feſtus, (and before Albinus entred the province, c. ι'.) and ſaid to have raiſed great grief and indignation in all that had any ſenſe of juſtice, ὅσοι ἐδόκουν ἐπιεικέστατοι ἢ περὶ τὴν πόλιν εἶναι, καὶ περὶ τοὺς νόμους ἀκριβεῖς, βαρέως ἤνεγκαν ἐπὶ τούτῳ, all that were moſt juſt in the city, and exact

b. Χοῖνιξ

V. 6. A measure of wheat for a peny] Chœnix is not any set measure, but hath often varied in several times, saith Waserus, Ant. Mens. l. 2. c. 3. and doth ordinarily signifie that proportion of wheat which will be sufficient for one mans food for a day. So Δηνάριον is, it seems by the Gospel, Mat. 20. 2. the wages of a daies labour. And then the meaning of A chœnix for a peny is, that a man's daies-labour shall but bring him in as much bread as he daily wanteth, all other necessaries for him, and even bread for his whole family, being wanting; for the chœnix was but the proportion for one person. This signifies the beginning of a famine, the dearnesse of corn, as will be discerned if it be compared with the difference that is among us between the day-wages of a labourer, and the quantity of bread which is necessary for him; two pence in bread being thought largely sufficient for a single man's food, when yet his ordinary wages is five or six times as much: by which may be guess'd the meaning of a chœnix of wheat for a denarie, viz. two peny-worth of bread (perhaps lesse) sold for a shilling, or every thing six times as dear as ordinary. And so this whole verse, and the rider of the black horse, with the ballance in his hand, is an embleme of dearth beginning, though not yet rioting upon them, and so is most proper to be applied to the famines in Judæa, foretold by Christ, Mat. 24. 7. which yet were none of them comparable with those horrible streights of famine which befell them afterward in the siege, &c. See Note a.

c. Θάνατος καὶ ὁ ἅδης ἀκολουθεῖ

V. 8. Death, and hell followed] By death here, and Hades (or ἀφανισμὸς destruction) along with it, the pestilence is most probably signified, which follows the famines immediately, Mat. 24. 7. and so here in the end of this 8th ver. (sword, famine, death.) Death sure is pestilence, and that some particular pestilence, soon after the famines forementioned. Yet will it not be amisse to observe how properly this word (which signifies mortality in general, without defining the way of it) may be also set to denote some other of those prodigious slaughters which after fell upon the Jewes, which could not be contained under either the sword or famine before mentioned. Of this sort there were many, that especially of the three myriads, that is, thirty thousand, which in a tumult at the feast of the Passeover were thrust and trod to death by themselves, as they ran tumultuously out of the gates of the Temple; ὥσθ' ὑπὸ τῆς ἐξόδου τοῦ ἱεροῦ βίᾳ ζωσθέντων, πρὸς ἀλλήλων καὶ κατεπάτουν, saith Eusebius l. 2. c. 19'.

d. Αὐτοῖς

Ib. Unto them] The αὐτοῖς them here in the Plural seems to signifie the three last horses and their riders, and so to denote sword, and famine, and pestilence, the same that was mentioned by Christ, Mat. 24. 7. as the beginnings of their sorrow, or pangs of a farre heavier travail, which after followed: and so no doubt there was a completion of it, in such a degree as is here spoken of, that is, ἐπὶ τὸ τέταρτον τῆς γῆς upon the fourth part of the land; whether that signifie to the destroying one tetrarchy or fourth part of the nation, (as it is certain it fell very heavy upon Galilee) or whether to the destroying very many in several parts of the nation, so that not all, but only a fourth part of the nation were thus visited by these destructions. This latter will seem the most probable, if it be applied peculiarly to that point of time which is parallel to the beginnings of sorrow, Mat. 24. And then the ὑπὸ τῶν θηρίων by the beasts, if that be the right reading, will signifie the prevailing of the beasts of the field, as a token and effect of a vastation in those places, where the sword, and famine, and pestilence had made such havock, that is, in that fourth part of the land. But the King's MS. reads not ὑπὸ τῶν θηρίων, by the beasts, but τὸ τέταρτον τῶν θηρίων, the fourth part of beasts, answerable to the fourth part of the earth precedent; and then the meaning will be, that this destruction fell upon the cattel as well as men, as either in warre, or famine, or pestilence it is wont to doe. This hath thus farre been said on supposition that what is described here belongs to the beginnings of sorrows, and not the bitter pangs themselves. As for those, they were farre more sharp and wasting, and infinitely above this proportion. The story is full of them. At the Passeover (to shew the just judgments of God in avenging on them the death of his Son, at that very time wherein they crucified him) no lesse then 300000, which came up to that feast out of all Judæa, were shut up in Jerusalem, as in a prison, in that close siege of the Romans, which made the famine so soon to rage most furiously; and this whole number, being but a small proportion to the infinite multitude more of those which were in the city before, (for by Cestius's computation of the 255000 and 600 sacrifices offered at one Passeover, at the rate of ten persons to one sacrifice, the number will be near ten times as great as this now named, besides the unclean that were excluded the sacrifice) were all, one and other, destroyed either by the famine, or by the seditious and turbulent among themselves, killing the rich προφάσει ἀυτομολίας under pretense they would betray the city, or by the pestilence, or by the enemy (when they were taken † forraging for food, and crucified great multitudes of them before the city) or at last taken captive by the besiegers. So that of those that fell by the famine and sword, λιμῷ καὶ ξίφει, in Josephus de Captiv. l. 6. c. 44. (as here ὑπὸ ῥομφαίᾳ καὶ ὑπὸ λιμῷ) he there casts up the summe to an hundred and ten myriads, that is, eleven hundred thousand. And for the rest of the † στασιῶται καὶ λῃστικοὶ, the seditious robbers and thieves, as they were by their own accused and appeached, they were all put to death by Fronto a Roman, after the taking the city; and of those that were still left, those which were tallest and handsomest, they were reserved for the triumph. Then of the rest that were above seventeen years old, many were sent prisoners to the works in Ægypt, and many sent into the provinces to be destroyed in the Theatres, εἰς θήρια καὶ θηρίοις, saith he, by sword and by wild beasts. And for all those that were under seventeen years old they were sold for slaves. And of these alone, saith he, the number was above nine myriads, that is, ninety thousand.

e. Θυσιαστήριον

V. 9. Under the Altar] θυσιαστήριον here, and c. 8. 3. must signifie the altar of incense (called θυσιαστήριον τοῦ θυμιάματος Luk. 1. 11. but properly θυμιατήριον) not of burnt-sacrifice, the whole place here represented from ch. 4. being the Sanctuary within the veile, where this altar of incense stood, that other of the burnt-sacrifice standing without in the court (see Note on Mat. 23. i.) and so 'tis clear by the mention of incense, ch. 8. 3. To which purpose may be observed, what we find in * Theophylact, that the word θυμιατήριον was used peculiarly for that censer which the Chief Priest once a year carried with incense into the Holy of holies, and that the standing altar in the Sanctuary was called θυσιαστήριον. And therefore ὑποκάτω τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου must not be rendred under the altar (as they that conceive it the altar of burnt-sacrifice, conceive also that the souls of the Martyrs doe here lie at the foot of the altar, where the blood, which is the life of living creatures, is wont to be poured out) but in the lower part of the Sanctuary, beneath the altar of incense. Of this word see more in Note on ch. 11. 2. As for the souls of those that were slain, by that phrase is signified their blood, (as the soul and the life is all one, and the blood is the life, Gen. 9. 4.) and the blood of the slain is the effusion of their blood, (as the blood of Abel) the sin of murthering them. The same is after expres'd By ἐσφαγμένοι, those that were slain; for of them in the Masculine gender, and not of the ψυχαὶ in the feminine, it is ſaid, ἔκραζον λέγοντες, they cried ſaying, How long, &c. All which ſignifies no more but the ſin of ſlaying the Chriſtians, and the vengeance that in juſtice from God, and by the promiſe of Chriſt, was due to it: And the whole paſſage ſeems to allude to 2 Eſdr. 4. 35. where the ſouls of the righteous ask in their chambers, ſaying, How long, &c. and the anſwer is, (as here) By meaſure hath he meaſured the times, &c. and, he doth not ſtirre them, till the ſaid meaſure be fulfilled; and ch. 15. 8. Behold, the innocent and righteous blood crieth unto me, and the ſouls of the juſt complain continually, and therefore ſaith the Lord, I will ſurely avenge, &c. And ſo here the great perſecutions and ſlaughters of the Chriſtians wrought by the Jewes, added to their crucifying of Chriſt, provoked God's vengeance on them, which ſhould ſhortly be poured out in fury, they ſtill going on to ſlay more, James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem (known by the name of the Juſt) and others, whoſe ſlaughters, by their own confeſſion, brought down that fatal deſtruction upon them.

f. Σεισμοὶ V. 12. Great earthquake] Of the great earthquakes (in divers places, ſaith S. Luke) which were both in Aſia and at Rome, ſee Euſebius in Chronico in the time of Nero, and Baronius, An. Chr. 68. Neronis 12. and ſo alſo of the Eclipſe of the Sun; and of a ſtarre or comet like a ſword, that ſtood over the city, and continued a year, and of a great light, that ſhined about the Altar and the Temple at nine of the night, upon the feaſt of unleavened bread, for half an hour together, and of Meteors that were ſeen through all the region, and of an apparition in the clouds of chariots and troops of armed men encompaſſing the city, and many the like, ſee Euſebius Eccl. Hiſt. l. 3. c. 11. who calls them ἐναργῆ καὶ προσημαίνοντα μέλλοντ' ἐρημίαν τέρατα, and τὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ κηρύγματα, prodigies manifeſtly foreſignifying the approaching deſolation, and ſermons as it were of God himſelf, which is the meaning of the σημεῖον the ſigne of the Son of man appearing in heaven, Mat. 24. 30. And among theſe Meteors, the falling ſtarres that are here deſcribed, v. 13. would go for no great rarity. But Arethas mentions ſome of the ancients, who interpret this earthquake here tropologically of Veſpaſian's ſiege of Jeruſalem; and ſo it may well be underſtood, and by analogie all the reſt alſo. See Note g.

g. Ἥλιος μέλας Ib. The Sun became black] That the blackneſſe of the Sun, and bloodineſs of the Moon, and the falling of ſtars from heaven upon the ground, have a literal interpretation, of which they are capable, ſo as to note prodigies in the heavens, Eclipſes and Meteors, &c. there is no doubt. But yet here they are ſure brought to ſignifie ſomething elſe. For if theſe words be compared with Mat. 24. 29. to which they are perfectly parallel, it will appear that they are not a ſetting down the prodigies before the ſiege of Jeruſalem, but that (that being ſet down, v. 15.) the darkning of the Sun, &c. is μετὰ after that tribulation, or preſſure. All the queſtion is, whether theſe here be only a general repreſentation of ſlaughters and blood-ſhedding, which (becauſe, when they are exceſſive, they may cauſe clouds and meteors in the aire) are by ſome thought to be ſo expreſs'd ordinarily in the Prophets, or whether they may not ſignifie the falling of theſe judgements upon the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical ſtate repreſented by Sun and Moon, and the whole multitude of that people ſignified by the ſtars of heaven: And the latter of theſe ſeems the more probable (ſee Note on Mat. 24. n.) for thus in the Prophets of the Old Teſtament it is ordinary, as when we read, for the iniquity of the people is the land darkned, and the like, that is, the glory and luſtre of it deſtroyed. An eminent example, directly parallel to this, we have Iſa. 34. 4. All the hoſt of heaven ſhall be diſſolved, and the heavens ſhall be rolled together as a ſcroll, and all their hoſt ſhall fall down as the leaf falleth off from the Vine, and the falling figg from the figge-tree; and my ſword ſhall be bathed in heaven. And all this but a repreſentation of God's judgements upon Idumæa, as in the next words it followeth. And ſo the hoſt of heaven, Dan. 8. 10. is ſet to denote the Jewes, which being ſuppoſed, the ſtarres that here fall, will be the common people or multitude of that whole Nation, all expreſs'd diſtributively in the words that follow, v. 15. the Kings and great ones, and the rich, and commanders of thouſands, and the mighty, and every ſervant and free-man: ſee Note on Chap. 8. c.

h. Βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς V. 15. The Kings of the earth] That this prophecy belongs to the Jewes, hath been cleared by other evidences, and accordingly βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς muſt be tranſlated the Kings of the land, and ſignifie in this place thoſe that had or aſſumed to themſelves the greateſt authority among them, and not in any ſtricter ſenſe Kings, or Heads of the people: for that notion is not appliable to any that were at Jeruſalem at this point of time, to which this Viſion refers, (ſee Note i.) And proportionably muſt the μεγιστᾶνες great men denote the principal that were then in the city. And then the χιλίαρχοι are the commanders or officers in their armies, the leaders of the ſeveral factions, as will appear Note i. (being elſewhere uſed for Roman officers of their militia.) And then the rich men, the bond-man, and the free-man, make up all that were in Jeruſalem at this time, expreſs'd, as 'tis the faſhion of the Scripture, by the ſeveral ſorts of them. Μεγιστᾶνες Χιλίαρχοι

i. Κρύπτοντες εἰς τὰ αὐτὰ Ib. Hid themſelves in the dens] This hiding themſelves in dens, or caves, is an expreſſion of a great fear and conſternation, and the thing that was foretold by S. Luke c. 21. 26. Men deſpairing for fear, and for the expectation of the things that were a coming on that people, and this there immediately attending the Gentiles treading down of Jeruſalem, ver. 24. This makes it not ſo fit to apply it to their flying to the mountains, which was before the ſiege, or to thoſe fears that were produced by the prodigies, the forerunners of the deſtruction, ſuch as the φωνὴ ἀθρόα, the promiſcuous noiſe or voice, Μεταβαίνωμεν ἐντεῦθεν, Let us remove thence, which was generally thought to ſignifie the departure of God from the Temple, adytis ariſque relictis, for this ſtill was before the deſtruction: but the paſſage to which this moſt punctually relates is that in the very time of deſtroying the city by Titus. For when the Temple was burnt, and the Prieſts hanged up, and upon an affront offered to Titus, (refuſing to relieve, or take quarter from him) the ſouldiers were permitted to plunder and fire all; the στασιασταὶ or ſeditious go to the βασιλικὴ αὐλὴ or Palace, where many had laid up their wealth, drive out the Romans thence, kill eight thouſand of them, four thouſand Jewes that had gotten thither for ſhelter, plunder the place, and the whole lower city, and then οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς ἄνω πόλεως ἐχώρουν, retired to the upper city, Sion, the beſt fortified place, and there planted themſelves. For the taking of this, Titus was fain to uſe engines of battery, and to that end to caſt up works: And having done ſo, aſſoon as ever a piece of the wall was beaten down, of a ſudden a ſtrange fright and conſternation took them, ſome crying out that the whole wall on the Weſt was demoliſhed, others that the Romans were entred, others that they ſaw them in the Towers; and ſuch a change followed in the mindes of all their leaders, or τύραννοι, parallel to the βασιλεῖς, and δυνατοὶ, and χιλίαρχοι Kings, and mighty men, and commanders here, that they that were juſt now in the greateſt pride and rage, and contempt of their enemies, and by the deceits of falſe prophets ſuborned by them, endeavoured to make all confident that they ſhould have ſucceſſe, now trembled and quaked, and ſought which way to fly: upon which Joſephus obſerves ἡ τοῦ Θεοῦ δύναμις ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀνοσίους, Βασιλεῖς Χιλίαρχοι Δυνατοὶ

σεως, the power of God upon impious men. For, saith he, the Tyrants of their own accords coming down out of their towers, τῆς ἀσφαλείας ἐγύμνωσε ἑαυτοὺς, quitted their garrisons, which otherwise no force could have been able to take. And a multitude of them endeavouring to get away, but being not able to doe so, run into caves under ground, and into the foulest vaults, and so the Romans took the towers, and burnt the houses, kill'd a multitude in the streets, without any the least opposition. And so the city was taken, this being the last act of that bloody tragedy, as here this hiding in the caves appears to be attended immediately with these words, for the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand? answerable to the Romans setting up their ensigns on those towers at this point of time, and celebrating their victory with shouts and singing, as Josephus saith; adding, that when Titus came and saw these towers thus madly forsaken by the Jewes, he wondred exceedingly, and left them standing for a monument of his strange successe, when he demolished all other walls of the city. After this the Romans making a narrow search in all the noisome vaults and caverns, they kill'd whom they found there. And John, one of the Generals of the seditious, being almost famish'd in a vault, begg'd quarter, and was taken out, and kept in prison: and so Simon son of Gioras, the other of their Generals, having gotten into an inner vault, after some dayes his victuals failing, came out of the vault in his white stole and purple garment, and yielded himself to a Roman souldier that was left there. And him Titus reserved to be carried in triumph to Rome with him. And for the rest of the σικάριοι and σικάριοι, seditious and robbers, so call'd from their short sword, (that is, the remainders of the two factions, the Zelots being before murthered by the former of them in the Temple) they were appeached by one another, and brought out, and either kill'd by the Romans, or kept to adorn the triumph, or sent as slaves into Ægypt, or in the several provinces set to fight with wilde beasts on the Theatres. So exactly true is it which is here said, that as the Kings and great ones, so πᾶς δοῦλος καὶ ἐλεύθερος, every servant and every free-man, did thus hide themseves in the caves, as the final completion of this destruction. And if the πέτρας τῶν ὀρέων, the stones of the mountains, have any farther peculiarity of signification, it may fitly be interpreted of the walls of the Temple, where Josephus saith the Priests hid themselves at the time of the firing of the Temple by the Roman souldiers, from whence five dayes after they came out, being forced by hunger, and were brought to Titus, and put to death. To which purpose it is commonly known, that as the Temple is called the mountain, or hill, of the Lord, so πέτρα stones may fitly signifie walls that are made of stone, and so may probably signifie Mat. 27. 51. the walls of the Temple, rather then the Tomb-stones. And if so, then their hiding themselves in the walls of the Temple, as Josephus relates, will be literally expres'd by this phrase πέτρας ὀρέων, the stones of the mountains; or if not, yet prophetically and mystically it may thus be signified, as that which follows, their crying to the mountains to fall upon them, is a prophetical expression to signifie the sadnesse and direfulnesse of their present condition.

V. 16. Wrath of the Lamb] The anger of the Lamb, and the great day of his anger here, v. 16, and 17. and ὀργή σου, thine anger, ch. 11. 18. are set to expresse this vengeance on the Jewes, whereof the crucifixion of Christ was so great and particular a provoker. Hence is it that in the Gospel 'tis called the kingdome of God, and the coming of Christ, and in Josephus and Eusebius, θεία ἐπισκοπὴ, divine visitation, Euseb. l. 3. c. ζ'. ὅλεθρος πρὸς τῆς θείας δίκης, destruction from divine vengeance, c. ι'. and ἡ ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ τιμωρία punishment from God, ibid. and all this from S. Luke, ch. 21. 22. who calls them ἡμέρας ἐκδικήσεως, days of vengeance from God, poured out upon them remarkably for what they had done unto Christ. And one phrase yet more eminent there is to the same purpose, Rev. 16. 14. πόλεμον τῆς ἡμέρας τῆς μεγάλης τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ παντοκράτορος, the warre of the great day of God that ruleth all, that is, the bloody destruction which this just judgment of God brought upon them, for their crucifying of Christ, and persecuting and killing of Christians.

CHAP. VII.

Paraphrase.

1. AND after these things I saw four Angels standing on the four corners of a the * earth; holding the four winds of the † earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on b the sea, nor *on any tree.]

1. After the general view and description of God's vengeances on the Jews, succeed now the particular executions of them: and therein the first thing that was represented to me, was, Christ's peculiar care for the preserving of the true penitent believers of them out of the common destruction, who are therefore first to be mark'd (as the houses of the Israelites in Ægypt, that the plague may passe over them) and so secured before the vengeance break out upon them in common. This is here thus expres'd in vision: I saw, saith he, four Angels that had power to bring punishments, famine, &c. (foretold c. 6.) upon Judæa, but making stay before they would do it, not permitting any of these mischiefs as yet to break out upon them.

2. And I saw another Angel ascending from the East, having the seal of the living God: and he cryed with a loud voice to the four Angels, to whom it was given to † hurt the earth and the sea,

3. Saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, or the trees, till we * have c sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.

4. And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed and d hundred and fourty and four thousand, of all the tribes of the children of Israel.]

2, 3, 4. And whilst this was a doing, I saw another Angel coming on a message from Christ (intituled the East, or rising Sun, see note on Luk. 1. 5. and Rev. 16. f.) with a writing sealed (an ordinance or commission from God) in his hand, that they proceed not to any such act of mischief, till the believers, or orthodox, pure, stedfy Christians be sealed, that is, put into a safe condition, that they partake not in that destruction. And these that are thus sealed, and so preserved, though they are a very small despicable number, in respect of the far greater number of those that were destroyed, onely a remnant, as Noah's family of the old world, or Lot's of Sodome (see Luk. 17. 27, 29. and note on Mat. 24. k.) are yet fourteen myriads and four thousand, that is, a great number, (not precisely so many, or just 12000 and no more, of every tribe;) and these were by God's appointment to be secured, before the judgements were to break out upon that people.

5. Of the tribe of Judah were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand.

6. Of the tribe of Aſer were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Nephthali were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Manaſſes were ſealed twelve thouſand.

7. Of the tribe of Simeon were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Levi were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Iſſachar were ſealed twelve thouſand.

8. Of the tribe of Zabulon were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Joſeph were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were ſealed twelve thouſand.

9. After this I immediately ſaw all the orthodox, pure, conſtant Chriſtians, whether Jewes or Gentiles, every where diſperſed, of all nations, that had continued thus long under perſecution of the Jewes, ſee v. 14. looking up with faith and conſtancy to Chriſt, attending this vengeance of God on the unbelieving Jewes, and owned, and acknowledged, and rewarded by God, as thoſe that had ſtuck to the faith, and perſevered conſtantly, Mat. 24. 13. though they had not reſiſted unto blood, Heb. 12. 4.

9. After this, I beheld, and lo a great multitude, which no man could number, of † all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, ſtood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands,]

† every nation, and tribes πασῶν ἐκ φυλῶν

c. 10. And theſe praiſed God for his deliverance (as the Martyrs called for vengeance c. 6. 9.) acknowledging all their delivery to be imputable, as a moſt remarkable act of mercy, to God the Father, and to Chriſt on whom they have believed.

10. And cryed with a loud voice, ſaying, [c] Salvation to our God, which ſitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb.]

11, 12. And a multitude of Angels ſtood waiting on God, and encompaſſing the Biſhops of Judæa, (which were, together with the Apoſtles, to be gone out of the Countrey at this time, and ſo to partake of this delivery) and they joyned with them in this rejoicing, and bleſſing of God.

11. And all the Angels ſtood round about the throne, and about the elders, and the four * beaſts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worſhipped God,

12. Saying, Amen. Bleſſing, and glory, and wiſdome, and thankſgiving, and honour, and power, and might be unto our God for ever and ever, Amen.]

* living creatures ζῶα

13. And me thought, one of the Biſhops ask'd me, who I thought thoſe were (or whence) that were in the white garments of unſpotted innocence, v. 9.

13. And one of the Elders anſwered, ſaying unto me, What are theſe that are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they?]

14. And I told him I knew not, deſiring him to tell me. And he told me, ſaying, Theſe are the Confeſſors (though not Martyrs) ver. 9. that ventured their lives for Chriſt in the confeſſing him conſtantly.

14. And I ſaid unto him, Sir, thou knoweſt. And he ſaid unto me, Theſe are they which came out of great tribulation, and have waſhed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.]

15. Who ſhall therefore live to enjoy ſome tranquillity, and peaceable aſſembling, to ſerve him in the Church: ſee 2 Theſſ. 2. 1. and Rev. 5. 10.

15. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and ſerve him day and night in his Temple, and he that ſitteth on the throne ſhall dwell among them.]

16. They ſhall no more be perſecuted or reſtrained from aſſemblies: ſee Iſa. 49. 10.

16. They ſhall hunger no more, neither thirſt any more, neither ſhall the Sun light on them, nor any * heat:]

17. But live peaceably in Chriſt's fold (ſee Pſal. 23. 2.) and having ſown in tears, they ſhall now reap in joy the fruits of their patience and perſeverance, (ſee Iſa. 25. 8.) a peaceable time of ſerving God. (Such as the Chriſtians had in the days of Veſpaſian and Titus, after the deſtruction of the Jewes.)

17. For the Lamb which is † in the midſt of the throne * ſhall feed them, and ſhall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God ſhall wipe away all tears from their eyes.]

a. ἡ γῆ

V. 3. The earth] That ἡ γῆ the earth, or land, ſignifies not the whole world, but particularly the land of Paleſtine, in many places of the New Teſtament, according to the notion of הארץ among the Hebrews, ſee Note on Mat. 5. b. and ſo in like manner the four corners of the land, Ezech. 7. 2. Thus ſaith the Lord God unto the land of Iſrael, An end, The end is come upon the four corners of the land. And ſo ſure 'tis very generally, almoſt conſtantly, taken in this book, and accordingly is to be rendred, the land, and not the earth, as in the fifth commandement, and in the Prophets generally, the Hebrew is wont to be rendred; and in the latter part of this verſe, where 'tis ſet oppoſite to, or diſtinct from the ſea, &c. it may poſſibly ſignifie Judæa, or that part of Paleſtine.

b. Θάλασσα

Ib. The ſea] If Θάλασσα the ſea here be taken for any part of Paleſtine diſtinct from Judæa, it may then ſeem to ſignifie that part of the countrey which was near the ſea, or lake of Geneſareth (ſee Note on Luk. 8. c.) as Capernaum ἡ παραθαλασσία, by the ſea-ſide, Mat. 4. 13. in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthali, ὁδὸν θαλάσσης by the ſea-ſide, v. 15. This ſea was the ſea of Tiberias, Joh. 6. 1, & 23. & c. 21. 1. the city Tiberias being by Herod built in the prime part of Galilee, ſaith Joſephus, Ant. l. 18. c. 3. And ſo under this title of Θάλασσα ſea, Galilee may be deſcribed, of which there was a Tetrarch under the Romans, and that different from the Procurator or ἡγεμὼν Governour of Judæa, Luk. 3. 1. as here ἡ γῆ and Θάλασσα, the land and the ſea, are ſet differing one from the other (ſee Note on Luk. 21. e.) And then for the πᾶν δένδρον every tree which is added, that alſo may ſignifie that countrey wherein the trees did principally grow, and that may be the tetrarchy of Abyla, or Ἀβυλανὴ χώρα the Abylene region, Luk. 3. 1. for that, ſaith Joſephus, and the region about that, which made up Lyſanias's tetrarchy, was ſituate in Libanus, which is ſo famous in Scripture for trees. See Joſephus Ant. l. 18. c. 4. But the truth is, all theſe together, land, and ſea, and trees, may perhaps ſignifie no more but the whole people of the Jewes, without any nicer conſideration of different countreys in it.

Ἀβυλανὴ χώρα

Ibid. Sealed the—— in their foreheads] This ſealing in the forehead is the ſame that is mentioned in the prophet Ezechiel, c. 9. 4. תָּ, as it is thought, either for תורה the law, or for תשובה repentance (and ſo Theodotion

c. Σφραγίζω· μετὰ τοῦ μετανοῶν

Theodotion renders the Hebrew ת there, not σημεῖον a signe, but καὶ the letter Tau, noting the promise of deliverance that is ascertain'd to such penitents or obedient servants of God when all others are destroyed, (for that this is the use and meaning of sealing, see Note on Ephes. 4. g.) And that this was most remarkable amongst the Jewes at this time, appears, not only by the frequent mention of the Σωζόμενοι those that escape, and σωτηρία, deliverance or salvation, often shewed to belong to this matter, and again by the plain prediction of Christ, one shall be taken and another left, and many the like; but by that passage in story (mentioned on Mat. 24. 26.) how Gallus having sat down and besieged Jerusalem, neglected many opportunities of taking it, and in the very next month raised the siege, recalled the army again, by which means the Christians that were in the city, remembring Christ's words, When you see Jerusalem encompass'd with armies, then let them that are in Judæa flee to the mountains, (and perhaps admonished by the voice, Μεταβαίνωμεν ἐνθένδε, Let us go hence, thus understood) immediately removed out of the city, and indeed out of Judæa, and went to Pella (see Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. ε'.) and were dispersed some in Europe, others in Asia (see Note on Ioh. 7. d.) and at Titus's besieging the city there was not one Christian left in it. See Josephus de Bell. Jud. l. 2. c. 22. &c. and Note on Mat. 24. g.

d. χιλιάδες.

V. 4. Hundred fourty and four thousand] This number of an hundred fourty and four thousand, or the proportioning it so equally between twelve Tribes, must not necessarily be taken in a literal sense, that there were just so many Christians in Judæa, that went out and were delivered at the time of the approach of those judgments, or those so equally divided by Tribes; but (as in Prophecies 'tis ordinary) a certain number for an uncertain, and an obscure representation made: And perhaps all that is to be understood by, or concluded from this number, is no more but the demonstration of the truth of what Christ had said, in answer to the question, εἰ ὀλίγοι Σωζόμενοι; whether the number of the Jewes which should escape were, in proportion to the others, a small or great number. For there is advise to them of entring in at the streight gate; and so also the Prophet's frequent mention of the καταλειμμα the remnant that should escape, doth demonstrate, that of the Jewes there should not be found many in proportion which should be delivered from this wrath to come, by escaping out of that wicked generation. For though Christ after his own ascent left his Apostles to preach over all the cities of Judæa (to rescue them yet, if it were possible) before this vengeance should break out upon them; yet it seems by his own prediction Luk. 18. 8. that after all this there should be found but little faith, that is, few believers, ὐπὸ τῆ γῆ in the land of Judæa, at the time of the Son of man's coming in judgment upon this people; few of that nation would sincerely repent and come in and adhere to him. There were indeed many of that nation which received the faith, three thousand converted at one sermon of S. Peter's, Act. 2. 41. and καθ' ἡμέραν, (as 'tis there said ver. 47.) every day there was a proportionable addition of them, and so the Bishop of Jerusalem tells Paul, Act. 21. 20. that there were many myriads of believing Jewes there. And Eusebius, mentioning Justus the third Bishop of Jerusalem, saith, that he was one of μύριοι ὅσοι ἐν πεπιστεύκασι the so many myriads of Jewes that believed in Christ at that time, l. 3. c. λε'. (and accordingly the number which is here said to be sealed, comes to above fourteen myriads, which is no small number.) But yet of all these it must be observed, First, that many of the believers, being also zealous for the law, Act. 21. 20. fell out with the Apostles and Christianity it self when it came in competition with the Mosaical observances, and fell off to the Jewish and Gnostick part, when the persecutions fell upon the orthodox Christians, and accordingly were after destroyed with the unbelievers at this coming of Christ. Secondly, these many were yet few comparatively, or in proportion to the farre greater number which held out obdurate, or else, as temporary professors, fell off again in time of persecution for the faith. And this will appear to be very fitly expres'd here by this number of an hundred fourty & four thousand. For, for the multitude of that people, we may make some guesse at it, 1. by the account which Cestius brought Nero. He, when he had that Prefecture, being willing to give Nero an advertisement of the strength of that nation (because Nero so contemn'd it) labour'd to make use of the High-priest's Arithmetick to that purpose, and he did it thus. At the feast of the Passeover they numbred the sacrifices that were brought to Jerusalem at that time, and found them to be 255600. Now of those Paschal sacrifices it must be remembred, that each of them was eaten by a society, consisting perhaps of twenty, but at least of ten persons. At the proportion of ten to a sacrifice the number of those that did partake of these sacrifices must be 2556000. 2dly, it must be remembred also, that none had to do in those sacrifices but those which were pure and clean at that time, and therefore besides this number of these that did partake of them, it must be resolved that there was a very great number more which did not partake; all the leprous, all the women that were under any pollution, all the men to whom any thing in like manner had befaln in the night, all that were under any infection, &c. these were excluded from that former number, & in the account must be added to it: & then 'twill appear what a small number this was of 144000. out of all Judæa, in proportion to the whole people at that time, not above a thirtieth part at the highest valuation imaginable, perhaps a yet farre more disproportionable number. Here if it be demanded, why the tribe of Dan is not numbred among the tribes, and Levi is; the answer for Levi will be clear, That though that tribe had no part in the division of the land, & so could not be numbred there, yet in Christ their portion was as good as any, and therefore were not here to be omitted. As for the tribe of Dan, it may be, because long before that time that tribe was either destroyed or brought very low, say the Jewes; and so indeed it appears that it was not numbred among the rest of the Tribes, in 1 Chron. 2. or the following Chapters.

e. Σωτηρία

V. 10. Salvation] Σωτηρία salvation is the word which most properly signifies this deliverance of them that are said to be sealed, that is, of the penitent Jewes, or sincere orthodox Christians, Σωζόμενοι the saved, or καταλειμμα the remnant, (see Rom. 11. 26. and Note on Rom. 13. b.) and then the meaning of Σωτηρία τῷ Θεῷ salvation to God will be obvious, the imputing this deliverance to God, acknowledging it his special act, giving him all the praise and honour of it.

CHAP. VIII.

Paraphrase.

1. AND when he had opened the seventh seal, there was a silence in heaven about the space of half an hour.]

a.

1. And after these six rolls and seals c. 6. containing the several previous judgments that were to fall on the unbelieving Jewes, and the prodigies foregoing, and predictions of utter destruction that should fall upon them; follows now the seventh roll and seal, and on the opening of that there was a representation ration of the ſervice in the Temple at the time of offering incenſe. For firſt I perceived an univerſal ſilence for half an hour, that is, the people praying by themſelves ſilently in the court (as they are wont to doe, while the high prieſt is offering in the ſanctuary.)

a. 2. And the ſeven Angels or officers that waited on God, chap. 1. 4. like ſo many prieſts in the Temple, ſounded their trumpets.

2. And I ſaw the ſeven Angels which ſtood before God; and to them were given ſeven a trumpets.]

a. 3, 4. And another Angel, as the high prieſt, offered up the incenſe with which the people's prayers are ſuppoſed to aſcend to God. By this ſignifying the prayers of all faithfull people, perſecuted by theſe obdurate Jewes, to have come to God's ears, and to have found admiſſion there.

3. And another Angel came and ſtood at the altar, having a a golden cenſer; and there was given unto him much incenſe, that he ſhould * offer it with the prayers of all ſaints upon the golden altar which was before the throne.

b. 5. And as an effect or conſequent of that, that is, of that perſecution, and their prayers for deliverance (not for this vengeance) it is, that the Angel fills his cenſer with fire from the altar of burnt-offerings, that is, with the wrath of God (ſo oft expreſt in the Prophets by fire) and that wrath conſuming, (ſuch as the fire that conſumed the burnt-ſacrifice totally) and caſt it upon all Judæa; and the effects of that were voices, and thunders, (that is, noiſe of thunders) and lightnings, and earthquake, that is, great, heavie, ſuddain, waſting judgments upon that people, repreſented here in general, but particularly ſet down in the conſequents of the ſounding the ſeven trumpets.

5. And the Angel took the cenſer, and filled it * with fire from the altar, and caſt it † into the earth: and there were b voices, and thundrings, and lightnings, and an earthquake.]

6. Then the ſeven Angels ſet their trumpets to their mouths, every one, and were ready to blow, and did ſo, one after another, each of which hath a ſeveral ſignification in it.

6. And the ſeven Angels, which had the ſeven trumpets, prepared themſelves to ſound.]

c. d. 7. And when the firſt ſounded, I ſaw falling upon Judæa hail and fire mingled with blood, a fit embleme of ſeditions and commotions, and they fell upon Judæa, and waſted it in a bloody manner: And the obedient meek pious Chriſtians that would not joyn with them in their ſeditious practices, were terribly plunder'd and waſted by them. And this fell heavily upon the Tetrarchate of Abylene (ſee note b. on chap. 7.) as well as upon Judæa.

7. The firſt Angel ſounded, and there * followed hail and c fire mingled with blood, and they were caſt upon the † earth: *and the third part of trees was burnt up, and all d green graſſe was burnt up.]

c. e. 8. And upon the ſecond Angels ſounding there was another repreſentation of a great multitude of the ſame or like ſeditious perſons, riſing in Galilee, and the ſuppreſſing of them coſt a great deal of blood, conſumed a great multitude of Galilæans,

8. And the ſecond Angel ſounded, and as it were a great mountain burning with e fire was caſt into the ſea; and the e third part of the ſea became blood.]

9. Made a great deſtruction of men, and vaſtation of the moſt eminent cities there: ſee note e.

9. And the third part of the creatures which were in the ſea, and had life, died; and the third part of the ſhips were deſtroyed.]

c. f. 10, 11. And upon the ſounding of the third, an eminent perſon taking upon him to be a Captain among them, and drawing many after him, raiſed a ſedition in the leſſer cities and towns of Galilee: ſee note e. And this ſedition was a bitter pernicious one to thoſe that joyned in it, brought a force from the Romans, ſlew a great multitude more in thoſe parts of Galilee.

10. And the third Angel ſounded, and there fell a great ſtarre from heaven, c burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers, and upon the fountains of waters:

11. And the name of the ſtarre is called f Wormwood, and the third part of the waters became wormwood, and many men died of the waters, becauſe they were made bitter.]

g. 12. And upon the ſounding of the fourth, I ſaw the repreſentation of a great judgment falling upon the holy city, a ſiege and attempt on Jeruſalem it ſelf.

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a. Σιγὴ ὡς ἡμίωρον

V. 1. Silence in heaven] The manner of offering of incenſe is here deſcribed by way of viſion, the High-prieſt offering it upon the Θυμιατήριον within the Temple, the Prieſts ſhouting and blowing with the Trumpet, and the people mean-while praying without by themſelves, every one ſilently in the court; which prayers of theirs are ſuppoſed to go up to God with the incenſe, v. 4. (a deſcription of this ſee Note on Luk. 1. 10. e.) Theſe prayers of the people are here firſt ſet down by the phraſe, σιγὴ ἐν οὐρανῷ, ſilence in heaven for half an houre, the Temple being ſometime expreſs'd by heaven, ſometime by the hoſt of heaven, that is, the Sun, Moon, and Starres (ſee v. 12.) and the ſilence there being the private prayer of the people in the court, Luk. 1. 10, and the time of half an houre being the ſpace that thoſe prayers uſed to continue, while the Prieſt continued within at the Altar in the Temple, and after which he uſed to come out, and pronounce the bleſſing on the people, and diſmiſſe them, but till then they ſtayed and prayed, ſee Luk. 1. 21. And if beſide this primary and literal, any ſecondary myſticall ſenſe of this phraſe, ſilence in heaven about half an houre, need to be obſerved, it may not unfitly be this, that it denote a ſhort amazement in the faithful perſevering Chriſtians, joyned with an awful reverence of the Divine Majeſty, and compaſſion of their native countrey, upon the apprehenſion of the calamities now to be inflicted. Theſe might juſtly provoke a ſadneſſe and an amazement. But then the conſideration of God's glory, ariſing out of this his juſtice upon the impenitent, and alſo of the merciful deliverance of the faithful, not only from this miſery, but even by means of this miſery, (the deſtruction of the perſecutors being the releaſe of the perſecuted) theſe make the amazement and compaſſion not to remain long, and ſo the ſilence to be for a ſhort ſpace. But this by the way, as a deſcant, not an interpretation. Then next, the trumpetting of the Prieſts, the ſonnes of Aaron, Eccluſ 50. 16. is here expreſs'd by the ſeven trumpets given to the ſeven Angels, v. 2. then the High-Prieſt's offering the incenſe is deſcribed by the other Angel having the golden Cenſer, &c. v. 3. And all this repreſentation was here fitly ſet in the Viſion to ſignifie the prayers of the true faithful Chriſtians, and their acceptance with God, to which is conſequent their deliverance; while all other the impeniten: unbelievers have this vengeance poured down upon them, nay, as an effect of the hearing theſe prayers of the godly (though they prayed not for judgements on the reſt) is the very vengeance on the wicked, who perſecute the godly, (as when Abel's blood is ſaid to cry to heaven for vengeance againſt Cain,) for ſo every where moſt bitterly did the Jewes perſecute the Chriſtians. See Note on c. 2. b. & Gal. 6. 12.

Ἐκβολὴ Σάλπιγγος

Αἷμα τῦ Ἄβελ.

b. Φωναὶ ἢ βρονταὶ ἢ σεισμὸς

V. 5. Voices and thunderings and——] That φωναὶ and βρονταὶ voices and thunders are all one (from the equivocalneſſe of the Hebrew word, which ſignifies both) hath been often ſaid; and ſo here, by theſe two words there is no more meant then either of them would have imported, thunder; to which lightning and earthquake are fitly joined, to ſignifie in general the judgements of God, and vengeance on this people, which are more ſpecially deſcribed and repreſented under the ſounding of the ſeven trumpets that follow, and the productions of each of them. And though the σεισμὸς or earthquake here mentioned, may fitly ſignifie the commotions and ſtirres which are prefigured by the three firſt Angels, (ſee Note c.) yet this verſe here, belonging equally to all that follows, and not peculiarly to thoſe three, will more fitly be interpreted in a general notion comprehenſive of all that is after more particularly deſcribed, (& ſo the earthquake will ſignifie a ſhaking, preparative to a fall and deſolation) then by any ſuch propriety of the earthquake, be thus confined.

c. Πῦρ,

V. 7. Fire] What is ſignified by the ſoundings of the three firſt Angels here, will be gueſs'd by the πῦρ fire, obſervable in each of them here, πῦρ μεμιγμένον ἐν αἵματι fire join'd with the hail precedent, (and then blood ſuperadded to both of them) A mountain burning with fire, v. 8. and a ſtarre burning as it were a lamp, v. 10. Now there is nothing more fitly reſembled by fire, then ſedition or rebellion is. All kind of contention being indeed a fire, & ordinarily ſtyled πύρωσις a combuſtion: but the greater it is, as rebellion is of all others the greateſt, the better it deſerves that title: & this, becauſe as a little fire ſets a whole houſe, a whole kingdome, a whole world on fire, Ja. 3. 5, 6. and beginning from very ſmall ſparks aſcends quickly into a very great flame; ſo ſedition began by one, ſecretly ſteals on and encreaſes, draws whole multitudes unto it, and then, as fire alſo, devoures and deſtroyes where-ever it comes, layes all waſte before it. Now it is obſervable in the Jewiſh records of thoſe times, how full the hiſtory is of two ſorts of moſt violent diſturbers, Στασιασταὶ and Ζηλωταὶ, the Seditious and the Zelots. And though the fire here might properly enough belong to either of theſe, yet it is very fit to make a diſtinction between them in the predictions here, as we know there is in the hiſtories of them. The Στασιασταὶ, or ſeditious, ſtirred up rebellion againſt the Romans, pretending and deſigning to caſt off that yoke of their Conquerors, under the conduct of the ψευδόχριστοι, falſe Chriſts, which undertook to redeem Iſrael out of their ſlavery. But the Ζηλωταὶ Zelots exerciſed tyranny, and all manner of cruelty upon their own countreymen. The latter of theſe were immediately before the ſiege, and in time of the ſiege, and are deſcribed by the Locuſts moſt fitly, c. 9. 3. But the former, the Seditious, which raiſed thoſe ſtirres and tumults, which cauſed the Romans to ſend armies to the ſubduing of them, and ſo were the foundation of that bloody waſting warre, and by ſeveral degrees promoted it, are the ſubject of this part of the Viſion, upon the ſounding of the four firſt Angels. Of this ſort was the Ægyptian Impoſtor mentioned Act. 21. 38. and more largely by Joſephus (Ant. l. 20. c. 6. and De Bell. Jud. l. 2. c. 12. and out of him by Euſebius l. 2. c. 21.) who led after him to mount Olivet thirty thouſand men, meaning from thence to force his paſſage into Jeruſalem, and ſeiſe upon the Roman guards, and poſſeſs himſelf of the city, but was prevented, and diſcomfited by Felix about the end of Claudius's reign. But this is ſomewhat too early to be referr'd to here. That which ſeems moſt probable is, That theſe firſt trumpets in this chapter contain the ſpace of time from the coming of Albinus to his Prefecture, and the Jewes ſufferings under him, then under Geſſius Florus his ſucceſſor, as alſo the ſpoiling of Galilee by Seſtius Gallus Prefect of Syria, to which fitly follows the ſiege, and attempt of Gallus on Jeruſalem, the importance of the ſounding of the fourth trumpet. Under Albinus and Florus the Jewes were much grieved and provoked, and brake out into ſeditions: ſee Joſeph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 9. and De bell. Jud. l. 2. c. 13. and ſo forward. Upon this the warre began in the ſecond year of Florus's Procuratorſhip, in the twelfth of Nero, ſaith Joſephus, Ant. l. 20. in the laſt chapter. This Florus having exerciſed much cruelty on the Jewes in Cæſarea, on occaſion of a ſedition there (De bell. Jud. l. 2. c. 25.) cometh with an army to Jeruſalem, kills a great many, takes and ſcourges many of the beſt and nobleſt of the Jewes, and hangs them up. They of Jeruſalem ſend their complaints to the Governour of Syria, Seſtius Gallus; he ſends Politian to ſee how it fared with them; Politian meets King Agrippa coming from Alexandria, enters Jeruſalem with him, ſees and returns an account to Seſtius Gallus, upon which they hope for relief from him, but in vain. King Agrippa makes an Oration to quiet them, and perſwade them patience, ſubjection to the Romans, and obedience to Florus, till the Emperour ſhould ſend another in his ſtead: Upon this Oration they break out violently againſt the King, reproach him, and drive him out of the city. About the ſame time they ſeiſe upon the fort called Maſſada, kill the Romans, and put in a garriſon of their own; and Eleazar ſon of Annas the high-Prieſt rejects the Emperor's ſacrifices, and refuſeth to offer them according as was wont. The chief men, and all that loved peace, betook themſelves to the upper city; the forces of the Seditious ſeiſed on the lower and the Temple, from thence brake in upon the upper, burnt the high-Prieſt's houſe, and King Agrippa's palace, took the tower call'd Antonia, kill'd all the garriſon of ſouldiers there. At the ſame time there is a great ſlaughter of Jewes in Cæſarea, and the Jewes over all Syria riſe up againſt the people of the countrey, and great ſlaughters are committed on both ſides, Joſ. l. 2. De bell. Jud. c. 13. &c. This occaſions Seſtius his coming with a great army into Paleſtine, and after the deſtroying of ſome towns of the Jewes, he beſieges Jeruſalem at the feaſt of Tabernacles. This ſiege of Jeruſalem being the cloſe of what befell the Jewes, by reaſon of the Seditious, may moſt fitly be reſolved on to be the interpretation of the ſmiting the third part of the Sun, Moon, and ſtarres, ſo as to darken them, and diminiſh the luſtre both of day and night, which are all but phraſes to ſignifie a preſſure, and a ſad condition which befell Jeruſalem. But becauſe the city was not to be taken by this ſiege, but by the eſpecial providence of God, Seſtius againſt all reaſon, μεγαλοψύχατα ſaith Joſephus, raiſed this ſiege, by that means to give opportunity to the believers to obey Chriſt's directions, Luk. 20. 21. and to fly out of Judæa to the mountains, and withall, to make the judgment far more terrible on the reſt, (by the famine that after followed) then it would have been if it had at this time been taken (as eaſily it might have been) therefore follows in this point of time, moſt fitly, the Angels flying through the midſt of heaven, v. 13. and crying, Wo, wo, wo to the inhabitants of Judæa, by reaſon of the other voices of the trumpets of the three Angels which are ready to ſound. Upon which, ſaith Joſephus, before the coming of the fatal final ſiege, πολλοὶ τῶν ἐπιφανῶν Ἰουδαίων ὥσπερ βαπτιζομένης νεὼς ἀπενήχοντο τῆς πόλεως, many of the eminenter Jewes, as from a ſhip ready to ſink, ſwame out of the city. Thus ſaith Euſebius l. 3. c. 5. that there was an Oracle, or Prophecy, delivered to the δόκιμοι the good men, or Chriſtians, that they ſhould go out of the city before the warre ſhould rage, and go to Pella; and ſo Epiphanius De pond. & menſ. that before the city ſhould be taken by the Romans, μεταχειματίσθησ ὑπ' ἀγγέλε πάντες οἱ μαθηταὶ all the believers were warn'd by an angel (as here it is an angel flying) to go out of the city, which was now ready to be utterly deſtroyed.

d. Ib. Green graſſe] What is here diſtinctly meant by the green graſſe cannot be but conjectured; and that perhaps will be beſt done by comparing it with Ezek. 20. 47. where God's judgements are deſcribed by a fire, (as here) falling and devouring every green tree, and every dry. What is the meaning of this, appears, ch. 21. 3. I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked; where the righteous are evidently deſcribed by the green, as the wicked by the dry tree. Thus Luk. 23. 31. it proverbially ſignifies, If they do theſe things in a green tree, what ſhall be done in a dry? If the righteous ſcape ſo hardly, where ſhall the ungodly and ſinners appear? And the elegance and ſignificancy lying not in that of the tree, but of the greenneſs, that doth as fitly hold in the graſs, as the tree. And thus it is clearly uſed, c. 9. 4. where the graſſe and green thing & tree are oppoſed to thoſe that have not the ſeal of God in their foreheads, and ſo are the righteous oppoſed to the impenitent, and particularly the Chriſtians in Judæa, on whom the violence of theſe tumults and ſeditions fell heavily, as thoſe which were hated by the Jewes, and which would not take up arms with them, and join in their ſeditious practices.

c. V. 8. Third part of the ſea became blood] That the tumults and rebellions of the ſeditious are here repreſented by theſe three firſt Angels, is more manifeſt then what thoſe ſeditions particularly were which are denoted by each of them. Our Saviour ſaith of theſe times, that many ſhould ariſe, and deceive many; and the event hath confirmed it. At every turn ſome or other aroſe and undertook to lead them out, and nothing is to be met with in the ſtories of theſe times but the raiſing of ſeditions among the Jewes, & the coming of the Romans to ſuppreſſe them. And therefore it is not needful to diſtribute theſe ſeveral repreſentations of the three firſt trumpets, and apply them ſeverally, but to underſtand them in groſſe of this matter. Yet ſuppoſing (what hath been ſhew'd, Note b. on c. 7.) that the ſea here (noting the ſea or lake of Tiberias) may ſignifie Galilee, it will be commodious enough to underſtand this of that ſedition raiſed in Galilee, which Veſpaſian was by Nero ſent to quell about the year of Chriſt 69. in the twelfth of Nero. At which time, ſaith Baronius out of Joſephus, he ſubdued the Galileans, Gentem fortiſſimam, totius Palæſtinæ potentiſſimam & munitiſſimam, the moſt valiant, powerfull and beſt fortified countrey of all Paleſtine. Which action of his being ſo conſiderable & remarkable for the ſlaughter of above an hundred thouſand, and the carrying above fourty thouſand Jewes captive, may fitly be here repreſented under the third part of the ſea becoming blood, and the dying of the third part of the creatures, that is, Jewes, in the ſea, that is, of Galilee, and the third part of the ſhips, that is, of the cities, which are to a countrey as ſhips to a ſea, the places wherein men live and traffick, and wherein they are fortified againſt enemies, as by ſhips againſt the violence of the ſea. And this ſlaughter falling upon the whole region of Galilee, and not only on the cities thereof, may probably be meant by the Viſion that follows the ſounding of the third Angel alſo, the ſtarre that burnt, and fell upon the rivers and fountains, which are to the ſea as towns and villages to the cities, and of which a third part became wormwood, v. 11. And if it be neceſſary to define who it was who is deſcribed by the great ſtarre from heaven, burning as it were a lamp, it may fitly be affirmed to be Joſephus the ſon of Mattathias, the leader of thoſe of Jotapata; but this not perſonally, but he and his forces together, who made a very valiant reſiſtance to Veſpaſian's army, but by doing ſo brought great ſlaughters upon them, as is particularly and exactly ſet down by Joſephus, l. 3. De bell. Jud.

e. V. 11. Wormwood] Wormwood is in Scripture ſometimes uſed to expreſſe that which infecteth others, infuſing its bitterneſſe into them; and ſo it may ſignifie any impoſtor that ſeduceth and draws others after him, as any of thoſe ſeditious Captains did to their deſtruction. Sometimes it is uſed to ſignifie any bitter effect, any heavy calamity: and ſo here it may ſignifie alſo theſe tumults of the ſeditious bringing great ſlaughters on Judæa, as appears by Joſephus's ſtory, De Bell. Jud. l. 2. and 3.

g. V. 12. Third part of the ſunne was ſmitten and the——] That the Temple is deſcribed and expreſſed generally in the Scripture by an hoſt, hath been formerly ſhewed, Note on 1 Tim. 1. f. That this hoſt is in Viſions or Prophetical dark repreſentations fitly expreſs'd by the Sun, Moon and ſtarres, will be eaſily conſented to, when we but remember that thoſe are called the hoſt of heaven, and that the Temple is commonly a repreſentation of heaven, and ſometimes repreſented by it (ſee ver. 1.) and accordingly the Chriſtian Church is called the Kingdome of heaven oft-times in the Goſpel. Then that the particulars of Sun, Moon and ſtarres are ſeverally mention'd, rather then the heaven the aggregate body, is by that ordinary manner of ſpeaking among the Hebrews, which expreſſe the whole by enumeration of the ſeveral parts of it (ſee Note on 2 Pet. 3. e.) And ſo here it may poſſibly denote the ſervice of the Temple, which was performed by night, (ye that by night ſtand in the courts of God, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, the watches being then kept) as well as by day, which is here alſo mention'd by νὺξ the night, as well as ἡμέρα the day; which could not ſeverally have been mention'd, had not the Sun for the day, and the Moon and ſtarres for the night, been accordingly mentioned alſo. And if this be it, then when 'tis ſaid, that the third part of theſe was ſmitten, the meaning muſt be, that an heavy diſtreſſe now fell upon the Temple, and the ſervice of God there was ſhrewdly diſturbed by this ſiege, but not (at this part of the Viſion) wholly deſtroyed. But beſides this there is another interpretation, of which the words are more clearly capable, ſo as the Sun ſignifie the Temple, the Moon the City, and the ſtarres all the people, and all together the whole nation, (as in Joſephs prophetick dream, the Sun, Moon and Starres are all the family of Jacob) againſt which here the woes are denounced, v. 13. according to the words in Joſephus, Woe, woe to the city, and the people, and the Temple (see Note h.) And this seems the more probable interpretation. See Mat. 24. Note n.

h. Ἀγγέλου ἑνὸς μεσουρανήματι, καὶ, καὶ, καὶ

V. 13. Wo, wo, wo,] Concerning this Angel flying in the midst of heaven, and crying with a loud voice, καὶ, καὶ, καὶ τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν ὅτι ἐ γῆς, Woe, woe, woe to the dwellers in the land, the story is remarkable in Josephus (and out of him in Eusebius l. 3. c. 8.) which he sets down as a prodigy, presaging that destruction of the Jewes: There was, saith he, one Jesus, Sonne of Ananias, a countrey-man of mean birth, four years before the warre against the Jewes, at a time when all was in deep peace and tranquillity, who coming up to the feast of tabernacles, according to the custome, began on a sudden to cry out, and say, φωνὴ ἀπ' ἀνατολῆς, &c. a voice from the East, a voice from the West, a voice from the four winds, a voice against Jerusalem and the Temple, a voice against bridegrooms and brides, a voice against all the people. Thus he went about all the narrow lanes, crying night and day, and being apprehended and scourged, he still continued the same language under the blowes without any other word. And they on this supposing (as it was) δαιμονιώτερον τὸ κίνημα τάνδρὸς, that it was some divine motion, brought him to the Roman Præfect: and by his appointment being with whips wounded, and his flesh torn to the bones, he neither intreated, nor shed tear, but to every blow, in a most lamentable mournful note, cryed out, αἲ, αἲ, Ἰερουσολύμοις, Wo, woe to Jerusalem. This he continued to do till the time of the siege, seven years together; and at last, to his ordinary note of Wo to the city, the people, the temple, adding, Wo also to me, a stone from the battlements fell down and kill'd him. To this I shall adde no more, but that κατοικοῦντες in the land here being the land of Judæa, the phrase κατοικοῦντες ἐπὶ γῆν inhabitants of the land is as truly agreeable to the Jewes, as καὶ and αἲ are all one also. 'Tis onely farther observable, that these prophetick woes are here said to be three, and those inflicted and brought upon the people by that which is represented by the voices of the trumpets of the three Angels still behind, the first mentioned as past, ch. 9. 12. the second and third, ch. 11. 14. see Note on ch. 11. e. And so what is here represented in this part of the Vision is but the setting down of this prophecy, which Jesus the son of Ananias should deliver concerning the judgements, and not the judgements themselves, which follow in the succeeding chapters. And so 'tis more perfectly parallel to that passage out of Josephus and Eusebius, which was a σημεῖον, or prodigie, to fore-signifie that destruction, and not the destruction it self.

1. And upon the sounding of the fifth trumper, I saw him that was before, (c. 8. 10.) the leader of the seditious, or some other that succeeded in his place, and he became a ring-leader of most hellish villanes, which under the title of Zelots did all the mischief imaginable. a.

2. And he opened the bottomelesse pit, and there arose a smoak out of the pit, as the smoak of a great *furnace; and the Sun and the aire were darkned by reason of the smoak of the pit.]

2. And they marched up to Jerusalem, and seised upon the temple there, kill'd the high Priests, and the rest of the Priests, and plunder'd the city.

† into the land εἰς τὸν γῆν * scorpions have power of the land ἐξουσίαν ὡς σκορπίοι τῆς γῆς † laid

3. And there came out of the smoak Locusts †upon the earth, and unto them was given power, as the *Scorpions of the earth have power.]

3. And these became as Locusts, great wasters and devourers, and were in other respects peculiarly like Locusts, which having no King, goe out by bands, Prov. 30. 27. and such were these, a company of giddy wilde people, in great numbers, harassing and devouring all.

4. And it [b] was †commanded them that they should not hurt the grasse of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but onely those men which have not the seal of God in their foreheads.]

4. But by God's providence disposing for the good of his servants, so it was, that this judgement of the Zelots fell not upon the Christians, (see note on c. 8. d.) but onely upon the Jews themselves (that were as contrary to Christianity as any) onely because they were not of the faction of those Zelots. b.

5. And to them it was given that they should not kill them, but that they should be [c] tormented five moneths: and their torment was as the torment of a Scorpion, when he striketh a man.]

5. And the judgement that fell upon the Jewes by these men, was not so much a down-right killing (though that also befel Annas and the Priests, see note a.) as plundering and pillaging and undoing them, and tearing their necessary food from the best citizens of Jerusalem, and thus continuing for five moneths space, till Titus came to besiege the city, by which means the siege became much the more cruell and intolerable when it came: and so this was most fitly compared to scorpions, as the whipping with them is the most cruel and terrible infliction, much more cruell then any other scourge, 1 King. 12. 11. c.

6. And in those dayes shall men [d] seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to dye, and death shall flee from them.]

* as it were crowns like unto gold ὡς στέφανοι ὅμοιοι χρυσῷ

7. And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared to battell; and on their heads * were as it were crowns of gold; and their faces were as the faces of men.]

7. And these devouring wasters, the Zelots, were in appearance like warriers, and pretended themselves to be redeemers of the people, and counter-conquerours of the Romans (which is meant by their Crowns like unto gold, false Princes, false Patriots) and they took upon them to be Saviours and Benefactors, saith Josephus, would look like men, kind and friendly, when they wrought all this ruine to their brethren.

8. And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.]

8. And all this while these that thus devoured and preyed upon all they came near, and so were most terrible to those that could not resist, were most base cowardly persons, these great plunderers, far from having any manlinesse or valour in them.

9. And they had breast-plates as it were breast-plates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battell.]

9. And they were hard-hearted, compassionless people, and in great troops like grasse-hoppers or locusts they flew about, and made all places resound with their noise, and at the newes of them, Joel 2. 5.

10. And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five moneths.]

10. And as scorpions wound and sting with their tails, so they coming in with false pretences of Saviours and Benefactors, when they depart, plunder and carry all along with them, and so they continue till the time of Titus siege v. 5. just five moneths space.

11. And though they diſclaim having any King over them but God, and upon that c. ſcore pretend to riſe up againſt the Romans, and though like locuſts v. 3. they goe out by bands having no King to conduct them, yet their cruelty and unmercifulneſſe in deſtroying ownes them to have a King, who rules among them, and puts them upon all this villany, Satan that delights in nothing but deſtroying.

11. And they had a King over them, which is the Angel of the bottomleſs pit, whoſe name in the Hebrew tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hath his name c Apollyon.]

13. And upon the ſounding of the ſixth trumpet of the ſixth Angel, I heard a voice from the altar of incenſe, where the prayers of the Saints or conſtant Chriſtians are ſaid to be offered up, c. 8. 3. noting that the prayers of the exil'd Chriſtians (that to avoid this deſtruction were departed to Pella, and many other places out of the land, and prayed for liberty to return to their countrey again) were come up before God, and in mercy to them the ſiege of Jeruſalem, that now followes, was haſtned.

13. And the ſixth Angel ſounded, and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar, which is before God,]

14. And methought that voice ſaid to this ſixth Angel, f. that he ſhould take off that reſtraint cauſed by the preſent affaires at Rome, and by the great changes there, which detained Veſpaſian from ſetting upon Jeruſalem according to his purpoſe.

14. Saying to the ſixth Angel which had the trumpet, Looſe the foure Angels which are bound † in the great river f Euphrates.]

15. And ſo they were let looſe from that reſtraint, that is, permitted by the condition of affaires to march into Judæa, for which they were before ready, but had by the providence of God interpoſing ſome hindrances, as he thought fit, been kept for this point of time, to a day (as we ſay) which God hath determined as moſt agreeable to all his purpoſes of ſaving ſome, and deſtroying the reſt.

15. And the four Angels were looſed, which were prepared for an houre and a day and a moneth and a year, for to ſlay the third part of men.]

16. And methought their armies of horſe-men were preſently muſtered, and the number of them found to be infinite and unimaginable, the Syrians, Arabians, Itureans, &c. in vaſt numbers aſſociating themſelves unto them.

16. And the number of the army of the horſe-men were two hundred thouſand thouſand, and I heard the number of them.]

17. And theſe troops of horſe or horſe-men were repreſented to me with breaſtplates ſhining like flaming fire, and their aſpect moſt terrible, like that of Lions gaping, breaſtplates and heads, were very formidable.

17. And thus I ſaw the horſes in the viſion, and them that ſate on them, having g breaſtplates * of fire, and of Jacinth, and brimſtone: and the heads of the horſes were as the heads of lions; and out of their mouths iſſued fire and ſmoke and brimſtone.]

18. And a multitude of the Jewes were killed by them in their paſſage through the countrey.

18. By theſe three was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the ſmoak, and by the brimſtone, which iſſued out of their mouths.]

19. And the rear of this army was as terrible as the front, came after waſting and deſtroying, as the front had done v. 18. And ſo the whole army was like that kind of ſerpent which hath an head in the taile, and wounds as dangerouſly with that as with the other.

19. For their power is in their mouth and in their tails: for their tails were like unto ſerpents, and had heads, and with them they doe hurt.]

20. And though many of the inhabitants were deſtroyed by this meanes, yet were not they that eſcaped, nor the Gnoſticks among them, that had aſſociated with the Jewes againſt the Chriſtians (and were many of them now deſtroyed with them) reformed by all this; they yet repented not of their Idol-worſhip, which they took for an indifferent thing, but rather grew worſe and worſe,

20. And the reſt of the men which were not killed by theſe plagues, yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they ſhould not worſhip devils, and idols of gold, and ſilver, and braſſe, and ſtone, and of wood, which neither can ſee, nor hear, nor walk:]

21. And went on impenitently in all their bloodineſſe that they had been guilty of upon the Chriſtians, their ſorceries, (ſee note on Gal. 5. d) yea and their abominable uncleanneſſes and rapines; they were no whit the better for all that had yet befall'n them.

21. Neither repented they of their murthers, nor of their ſorceries, nor of their fornication, nor of their thefts.]

Annotations on Chap. IX.

a. Ἀπὸ παρέλυσεως

V. 1. A Starre fall'n] For the underſtanding of this enſuing chapter, and the interpretation of the other parts of this Viſion upon the ſounding of theſe other Angels, it will be uſefull to take the riſe from the ἀστὴρ ἐκ τῦ ὐρανῦ πεπλωκὼς the ſtarre which had fallen from heaven, for ſo πεπλωκὼς ſignifies in the Præter, not Preſent tenſe. This in all reaſon muſt relate to ch. 8. v. 10. where we read ἔπεσεν ἐκ τῦ ὐρανῦ ἀστὴρ μέγας, there fell from heaven a great ſtarre: who that was, was defined moſt probably ch. 8. Note e. viz. the army of the σασιασαὶ or ſeditious under Joſeph the ſon of Mattathias, that defended themſelves againſt Veſpaſian in the city Jotapata. For from theſe ſprang the Ζηλωῆ' Zelots, ſo much ſpoken of in Joſephus, the forerunners and haſtners of the woes foretold in the end of the laſt chapter, and which made the latter ſiege ſo extremely miſerable, and are now the ſubject of the Viſions of this chapter. For it is briefly obſervable out of Joſephus, that (as Galilee had the firſt and principal of Chriſt's miracles afforded them, ſo) that region was to have their firſt part in the deſtruction. This was done in a moſt ſad manner by Veſpaſian in the 12th of Nero, (ſee ch. 8. Note e.) and finiſh'd at the taking of Jotapata. At which time they that eſcaped the Romans ſword, ran in vaſt numbers to Jeruſalem, & being gotten into the city helped to devour the proviſion laid in for the maintenance of the city, & not only ſo, but plunder'd them in a moſt horrible manner. Theſe coming under the pretence of great zeal to the law of God, & cuſtoms of their countrey, were called Zelots; & theſe betook themſelves into the Temple as a place beſt fortified; and the High-prieſt Annas ſtirring up the people againſt them, great ſlaughters were committed on both ſides. The Zelots called the Edumæans to their aid: Annas commands the gates to be ſhut againſt them: they getting in in a tempeſtuous night join with the Zelots, and both of them together kill a great multitude, Annas himſelf, & the reſt of the Prieſts, & caſt their bodies out in the ſtreet without burial. And at length the Edumæans, diſliking and deteſting the cruelty of the Zelots, returned to their own countrey.

The

The Zelots they continue to make havock, pillage and deſtroy, ſet guards, that none might go out of the city, & ſo beſiege and ſhut them up before the enemy comes, and in fine, are the foreſt enemies to the city of Jeruſalem that they ever felt, and cauſed the ſiege that attended to be then much more cruel, the famine more ſharp, and the deſtruction more terrible, then it could have been if Seſtius Gallus had continued the ſiege and taken them. And to make the condition yet more unhappy, whilſt theſe Zelots raged ſo within the city, the Sicarii were as unruly without; and ſo as it was moſt unſafe to remain within, becauſe of the Zelots, ſo in caſe they made any ſhift to get out of it, they fell into the hands of the cut-throats, under John, who deſiring to ſet himſelf up for a King, ſpoil'd and ſlaughter'd all, and at laſt was by the Zelots advanced and ſet over them.

b. Ἐῤῥέθη ἐκείνοις. V. 4. Was commanded them] That ἐῤῥέθη it was ſaid is a proper word to ſignifie a command of God's, appears by Mat. 5. where the precepts of the Decalogue are ſet down in this phraſe, ἐῤῥέθη ἀρχαίοις, it was ſaid to them of old. Now all the wiſe and gracious acts of God's providence, in protecting his ſervants, and reſtraining the malice of their enemies, is the moſt properly thus expreſs'd, his will being of the ſame force to produce the effects as his commands ought to be. And accordingly that is here meant, that by God's wiſe diſpoſal ſo it was, that in the judgments that fell upon Jeruſalem by the Zelots, the Chriſtians ſuffered not: For upon Seſtius Gallus's raiſing his ſiege we know the Chriſtians went out of Jeruſalem, and fled to Pella, (ſee Note on ch. 8. c.) and ſo when the Zelots came to Jeruſalem, immediately before the ſiege by Titus, the Chriſtians were gone out of their way, and all their violence fell on the unbelieving Jewes, which accordingly continued there. And theſe are expreſs'd by the phraſe, οἵτινες οὐκ ἔχουσι τὴν σφραγῖδα τοῦ θεοῦ Χρίστου, as many as had not the ſeal of God on their foreheads (ſee ch. 7. c.) as the Chriſtians by χόρτος, and πᾶν χλωρὸν, and δένδρον, the graſs, and every green thing, and every tree, (ſee Note on ch. 8. d.)

c. Βασανιζόμενοι. V. 5. Tormented] The famine, which the plundering of the Zelots was to produce, is here very fitly expreſs'd by βασανίζειν, being tortured, as that is oppoſite to ἀποκτείνειν killing, becauſe famine, as the torture, is a lingring racking death, doth not diſpatch men eaſily or quickly, as the ſword doth, but (as it were breaking one limb after another) tearing of the fleſh from the bones, conſuming and emaciating them. And indeed of the time of the ſiege, it is literally affirmed by Euſebius, out of Joſephus, that theſe Zelots or Seditious Jewes in Jeruſalem, tearing every man's victuals from him, δεινὰς βασάνων ὁδοὺς ἐπινόουν πρὸς ἔρευναν τροφῆς, l. 3. c. 6. invented cruel ways of torture to finde out food, when it was concealed from them by the poſſeſſors, or on conceit that it was concealed where indeed it was not. And he mentions ſome of their inventions of torment, Ὀφθοῖς ἐμφερόντων τοῖς ἀθλίοις τὰ αἰδοῖα τοῦ πόρου, ῥάβδοις ὑ ὀξείαις ἀναπείροντες τὰς ἕδρας, &c. A moſt horrible cruelty not fit to be tranſlated: and, ſaith he, τὰ φεικτὰ κ ἀκοαῖς, 'twas terrible even to hear what ſome men ſuffered, to make them confeſſe but one loaf of bread, when they had no more, perhaps not that. Theſe he ordinarily ſtyles there οἱ βασανισταὶ, the tormentors; and ſo that makes this repreſentation here the more proper, and fit to expreſſe this matter of their plundering.

d. Ζητήσουσι θάνατον. V. 6. Seek death] That which is here ſaid, that men ſhall ſeek death, and ſhall not finde it, is a moſt proper expreſſion of a lingring tormenting death, and ſo of a famine, (which is moſt eminently ſuch) and of ſuch vaſtations and plunderings which leave men life, but nothing to ſupport or ſuſtain it; and ſuch was the effect of the cruelty of theſe Zelots at this time. The very thing here ſaid is after, in the time of the ſiege, ſet down by way of ſtory or relation of the fact by Euſebius, l. 3. c. 6. out of Joſephus. That when the σικάριοι, or ſeditious, were ſo laviſh of their ſwords, that they would kill men, runne them through, only ἐπὶ πεῖρα τοῦ σιδήρου, to try their ſwords, or to keep them in ure; yet τοὺς ἰκετεύοντας χρῆσαί σφιν δεξιὰν κ ξίφος, τῷ λιμῷ καλέλιπον ὑπερηφανοῦντες, when any being ready to famiſh deſired them to lend them their hand and their ſword, to put them out of their pain, they through arrogance and ſcorn of their miſeries rejected their beſeechings, and left them to the famine to uſe them more cruelly.

e. Ἀπολλύων. V. 11. Apollyon] That Apollyon here ſignifies the Devil, is apparent by what is affirmed of him in the former part of this verſe, that it is the Angel of the bottomleſs pit. And accordingly the famous God of the Heathens called Apello (a word ſo lightly changed from this) muſt be reſolved to be the Devil, this deſtroying Angel, as he is oft called in Scripture, imployed altogether in deſtructions and miſchiefs. To which purpoſe the 12. chap. of lib. 5. of A. Gellius is worth conſidering, where having taken notice of two antient names of Heathen Gods, Dijovis and Vejovis, and having deduced the former from an Original which ſignifies benigne or helpful, he determines the latter to belong to a God, qui non juvandi poteſtatem, ſed vim nocendi haberet, which had not the power of helping, but the force of doing miſchief; adding that the image of this God is found to have Arrowes in the hand, prepared for ſlaughters and deſtructions; & therefore Apollo is thought to be ſignified by that title. To which purpoſe, ſaith he, it is conſiderable that that Virgil, a man very greatly skilled in antient knowledge, doth in his Georgicks deprecate Numina læva, the unlucky, or hurtful deities; ſignifying thereby quandam vim eſſe ejuſmodi Deorum in lædendo magis quam juvando potentem, that ſuch kind of Gods had the virtue, or faculty, of hurting, but not of helping any; and of them Apollo is the onely one named there, by that Poet, who muſt be ſacrificed to, to avert any evils from them.

Numina læva ſinunt, auditque vocatus Apollo)

f. Εὐφράτης. V. 14. Euphrates] What is here meant by Euphrates is ſomewhat uncertain. It may ſignifie literally that known river; for it is ſaid by Joſephus l. 5. c. 6. that the Syrian Legions of the Roman army lay as far as Euphrates; and Philo in his Embaſſy mentions στρατόπεδα πρὸς Εὐφράτῃ the armies reaching to Euphrates. But in the ſtyle of theſe Viſions it may alſo ſignifie ſomewhat elſe: For the River Euphrates we know, is that which runnes through Babylon, and ſo that great river is fitly ſet to denote that city, as we ordinarily ſinde Tyber to be uſed for Rome, the Sea for Galilee the Region which it belongs to, and many the like. Now that Babylon in theſe Viſions ſignifies Rome heathen, will be hereafter ſhewn, Note on c. 18. a. And ſo ἐπὶ Εὐφράτῃ may ſignifie (not in, but) at, or abont Rome, which being the Seat of the Empire, the great changes and affairs concerning the Empire are fitly expreſs'd by this phraſe; and ſo we ſhall ſee Euphrates uſed c. 16. 12. for the city of Rome. Next it muſt be remembred, that the Angels being the Officers and Miniſters of God, to execute his will, to inflict puniſhments, &c. the Roman commanders under Veſpaſian, that were ſuch inſtruments in deſtroying Jeruſalem, are accordingly call'd his Angels. And ſo frequently this deſtruction of Jeruſalem is expreſs'd by Chriſt's coming with his Angels, viſiting with or by theſe officers or inſtruments of his. And of theſe, it ſeems, there were four principal ones; or elſe this certain number is uſed for an uncertain, as the fourth and third part of the land are not to be thought that proportion exactly meaſured or numbred.

Δεδεμένοι Laſtly, the binding of theſe Angels muſt ſignifie the detaining or ſtopping of them from doing that work. And ſo the plain meaning of this verſe will be, that upon occaſion of the affairs of the Roman Empire, the Roman armies were ſtopt a while from their purpoſe of beſieging Jeruſalem. And thus it is evident in the ſtory. When the Zelots, after Veſpaſian's ſubduing of Galilee, fled riotouſly into Jeruſalem, and wrought thoſe miſchiefs there, (ſet down in the former part of this Chapter,) and Veſpaſian ſeeing the Jewes by their civil broiles deſtroy one another, he made no great haſt to ſet about the ſiege, till ſome multitudes that fled out of Jeruſalem came and beſought him, that he would in meer pity come and take them, and reſcue them from this ſcourge of Scorpions, the Zelots. Veſpaſian upon this prepared to go up againſt Jeruſalem with all his forces; but (which is the thing here foretold) hearing of the death of the Emperor, deferr'd this expedition, ſaith Joſephus De bell. Jud. l. 5. c. 6. expecting to ſee how the Empire would be diſpoſed of. And not only ſo, but Mutianus Preſident of Syria, and a chief Promoter of Veſpaſian to the Empire, went out from Syria with a great body of horſe and foot into Italy, and came to Rome with them the next day after Vitellius was conquered and ſlain; ſee Joſephus De bell. l. 5. c. μα'. Titus alſo and Agrippa were ſent to Rome, ſaith * Baronius, Anno Ch. 70. in fine. And ſo Tacitus as well as Joſephus ſaith that Titus was ſent by Veſpaſian from Syria to Rome, to congratulate Galba's promotion to the Empire, and receive directions about Judæa; but hearing of his death as he went, returned to Syria. And in brief, the changes being ſo great and many after the death of Nero, and no ſettlement in the Empire, (Galba, Otho, Vitellius coming all to the Empire and parting with it again in ſo ſhort time) it is Joſephus's obſervation, that the Roman armies remained in ſuſpence what to do, (that is the meaning of δεδεμένοι bound here) and neglected their affairs in Judæa, thinking it unſeaſonable to attempt other nations when there were ſuch diſquiets at home, Joſ. De bell. l. 5. c. κη'. But within a while, Vitellius being kill'd, and his party overcome, Veſpaſian is choſen Emperor, being then at Alexandria in Ægypt: And the Empire being ſoon confirmed on him, he immediatly betakes himſelf to the finiſhing his buſineſſe in Judæa, having ſeaſonably concluded his affairs in Ægypt, and ſo ſends his ſon Titus with ſelect forces to beſiege Jeruſalem; which is here meant by the looſing of the four Angels that were bound, that is, detained by that former occaſion. Upon which here follows immediately (as it did in the hiſtory) the marching of the Army toward Jeruſalem.

Λύσον τὸς τέσσαρας ἀγγέλους

g. Θώρακας πύρινοι. V. 17. Breaſt-plates of fire] What is here ſaid of the breaſt-plates, or armour, and the ſeveral colours of it, may be thought to be interpretable literally, in reſpect of the ſeveral nations of which this army conſiſted, diſtinguiſh'd purpoſely by the colour of their armour, for ſuch wales of differencing the ſouldiers are ordinary and uſeful in armies: or it may poſſibly denote no more then that they were of ſteel, which is obſerved to caſt divers colours. But yet thirdly, theſe three colours may be ſet (as in prophetick ſtyle it is ordinary) only to deſcribe a terrible appearance: for ſuch is beſt, and moſt commonly repreſented by a flaming conſuming fire (as when God in his judgments is ſo called, Heb. 12. 29. and his Angels as executioners of his wrath are called a flaming fire, Heb. 1. 7.) and ſuch doe theſe three colours make up, the lower part being of the colour of amber, ch. 1. 15. and here πύρινος, fire-colour. the next part of the flame, blew. and the uppermoſt of all, pale, or of the colour of brimſtone (ſee Note on c. 1. f.) And ſo in the greateſt flames 'tis ordinary to be ſeen. And then it is agreeable to the Hebrew ſtyle, to expreſſe one thing by the enumeration of the ſeverals that make it up (ſee 2 Pet. 3. d.) the flaming fire by theſe three parts of it. And ſo this may be the meaning of the whole phraſe, This army, the captains whereof are called Angels, v. 14. came in a moſt dreadful, formidable appearance, like a flaming conſuming fire. And to the ſame purpoſe all the following expreſſions may be expounded. Their heads were like the heads of lions; which ſure ſignifies no more, but they looked very terribly, as we know lions heads are the moſt frightful part of that dreadful beaſt, eſpecially when they gape: to which the next part of the deſcription may relate, Out of their mouthes cometh out fire, and ſmoak, and brimſtone, that is, flaming fire again; for the ſmoak here is all one with the blew above (the colour of ſmoak) as the fire and brimſtone are again repeated here. As a lion gaping or yawning from his prey, and the blood of it about his mouth, looks very diſmally, the bloodineſſe and fierceneſſe of his countenance is as if a flaming fire, or fire and ſmoak and brimſtone, came out of his mouth. 'Tis not impoſſible indeed that by the likeneſſe of fire and ſmoak and brimſtone coming out of their mouthes might be ſignified fire-balls, or granado's, or ſuch like inſtruments of firing cities, then in uſe: and ſo ſaith Valerius Flaccus of Titus beſieging Jeruſalem,

Κεφαλαὶ ὡς λέοντων

ἐκ τῶν στομάτων αὐτῶν πῦρ &c. Καπνὸς

πῦρ καὶ θεῖον

Spargentémque faces, & in omni turre furentem, that he threw fire-brands, or balls, into the city, and ſet the towers on fire. But this part of the Viſion being the ſetting down the march of the army, not yet ſet down before the city, or diſplaying their fire-balls; the phraſes will not ſo probably be appliable to that, and ſo may perhaps ſignifie no more then the terribleneſs of their appearance as they paſt: And then to that alſo may belong all that follows; as firſt, that by theſe three plagues, ver. 18. the third part of men were killed, that is, by this fire and ſmoak and brimſtone going out of their mouths, that is, by this formidable, diſmall army, as by a flaming fire, conſiſting of thoſe three parts, a great multitude of the Jewes were ſlain in their paſſage through the countrey. And ſo again v. 19. Their power is in their mouth, and in their tailes. For though it is poſſible again, that by the mouth and the taile may be meant the horſe-men and, for expedition ſake, a foot-man took up behind every one of them (to which will alſo be appliable that which follows, that their tailes had heads, and with them they doe hurt, that is, theſe foot-men ſet down from the horſes were able to fight alſo, and indeed were the moſt miſchievous;) yet it is very reaſonable to expound that alſo more groſsly, that this army cannot better be expreſs'd then by a poiſonous killing ſerpent, that particularly call'd amphisbæna, which hath an head at each end, and ſo can equally wound by either: Which being applied to the whole army, and not to each horſe-man in it, will denote the two parts of the army, a front and a rear; the former before deſcribed, v. 17. 18. very terrible in their march, and making great ſlaughters; and then both of them together, v. 19. that their taile is as formidable as their head, their rear as their front, and in reſpect of both together they are like that ſerpent which hath another head in the taile, and can doe as much hurt with that as with the other. What is the particular notation of each of theſe phraſes, may be ſomewhat uncertain, whether either of theſe, or whether yet ſome other rather; but for the main or all together there is little doubt but they make up a deſcription of the terribleneſs of that army in their march toward Jeruſalem, and the great ſlaughters on the Jewes by the way thither: and that is all that is neceſſary to be known for the underſtanding the Viſion.

Paraphraſ.

1. AND I ſaw another mighty Angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud, and a rainebow was upon his head, and his face was as it were the ſunne, and his feet as pillars of fire.]

1. Upon the multiplying of theſe ſinnes c. 9. 21. and impenitent continuing in all their provocations, it was juſt with God to proceed, as now he appeared to me in the viſion to doe; For me thought I ſaw another Angel of ſpeciall dignity, (ſuch as ch. 5. 2. and ch. 18. 21. deſigned and uſed for eminent imployments) coming down in a cloud from heaven (as Angels are wont to doe on Gods meſſages) having a rainbow on his head, either to denote a glorious appearance, as Ezech. 1. 28. or perhaps moreover (ſee c. 4. 3.) Gods covenant of mercy and deliverance, made with all his faithfull ſervants, who were now to receive benefit by what ſhould fall out (ſee c. 9. 13.) but his looks or countenance were moſt terrible, and his feet, denoting his wayes and preſent deſigned actions, were moſt ſad and deſtructive, the fire noting deſtruction, and the pillars the fixtneſſe of the decree, the immutableneſſe of it.

2. And he had in his hand a little book open, and he ſet his right foot upon the ſea, and his left foot upon the * earth]

* land γῆν

2. And he had in his hand a roll opened, and ſo ready to be read, wherein was contained a ſentence againſt the whole nation of the Jewes, (ſee note on ch. 7. 6.) a decree come out from God of utter deſtruction: and this was the completion of that prophecy, wherein 'twas ſaid that Chriſt ſhould make his enemies his footſtool, that is, ſubdue and bring them down, and that here expreſs'd by this Angels ſetting both his feet on them.

3. And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth: and when he had cried, a ſeven thunders uttered their voices.]

3. And this Angel roared terribly, as a Lion doth roar after his prey, when he is in ſight of it: and upon that, as upon a call, the ſeven thunders uttered their voices, that is, me thought I heard ſeven, that is, many claps of thunder, and voices coming out of them, by which the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by Titus was ſhortly repreſented.

4. And when the ſeven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write: and I heard a voice from heaven ſaying unto me, Seal up thoſe things which the ſeven thunders uttered, and write them not.]

4. And as I had before written what I had ſeen and heard, ſo now I was about to doe, to ſet down what was ſaid by thoſe voices: but I was commanded that I ſhould not doe ſo, but on the other ſide that I ſhould ſhut and ſeal them up, ſignifying them to be too terrible to be revealed, (the ears of every one that heard them would tingle) and therefore fitter to be ſealed and cloſed up in ſilence, then to be recorded or ſet down, (ſuch was this deſtruction by Titus.)

5. And the Angel which I ſaw ſtand upon the ſea, and upon the † earth, lifted up his hand to heaven,]

5. And the Angel ver. 1. lift up his hand to heaven, as a ceremony of ſwearing, Gen. 14. 22. Deut. 32. 40. (proportionably to that which is ſaid of God concerning the provoking Iſraelites, that he ſware in his wrath, they ſhould not enter into his reſt, (that is, that they ſhould die in the wilderneſſe, and not enter into Canaan) or concerning the delivering his people out of Antiochus's hands, Dan. 12. 7.)

6. And ſware by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the ſea, and the things which are therein, that there ſhould be * [b] time no longer;

6, 7. And with an oath by God the creator of all the world, he pronounced the ſentence, that time or delay ſhould no more be, that is, that this execution of God's decree ſhould be no longer deferred, but the deſtruction, ſo long threatned, which when it came, it ſhould be a total utter deſtruction, ſhould now immediately light upon this people: A very great part of it now by Titus, and within a very little while, upon the ſounding of the ſeventh Angel, it ſhould be perfected, and ſo all thoſe prophecies be fulfilled, whereby it had been foretold both by the old prophets, and ſince by the prophets under the New Teſtament, to whom it had been made known by God, though when, or at what point of time, it had never been revealed to any, Mat. 24. 36. Act. 1. 7. and ſo was kept as a myſterie.

7 But in the daies of the voice of the ſeventh Angel, when he ſhall † begin to ſound, the myſterie of God ſhould be finiſhed, as he hath declared to his ſervants the prophets.]

† be ready to ſound μέλλῃ σαλπίζειν

8. And the voice which I heard from heaven ſpake unto me again, and ſaid, Go, and take the little book which is open in the hand of the Angel, which * ſtandeth upon the ſea and upon the † earth.]

8. And that voice that ſpake to me from heaven, v. 4. again ſpake to me, and commanded me to goe to that Angel, ver. 2. and beſeech him to give me the book or roll (wherein that ſentence was written.)

9. And I went unto the Angel, and ſaid unto him, Give me the little book. And he ſaid unto me Take it, and eat it up; and it ſhall make thy belly bitter, but it ſhall be in thy mouth ſweet as honey.]

9. And I went and beſought him for it; and he gave it me, and bid me eat it ſee Ezech. 3. 1. telling me that though it would taſt a little pleaſant in my mouth, Ezech. 3. 3. yet when 'twas in the ſtomach 'twould be very bitter: that is, that though in reſpect of the reſcue and deliverance that would befall the godly by the deſtruction of theſe enemies of theirs, and by conſideration of the great juſtice of God upon theſe that ſo well deſerved it, I ſhould, while I conſidered that alone, fully approve, and be well pleaſed with this ſentence againſt the Jewes; yet when I began to ſee and conſider it in the terribleneſs of it, and in the utter vaſtation of a glorious Temple, where God had ſo long been pleaſed to dwell, and of a people which God had taken and owned peculiarly for himſelf, it would be a moſt horrible and amazing thing to me.

10. And I took the little book out of the Angels hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth ſweet as honey: and as ſoon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.]

10. And I took the rol and devoured it, that is, conſidered and meditated upon it, on both parts of it, the deſtructions to the Jewes, as well as the deliverances and advantages to Chriſtians; the terribleneſſe of the utter deſtruction, as well as the merits of the Jewes that brought it on them: and though the one pleaſed me exceedingly, yet, as honey, that is ſweet to the taſt, when 'tis eaten, is very uneaſie to the ſtomach, ſo the other part, that of the deſtructions of my countrey-men the Jewes, was matter of horrible grief to me.

11. And he ſaid unto me, Thou muſt propheſie again * before [c] many people, and nations, and tongues, and † kings.]

* of the people † many kings

11. And when I thought with my ſelf, ſure now there is an end of the viſion concerning the Jewes, there is no more to be ſeen or propheſied of, the Angel ſaid unto me, that beyond this deſtruction of the Temple and Jeruſalem and Judæa under Titus, to which theſe laſt parts of the viſion belonged, there was yet more matter of propheſie belonging to this people, what ſhould yet farther betide them from the Romans (after this deſtruction) by enſuing Emperours, Adrian eſpecially, and other Kings and people, that ſhould aſſiſt him in rooting out this nation.

a. Ἑπτὰ βρονταὶ φωναῖς ἑαυτῶν. Βρονταὶ. Ἑπτὰ. Σφράγισον, μὴ γράψῃς. Ὅτι χρόνος οὐκέτι ἔσται. Ἡμέραι φωνῆς ἐβδόμου ἀγγέλου. Τελεσθῇ καὶ μεγάλαι φωναὶ ἐν οὐρανῷ. Μεγάλαι.

V. 3. Seven thunders] What is meant by the ἑπτὰ βρονταὶ seven thunders here, must be observed, for the clearing the whole matter. That thunders are the fitteſt expreſſions or emblems of great blows or judgments, is obvious to every man; and ſo that the number of ſeven, being a compleat number, is fitly affix'd when any fatal, ſignal blow is to be inflicted: And ſo theſe ſeven thunders here ſending forth their voices ſignifie the deſtruction to which ſuch preparation was made in the former Viſions, the deſtruction of Jeruſalem under Titus. This ſo ſad and terrible, that it was not to be committed to writing, ver. 4. And this utterly irreparable, never to be made up again; which was the importance of the Angels oath, ver. 5, 6. Only ſome addition there might be made to it, and that ſhould ſoon be done, the utter deſtruction ſhould be compleated in Adrian's time, call'd the daies of the voice of the ſeventh trumpet, ver. 7. And that is the third and laſt woe, c. 11. 14. And that, when it came, ver. 15. ſet down in a parallel phraſe to this of the ſeven thunders, viz. ἐγένοντο φωναὶ μεγάλαι ἐν οὐρανῷ. there were great voices in heaven. For φωναὶ and βρονταὶ voices and thunders every where appear to be all one in theſe books, (ſee Note on ch. 11. e.) and the addition of great will have a force in it, and denote that there under Adrian to be the compleating of the deſtruction. That ſo great things as theſe two the deſtruction under Titus, and the full meaſure under Adrian, ſhould be ſo briefly ſet down in theſe Viſions, as by theſe two phraſes, the ſeven thunders uttering their voices, and there were great voices, or thunders, in heaven, will not ſeem ſtrange, if firſt it be obſerved that the few words, ſeven thunders and great voices, have great force in them, as great as any circumlocution of words could expreſs; and ſo we know the one ſingle γέγονε, it was, ch. 16. 17. is the deſcription of the deſtruction of heathen Rome, and accordingly the Latine word Fuit, it hath been, or 'tis gone, is as full an expreſſion of an utter deſtruction of Troy, or any the moſt famous city or people, as can be: and ſecondly, if it be remembred what pomp had been formerly uſed in the foregoing Chapters to expreſs it as approaching, which made it unneceſſary to deſcribe it again more largely when it came to paſſe.

b. Ὅτι χρόνος οὐκέτι ἔσται.

V. 6. Time no longer] The word χρόνος ſignifying time, ſignifies delay alſo: and accordingly thus the Verb χρονίζω, (rendred by Heſychius, διατρίβω, to ſtay) is uſed by the Apoſtle, Heb. 10. 37. Ὁ ἐρχόμενος οὐ χρονιεῖ, he that comes will not delay, in the very notion that here, οὐκ ἔσται χρόνος ἔτι, there ſhall be no longer delay, God's judgments ſhall ſpeedily be executed; and this moſt agreeably to the expreſſion in Habakkuk ch. 2. 3. It will ſurely come, Οὐ μὴ χρονίσῃ, it will not tarry, or delay, any longer. So Ecclus 7. 16. of wrath, that is, the judgements of God, οὐ χρονιεῖ, it will make no long delay, and c. 12. 15. οὐ χρονιεῖ, he will not tarry. And ſo in Demoſthenes the word is uſed, χρόνους ἐμποιεῖν τοῖς πράγμασι, to cauſe delay to affairs.

c. Λαοῖς. Ἐπὶ. Προφητεῦσαι ἐπὶ λαοῖς. Πολλοῖς. Ἔθνεσι καὶ γλώσσαις. Βασιλεῦσι πολλοῖς. Λαοὶ καὶ φυλαὶ, γλῶσσαι καὶ ἔθνη. Φυλαὶ καὶ γλῶσσαι καὶ ἔθνη.

V. 11. Many peoples] What ἐπὶ λαοῖς here ſignifies may be thus collected. The word Λαὸς people is frequently taken for the Jewes, and then here in the Plural (ſee Act. 4. 25. and Note on Rev. 11. f.) it will do the ſame; or elſe farther, it may ſignifie this people in all their diſperſions, in Africk and Ægypt and Greece, &c. where the judgements of God ſhould find them out, as many as continued obdurate, according to that of Chriſt's prediction, that whereſoever the carcaſſe was, the Roman Eagles ſhould congregate and aſſemble unto them. Then for ἐπὶ, that muſt rather be render'd of, or concerning, (according to the looſer uſe of the Hebrew עַל, anſwerable to it) then before. And then προφητεῦσαι ἐπὶ λαοῖς is an eaſie and ordinary phraſe, to denote the matter of the prophecy, and not the auditors of it; as when Ezech. 32. 2. 'tis ſaid, take up a lamentation עַל פַּרְעֹה. it is not before, but concerning, Pharaoh. Then for the πολλοῖς many, that in the ordinary Tranſlation is joyned with people; in the Greek 'tis the laſt word of the verſe, adjoyned to βασιλεῦσι Kings, and ſo muſt in reaſon be joyned in the rendring. Then for the reſt that follow, ἔθνεσι καὶ γλώσσαις nations and languages, theſe words moſt fitly ſignifie the heathen world of diſtinct languages one from another, and all from the Jewes; and agreeably the βασιλεῦσι πολλοῖς many Kings will ſignifie their Princes, or (conſidering them together in an army) their Commanders or Rulers over them. And the joyning of theſe with the λαοῖς, the people of the Jewes, in the enſuing prophecy, will then ſignifie their fighting and deſtroying the Jewes; and ſo it will moſt exactly belong to the time of Adrian the Emperor of Rome, and his Commanders, (all ſuch being called βασιλεῖς Kings; ſee c. 6. Note h.) Marcius Turbo, and Rufus, &c. together with the Auxiliaries that came in to him from the Parthians, and many other nations. All which together are the ſubject of his next prophecy, ch. 11. which is yet wanting to complete the deſtruction of the Jewes, and therefore 'tis ſaid, Δεῖ σε πάλιν, Thou muſt propheſy again, or ſee another Viſion; and this will be the ſubject of it, the dealing of the Jewes, and the farther deſtruction that befell them in Adrian's time. By what hath here been ſaid, will appear alſo what is meant by the people and kindred, or tribes, and tongues, and nations, c. 11. 9. the two former, λαοὶ and φυλαὶ, people and tribes, denoting the Jewes, and the tongues and nations denoting the Gentiles, viz. the people of Jeruſalem, as now they were made up of Jewes and Gentiles; neither of which ſhould ſhew any reverence to the Chriſtians, or expreſſe any kindneſſe to them, whilſt thoſe ſeditious people under Barchochebah were in power, but on the contrary uſe them contumeliouſly, and triumph over them, v. 10. And ſo I ſuppoſe φυλαὶ καὶ γλῶσσαι καὶ ἔθνη, tribes and tongues and nations, c. 14. 7. may denote the Jewes and Gentiles, that is, in that place, the Saints or Chriſtians whereſoever inhabiting.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XI.

1. After the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by Titus, c. 10. the moſt memorable paſſage concerning this matter of the Jews, (and ſo the fitteſt matter of a farther viſion) being that which fell on that people under the Emperor Adrian, the next viſion here ſeems to belong to that. And by way of preparation to the repreſenting of it, here is firſt ſet down Adrian's re-building of Jeruſalem, and ſetting up the heathen worſhip there. To this purpoſe, ſaith he, Me-

a. Θυσιαστήριον.

1. AND there was given me a reed like unto a rod: and the Angel ſtood, ſaying, Riſe, and meaſure the Temple of God, and the a Altar, and them that worſhip therein.]

thought I had a meaſuring rod, or pole, or pertch, given me, (as in Ezechiel c. 40.) and a command from the Angel to mete the Temple of God, that is, firſt, the Sanctuary or Holy, and in it the Holy of Holies, and then the Court, where the altar of burnt-offerings ſtood, and where the people worſhipp'd and prayed to God, called the court of the Iſraelites. (This meaſuring suring is the inclosing or setting thus much of the Temple apart, in memory of the former consecration, not to be profaned or medled with, that is, built upon by the Emperor Adrian, who now designed to erect a new city there, calling it (by his own name Ælius) Ælia.

* nations ἐθνεσιν

2. But the court which is without the Temple † leave out, and measure it not; for it is given unto the * Gentiles, and the holy city shall they tread under foot fourty and two moneths.]

2. But I was appointed to leave or cast out, that is, not thus to measure or inclese, the court of the Gentiles, called the outer court, (see note on Eph. 2. a.) noting that the Roman Emperour should take that in, and build upon it and about it a new city, not only for Jews, but Gentiles to live in; and so that Jerusalem, formerly called the faithful and holy city, should now, being thus re-built, be called by another name, and profaned with Idol-worship, a Temple being erected to Jupiter upon mount Sion, and so continue for the same proportion of time (that is, three years and an half) that it had in Daniels prophecy been profaned by Antiochus, Dan. 7. 25.

3. And I will give power unto my b two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days clothed in sackcloth.]

3. And all this time there being two Christian Bishops of Jerusalem, one of the Jewish, t'other of the Gentile or stranger Christians there, and these being raised up by God like prophets to forewarn men of their sinnes and danger, shall like prophets set themselves against the sinnes both of the Jewes and Gentiles, labour to convert them all to Christianity, to bring them to the reformation of their wicked lives, to the purging out of all the abominable sins (mentioned c. 9. 20, 21.) unreformed among them; and this the Angel told me they should do all that space of three years and an half (mentioned v. 2.) and do it (as prophets are wont, when they prophesy judgments on unreformed sinners) in sackcloth (see Mat. 3. d.) denoting the yet farther evil effects that would be consequent to their still holding out impenitent against the Faith. b.

4. These are the two Olive-trees, and the two Candlesticks, standing before the God of the † earth.]

† land γῆς

4. These two Bishops of the Christian Churches there, together with the congregations belonging to them, were now to be look'd on as the advancers and restorers of piety, after that general depravation and infidelity in that place; and are therefore compared, the Bishops to Zorobabel and Joshua, Zach. 4. 3. described there by the embleme of the two Olive-trees, and the two Churches to the two Candlesticks (see ch. 1. 20.) standing before the God of the land, ver. 14. that is, serving Christ continually at a time of such universal corruption among all others.

5. And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.]

5. And to these two are appliable two passages of story belonging to Elias, as first bringing down fire from heaven (noting what shall befall their enemies v. 13.)

6. These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and have power * over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues as often as they will.]

* on the waters ἐπὶ τῶν ὑδάτων

6. And secondly, having that power of prayer as to shut up heaven that it should not rain, for the same space that Elias did, that is, three years and an half, v. 3. (see Jam. 5. 17.) and two passages more referring to Moses; as first, the power to turn the water into blood through all Ægypt, and secondly, to bring plagues upon them: noting by both these, that they were a kind of Moses and Elias, designed by God, one to bring the Jews to obedience, as Moses, the other to destroy Idolatry, as Elias; the first the work of the Bishop of the Jewish congregations, the second of the Bishop of the Gentiles.

7. And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast, that ascendeth out of the bottomelesse pit, shall c make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.]

7. And when they have spent a good time in discharging their office thus, in endeavouring to reduce both Jews and Gentiles, and bring them into the Church, an eminent instrument of the devils, Barchochebah, in Adrian's time, will gather a multitude of unbelieving Jews unto him, and as a wild beast ravine and devour, kill and plunder all that will not joyn with him against the Romans, and so (as histories affirm of him) handle the Christians cruelly and hostilely, because they would not doe so, and unlesse they would deny Christ. c.

8. And their dead bodies shall lie in the streets of the great City, which spiritually is called Sodome and Ægypt, where also our Lord was crucified.]

8. And upon this pretence kill them, and cast out their carcasses in the streets without burial; and this still in Jerusalem (that no Prophet might be slain any where else) which cannot better be compared then to Sodom, for abominable sins of the Gnosticks, to Ægypt, (see note c. on ch. 14.) for oppressing God's people, that is the Christians, nor exprest by any character, then that which brought all their punishments upon them, their crucifying of Christ, and dealing in like manner with Christians.

* tombs, monuments μνήματα

9. And they of the people, and † kindred, and tongues, and nations, shall see their dead bodies three days and an half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in * graves.]

9. And thus shall it be, the Christians shall be thus slain, and cast out into the streets, without any compassion or reverence, either from the Jews or heathens inhabiting at Jerusalem, (see note on ch. 10. c.) as long as that seditious company prevail there.

10. And they that dwell † upon the earth, shall rejoyce over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two Prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth.]

10. And this should be matter of rejoycing and congratulating to the Jews one with another, as upon the destruction of their greatest enemies (as Elias was counted an enemy to Ahab, whom he would have reformed.)

11. And after three days and an half the Spirit of life from God entred into them: and they stood upon their feet, and great fear fell upon them which saw them.]

11. But after some time their cause should come to be heard before God, their injuries to be avenged, the Christians of these congregations should begin to flourish again, as in a kind of resurrection from the dead, by the power and mercy of God: and all that saw this, and the manner of doing it, (Christians rescued by the Idolatrous heathen Romans) could not but acknowledge it a great work of Gods, and worship God for it.

12. And they heard a great voice from heaven, saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud, and their enemies beheld them.]

12. And they were taken up as it were to heaven, out of this bloody seditious broil that lay so heavy upon them, that is, restored to a great and notable tranquillity, to Halcyonian days of peace and Christian profession.

13. And the same hour was there a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the City fell; & in the earthquake were slain of men seven thousand: and d the remnant were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven.]

13. And as they were thus rescued and relieved, so the other inhabitants of that place, that joyned in that sedition, or complyed with them against the Christians, v. 10. were destroyed by the Romans, d.

a great part of that new city, and the inhabitants thereof; and upon this the reſt turned Chriſtians, ſeeing the prophecies of the two witneſſes fulfilled upon thoſe that would not believe or obey them.

c. 14. And ſo this calamity lighting on the Jewes in Adrian's time was in a manner as bloody as that other under Titus, and though it came ſome time after the former, yet was not long deferred. That under Titus was the 2d woe, deſcribed from c. 9. 12, 15. to the end of chap. 10. and this under Adrian, the 3d, ſet down from the beginning of this chapter, and cauſed by the ſedition of Barchochebah, v. 7.

14. The c ſecond woe is paſt, and behold the third woe cometh quickly.]

f. 15. And this ſummarily repeated by the ſounding of the ſeventh Angel, who was to conclude this whole tragedie. For as he ſounded, thunders were immediately heard, that is, pouring in of the Roman armies upon them, mention'd v. 13. and an immenſe multitude of Jewes, almoſt ſix hundred thouſand of them, ſlain, ſaith Dio, others affirm as many more, from the beginning of this warre. And as this was done on the ſeditious Jewes, ſo by this means the Chriſtians, eſpecially of the Gentiles, came to flouriſh there more then ever, and that whole city became in a manner Gentile-Chriſtian, Marcus a Gentile being the one Biſhop under which both Jew and Gentile-Chriſtians were united: and thus the Church of Jeruſalem entred upon her flouriſhing condition, and the faith of Chriſt got the upper hand, ſo as it never ſhould be deſtroyed utterly again.

15. And the ſeventh Angel ſounded, and there were great voices in heaven, ſaying, f The kingdomes of this world are become || the kingdomes of our Lord, and his Chriſt, and he ſhall reign for ever and ever.]

|| our Lords, and his Chriſts.

16. And the four and twenty Biſhops of Judæa ch. 4. 2. acknowledged this a great mercy of God, which tended wonderfully to the proſperity of the whole Church of Judæa under them,

16. And the four and twenty Elders, which ſat before God on their ſeats, fell upon their faces, and worſhipped God,]

17. Saying, Bleſſed be God for this infinite mercy of his, wherein he hath magnified his fidelity to the Chriſtians, and uſed the Gentile-Romans as his inſtruments to ſet up his Chriſtian Church in Judæa.

17. Saying, We give thee thanks, O Lord God * Almighty, which † art, and waſt, and art to come; becauſe thou haſt * taken to thee thy great power, and haſt reigned:]

* ruler of all things ὁ παντοκράτωρ † is, and which was, & which is to come ὁ ὢν, καὶ ὁ ἦν, καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος
* received εἴληφας

g. 18. Now is fulfilled that prophecie of Pſal. 2. The Jewiſh nation have behaved themſelves moſt ſtubbornly againſt Chriſt, and cruelly againſt Chriſtians, and thy judgments are come upon them; and though the avenging of the blood of the Martyr-Chriſtians hath a while been deferred, till theſe other ſufferings under Barchochebah were added to them, ch. 6. 11. yet now the time is fully come for all the vengeance to be powred out, the Jewes and Gnoſticks to be deſtroyed, and all the orthodox pure conſtant Chriſtians to have daies of tranquillity, and peaceable profeſſion of the Goſpel, and liberty of aſſemblies.

18. And the g nations † were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they ſhould be judged, and that thou ſhouldeſt give reward unto thy ſervants the prophets and to the ſaints, and them that fear thy name, ſmall and great, and ſhouldeſt deſtroy them which * h deſtroy the earth.]

† have been angry, and thy wrath came ὠργίσθησαν, ὀργή, ſee note on c. 6. 17.

19. And this as an effect of God's covenant of mercy made with believers, and which will never fail to be performed to all Chriſtians, that will in time of diſtreſſes and perſecutions wait and depend conſtantly, and that fall not off by any temptations from him. And there were lightnings, and voices, and thunders, and great hail, (which words in all probability belong to the next viſion (and chapter) and ſo are connected by Andreas Cæſarenſis, and his exſcriber Arethas; and by them is noted, that there is a farther viſion behind, and that conſiſting of thundrings, and lightnings, and earthquakes, that is, menaces of judgments from heaven againſt thoſe that had their hearts hardned and ſtubborn againſt Chriſt, of which the hail was an embleme, c. 8. 7. And who theſe were that were now next to come on the ſcene, will follow in the next Chapter.)

19. And the Temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was ſeen in his temple the ark of his † teſtament: and there were lightnings, and voices, and thundrings, and an earthquake, and great hail.]

Annotations on Chap. X I.

a. Θυσιαστήριον

V. 1. Altar] The word θυσιαστήριον doth in ſome places ſignifie the Altar of incenſe; ſee c. 6. e. In other places there is no queſtion but it ſignifies the Altar of burnt-offering; but that again ſometimes not ſtrictly the Altar, but the court where the altar is placed. So ch. 14. 18. & 16. 7. it cannot be rendred Altar, becauſe there is mention of one going forth, and another ſpeaking out of it; it muſt therefore ſignifie the court, or place of ſacrificing, wherein the Altar is: ſo ſaith the Gloſſary, Θυσιαστήριον, ſacrarium, altarium; and in Philoxenus, Sacrarium, Ἡρῷον θυσιαστήριον· and in that ſenſe, ſaith Ignatius, ὁ ἐκτὸς ὢν θυσιαστηρίου, τουτ' ἔστιν ὑστερῶν ἀπὸ ἐκκλησίας τοῦ Θεοῦ, he that is out of the Altar, that is, the Church, &c. And agreeably in this place, by that which follows, and thoſe that worſhip in it, (which belongs not to the Temple before, but is immediately annex'd to θυσιαστήριον) it cannot reaſonably denote the Altar, but the place wherein men were which worſhipped, and that here moſt probably is (not the Sanctuary, where the Altar of incenſe was, but) ἡ ἔσω θύρα αὐλὴ τοῦ ναοῦ, the inward court of the Temple (oppoſed to ἡ ἔξω θύρα αὐλὴ, outer court, that of the Gentiles here) that where the Congregation or people worſhipped. See Note on Mat. 23. i.

b. Μάρτυρες β.

V. 3. Two witneſſes] Who the two Witneſſes are is the main difficulty of this chapter: And the matter here ſpoken of yielding ſome directions to pitch on the time of which this Viſion treats; as 1. the farther judgments falling on Jeruſalem after the deſtruction by Titus; and 2dly, thoſe after the rebuilding the city, and planting it with Gentiles as well as Jewes, ver. 1, 2. which muſt needs belong to the time of Adrian; it may be reaſonable to forſake all other conjectures, and pitch upon that which the learned Hugo Grotius hath reſolved on, of making the two Churches, which were at this time at Jeruſalem, one of the Jewiſh, the other of Gentile-Chriſtians, the two Witneſſes here ſpoken of; or more diſtinctly, I conceive, the two Biſhops of (and together with them) thoſe two Congregations. That there were two ſuch plantations in the ſame city, in many places, before the Jewes and Gentiles grew into one, appears by divers evidences: In Antioch as one Church was planted, and governed by Peter, the Apoſtle of the Circumciſion, ſo another by Paul the Apoſtle of the Gentiles; and that is expreſs'd in the Epiſtle of the Councill of Jeruſalem by οἱ κατ' Ἀντιόχειαν, &c. ἀδελφοὶ οἱ ἐξ ἐθνῶν, the brethren, that is, the Church, at Antioch, thoſe, or that, of the Gentiles, and in the one Euodius ſucceeded Biſhop, in the other Ignatius. So in Epheſus and Aſia John was founder of the Churches of the Jewes, and Paul of the Gentiles; and while John continued over the former, Timothy was by Paul made Biſhop at Epheſus over the latter. So at Rome, Peter was biſhop of the Jewiſh congregation, and Clemens his Deacon, Paul of the Gentile part, and Linus his Deacon; & after them Clemens ſucceeds in one chair, and Linus in the other, and after him Cletus or Anacletus; and and after him both joyned together under Clemens. And thus it is to be ſuppoſed at Jeruſalem, eſpecially after the deſtruction by Titus, when there were many Gentiles there, which may occaſion the multitude of Biſhops that Euſebius obſerves to have been there in few years, till they joyned both under Marcus a Gentile Biſhop in Adrian's time, (ſee ver. 15.) And this was in ſome degree neceſſary, not onely becauſe there was ſome diſtance kept betwixt the Jewiſh and Gentile Chriſtians, (which at Rome Paul endeavoured to make up, Rom. 14. &c.) but in reſpect of the ſeveral languages which they were of neceſſity to uſe in their aſſemblies, and farther in reſpect of the ſeveral cuſtomes for a good while continued among them. Now that all that is ſaid of theſe two Witneſſes doth perfectly agree to theſe two Biſhops, and their congregations of Chriſtians, will appear in the Paraphraſe; and to that belong directly the deſcriptions here beſtowed on them. One, like Moſes over the Jewes, labouring to bring all that people out of their Ægyptian blindneſſe and bondage to ſin, their unchriſtian impenitence: and the other, like Elias, preaching down idolatry, bringing the Heathens to Chriſtianity. And then to theſe are fitly adjoyned (in the chorus, as it were) the 24 Elders, ver. 16. that is, the Biſhops of all Judæa, that belonged to the Biſhops of Jeruſalem, (as leſſer cities to a Metropolis, ch. 4. 4.) and had their part in the benefit of this deſtruction that fell on Barchochebah and the ſeditious Jewes.

c. V. 7. Make warre againſt them] That Barchochebah raiſed a ſedition againſt the Romans is known in ſtory, and that he call'd himſelf by that name, as ſon of a ſtarre, but was after more truly call'd the ſon of a lie, that is, of an idol, which is a lie, and that idol a falſe God, that is, the Devil; or elſe more generally the ſon of a lie, that is, an impoſtor, coming from the father of lies, ſtirr'd up and agitated by him, & ſo here aſcending out of the abyſſe. The only thing here farther affirm'd of him is, that he warres againſt the two Witneſſes, that is, againſt all the Chriſtians in Jeruſalem and Judæa, uſing them cruelly and bloodily, if they would not joyn with him againſt the Romans, and if they would not deny Chriſt. Theſe two things are diſtinctly affirmed, the firſt by Euſebius in his Chronicon: Chochebah, ſaith he, leader of a faction of the Jewes, kill'd with all cruelty the Chriſtians that would not help him againſt the Romans. And ſo likewiſe Oroſius, l. 7. c. 13. Chriſtianos Judæi, Cothebâ (that is, Cochebâ) duce, quòd ſibi contra Romanos non aſſentarentur, excruciabant, The Jewes under their leader Cocheba tormented the Chriſtians, becauſe they would not comply and take part with them againſt the Romans. The ſecond by Juſtin Martyr, Apol. 2. Βαρχοχέβας, ὁ τῆς Ἰουδαίων ἀποστάσεως ἀρχηγητὴς, χεῖρας μόνους οἷς τιμωρίας δεινὰς, εἰ μὴ ἀρνοῖντο Ἰησοῦν τὸν Χριστὸν, καὶ βλασφημοῖεν, ἐκέλευεν ἀπάγεσθαι, Barchochebas, the leader of the defection of the Jewes, commanded the Chriſtians, and none elſe, to be led to cruel torments, if they would not deny Chriſt, and blaſpheme him.

d. V. 13. The remnant were affrighted] That the remnant here, that is, all the Jewes in Jeruſalem that were not now deſtroyed, did convert and believe in Chriſt, appears by that which is ordinarily known in ſtory, that Adrian at this time by Edict baniſh'd all the Jewes out of it, that is, all that remained ſuch, or were not converted to Chriſtianity, and ſet up the picture of a Swine at the gates, to keep any of them from thoughts of entring again, and even to baniſh their eyes from thence (See Ariſto Pellæus in Euſebius, Τὸ πᾶν ἔθνος ἐξ ἐκείνου καὶ τὸ ἐκεῖ τῆς Ἱεροσολύμων γῆς πάμπαν ἐπιβαίνειν εἰργεται νόμῳ δόγματι, καὶ Τάξεσιν Ἀδριανοῦ ὡς ἂν μηδ' ἐξ ἀπόπτου θεωρεῖν, the whole nation was from thenceforth forbidden to enter the region about Jeruſalem, and this by decree of Adrian, which commanded that none ſhould out of any eminent place ſo much as behold their native ſoile. And Tertullian Apolog. c. 21. Quibus nec advenarum jure terram patriam ſaltem veſtigio ſalutare conceditur, They were not permitted to ſalute, or viſit, their native countrey ſo much as travailers or gueſts: and ſo Adverſ. Jud. c. 13.) mean while the Chriſtians freely returning thither from their diſperſions, and inhabiting quietly there. Chriſtianis tantùm permiſſa civitas, ſaith Oroſius, the city was permitted to Chriſtians only, (ſee Note on Luc. 21. c.) that is, no Jewes were there permitted that received not Chriſtianity. l. 7. c. 13.

e. V. 14. Second woe is paſt] Some miſtake there may poſſibly be in this place by conceiving theſe words, Ἡ δευτέρα οὐαὶ ἀπῆλθεν, the ſecond woe is paſt, to denote the deſcription of that ſecond woe to end in this place, and conſequently that, behold the third woe cometh quickly, ſhould ſignifie that the coming of that third woe ſhould now next be ſet down. But this is a miſtake, that would be apt to diſturb and perplex the Viſion. For of the three woes denounced ch. 8. 13. 'tis plain that the firſt is ſet down from c. 9. 1, to v. 12. and there concludes, the firſt woe is paſt: Then after that, ſaith the Viſion, Ἔρχονται ἔτι δύο οὐαὶ, there come two woes more. Theſe two are coupled together, and not ſet down ſo ſeverally as this firſt was from thoſe two, (thoſe latter two agreeing one with the other in this, that they were both executed by the Romans, whereas the firſt was by the Zelots among themſelves) and ſo deſcribed ſomewhat undiſcernibly, yet ſo that the ſecond may be found to end ch. 10. 10. upon which 'tis ſaid, that he muſt propheſie again, v. 11. that is, that there was not yet an end of that ſad matter, but that the third woe was ſtill behind, and that ſet down from the beginning of this 11th chap. to ver. 14. where that third (and ſo both theſe, δύο οὐαὶ, the ſecond and third named together, ch. 9 12.) being at an end, in reference to both of them this verſe muſt be underſtood; that as the ſecond had been fulfill'd, ch. 10. 10. ſo within a ſmall time after, no longer then from Titus to Adrian, the third was executed alſo, only by way of recapitulation the ſame thing is again ſet down, v. 15. very briefly, in the ſounding of the ſeventh trumpet, (as had been foretold it ſhould, ch. 10. 6, 7.) upon which come out the great voices, that is, thunders (for voices and thunders, φωναὶ and βρονταὶ, are all one; ſee Note on Act. 9. b.) ſignifying that deſtruction, (ſee Note on ch. 10. a.) And this third woe being thus added to the two former, the effect and reſult of all the three woes is, the ſetting up of Chriſtianity in Judæa. And that is ſignified by the acclamations, the Kingdome is the Lords, &c. Which ſpeech is ſaid to be delivered by the thunders, as being a moſt natural conſequent of that deſtruction. And then a new viſion of a new matter begins at the beginning of the twelfth chapter.

f. V. 15. The Kingdomes of this world are become the Kingd——] What is here meant by this acclamation, The Kingdoms of this world are become the Kingdoms of our Lord, &c. may beſt be underſtood by theſe degrees; Firſt, that becoming the Lords (all one with לאלהים Pſal. 47. 9. where 'tis ſaid the ſhields of the earth are the Lords) ſignifies converſion to Chriſtianity, and that is evident by the addition of καὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ αὐτοῦ and his Chriſts. Secondly, that the Kingdoms of the world ſignifies not here the whole world, and all the Kingdoms of that, but as (when it is ſaid the world hateth you, and, I pray not for the world, and very often in the ſame ſtyle) the world ſignifies unbelievers, and βασιλεῖαι τοῦ κόσμου the whole ſocieties and multitudes of them. And this being by the Context applied to Jeruſalem and Judæa, the plain meaning of the whole phraſe muſt be, that the inhabitants of Jeruſalem and Judæa were now generally converted to the faith of Chriſt, as in the ſtory it was known to be in Adrian's time, time, after the defeating of Barchochebah, the unbelieving Jewes being finally baniſh'd thence, and the city inhabited by Chriſtians of that and other nations indifferently: ſee Euſeb. Eccl. hiſt. l. 4. c. 5. As for that which follows in the acclamation, καὶ βασιλεύσει εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων, and he ſhall reign for ever and ever, that is capable of a twofold interpretation: either more generally, that the Chriſtian faith and Church ſhall continue for ever, (the gates of hades never prevailing againſt it) and ſupport it ſelf from being utterly deſtroyed, againſt all oppoſition; and this here fit to be pronounced of the Church in general, upon occaſion of this good ſucceſſe of it in Jeruſalem and Judæa, where it had been ſo long perſecuted, but now had gotten the victory: Or ſecondly, applying it particularly to this Church, the meaning may be, that Chriſt ſhould have faithfull ſervants in Judæa, and continue to have ſo to all eternity; which hath yet been made good through all changes and viciſſitudes, under the Pagan and Chriſtian Emperors firſt, and ſince under Saracens and Turks.

g. ἔθνος

V. 18. Nations] The word ἔθνος or ἔθνη doth not only belong to other nations in oppoſition to the Jewes (the Ethnicks or heathens, as we call them, though, when the word ἐθνικοὶ is uſed, that is the particular notion of it) but alſo to Paleſtine, either all together (as οἱ ἀπὸ τῶν ἐθνῶν, in Orig. cont. Celſum l. 4. are the Jewes in contradiſtinction to others) or to the ſeveral parts of it divided now into Tetrarchies, Judæa one ἔθνος, and Galilee another, &c. and ſo ſaith Joſephus of Galilee, that it was the valianteſt ἔθνος nation of Paleſtine, the powerfulleſt and beſt fortified, when he ſpeaks of Veſpaſian's overcoming it. And ſo in the Goſpels, ἔθνος ἐπὶ ἔθνος nation againſt nation, Mat. 24.7. Mar. 13. 8. Luc. 21. 10. and Joh. 11. 48, 51, 52. and c. 18. 35. and in many other places; (and agreeably the Tetrarch of any one of theſe was called ἐθνάρχης, and in Latine Authors, Ethnarcha; of which ſee Baronius ad An. Chr. 2. Auguſt. 49.) And not only in the Singular number, but alſo in the Plural, συνοχὴ ἐθνῶν, Luc. 21. 25. the diſtreſſe of nations, that is, of the ſeveral parts of Paleſtine, noted by ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, on the land, which belongs to that peculiarly (ſee Note on ch. 7. a.) & to the inhabitants thereof, the Jews, and not to the heathens in the reſt of the world. For ſo that text referres, ſpeaking of their diſtreſſe and great conſternation (ſee Note on Rev. 6. f.) συνοχὴ and ἀπορία, and their deanimation for fear and expectation of what would come upon the οἰκουμένη world, that is, that whole people (ſee Luc. 2. 1.) So Act. 4 25. out of the Pſalmiſt, the ἔθνη καὶ λαοὶ, nations and people, that murmured againſt Chriſt, are ſure the people of the Jewes, and are expreſs'd v. 26. by βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς καὶ ἄρχοντες, the Kings of the land and the rulers; by the Kings meaning Herod (who had the rule of them under the Romans) Pontius Pilate, &c. and by the ἄρχοντες the rulers, or chief men among the Jewes, which v. 27. is expreſsly ſet down, Herod and Pontius Pilate with the nations and people of Iſrael, σὺν ἔθνεσι καὶ λαοῖς Ἰσραήλ· and this is a place directly parallel to that which we have now in hand, both referring to that of Pſal. 2. and ſo this alſo muſt be taken in that ſenſe. See Note on Mat. 24. e.

Ib. Deſtroy the earth] That φθεῖραι and διαφθεῖραι ſignifie to corrupt, in that ſenſe that wicked men (διαφθειρόμενοι ἐν νῷ, being themſelves corrupted, and have their very underſtanding perverted by cuſtome of unnatural ſins) doe corrupt others, ſee Note on 2 Pet. 1. b. and on 2 Pet. 2. b. and that γῆ ſignifies the land and people of the Jewes, ſee Note on ch. 7. a. And ſo the Gnoſticks, that infuſed their filthy doctrines and corrupt practices into the Jewiſh believers, may probably here be called the διαφθείροντες τὴν γῆν, they that corrupt the land, which are here to be deſtroyed, and ſo were moſt notably, ſaith Euſebius.

a. 1. Another viſion is here ſet down, & either the heaven or the aire made the ſcene whereon 'tis repreſented, thus;

1. AND * there appeared a great wonder in heaven, a woman a clothed with the ſun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve ſtarres:]

* a great ſigne was ſeen σημεῖον μέγα ὤφθη

And methought I ſaw a woman, ſignifying the Church of Chriſt thereby, and that woman, that Church ſhining moſt illuſtriouſly with thoſe graces which Chriſt the Sun of righteouſneſſe had beſtowed upon it, and thereby much outſhining the Jewiſh ſtate of imperfection before Chriſt came, which was now alſo deſtroyed, and this Church founded in the twelve Apoſtles, which, as teachers thereof, are beſt compared to ſtarres, ch. 1. 20. and thoſe as ſo many gemmes in the crown of the Church, that is, principal perſons in the conſtituting this kingdome of Chriſt.

2. And this woman was with child, and ready to bring forth, that is, by the preaching of the Apoſtles and Apoſtolical men, was in travail to produce Chriſtians (ſee Gal. 4. 19.) that is, children to Chriſt, over all the world.

2. And ſhe being with child, † cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.]

† cried out in travail being in torture κράζει ὠδίνουσα καὶ βασανιζομένη

3. And on the other ſide, methought there was a Dragon, that is, the devil, that great enemy of Chriſtianity, who had for a long time the city of Rome (ſo religiouſly devoted to the worſhip of Idols, that is, of devils, 1 Cor. 10. 20.) under his command, and all the principalities under it, (the firſt noted by the ſeven heads, that is, the ſeven hills, on which the city was built, the other by the ten horns, c. 13. 1. and 17. 9, and 12.) and that city (noted by the ſeven heads) was the Imperial city, and ſo had as many crowns on the heads.

3. And there appeared another wonder in heaven, and behold, a great red Dragon, having ſeven heads and ten horns, and ſeven crowns upon his heads.]

b. 4. And the Devil, to oppoſe the proſpering of the word of Chriſt and preaching of the Goſpel, made uſe of ſubtilty, by the falſe doctrine of Simon and the Gnoſticks, to corrupt the doctors and people of the Church; and having ſucceeded proſperouſly in it in Samaria and other places, attempted the ſame alſo at Rome, that as ſoon as any turned Chriſtians, they ſhould infuſe their doctrines into them, (ſee note on 2 Tim. 3. a. and 2 Theſſ. 2.)

4. And b his tail drew the third part of the ſtarres of heaven, and did caſt them to the earth: and the dragon ſtood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as ſoon as it was born.]

5. And there came into the Church many Chriſtians in the city of Rome, that imperial city, v. 3. who proved very conſtant and faithful to Chriſt, and ſo a Church was eſtabliſh'd there, which ſhould convert many to the faith of Chriſt, by preaching the word (which is the rod of iron, that is, ſpiritual ſword, or ſcepter of Chriſt, the inſtrument of managing his ſpiritual kingdome, ſee ch. 2. note o.) unto them. And as ſoon as a Church was planted here, it was in the infancy endangered to be devoured by the Dragon, the devil aſſiſted by the Roman power, the perſecuting Emperour Nero, about the tenth year of his reign, had it not been wonderfully preſerved by God.

5. And ſhe brought forth a man-child, which was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne.]

6. And

6. And the [c] woman fled into the wilderneſs, where ſhe hath a place prepared of God, that they ſhould feed her there a thouſand two hundred and threeſcore days.]

6. And ſoon after, the Chriſtians were by edict forbidden throughout the Empire: but God preſerved his Church in this perſecution, which laſted three years and an half. c.

7. And there was warre in heaven; Michael and his Angels fought againſt the Dragon, and the Dragon fought and his Angels,]

7. And there was a great contention at Rome, between Simon Peter on one ſide, the planter of the Chriſtian faith, and Biſhop of the Jewiſh Chriſtians, and ſo maintainer of Michael's or Chriſt's cauſe there, and Simon Magus, that Apoſtate ſervant of the Devil, at his ſecond coming to Rome in Nero's time; the one contending for Chriſt, the other againſt him: ſee note on 2 Tim. 3. a.

8. And prevailed not, neither was their place found any more in heaven.]

8. And Peter and the cauſe of Chriſt prevailed againſt him: for though at his former coming to Rome, in Claudius's dayes, Simon was there worſhip'd for a God, and at his ſecond coming much favoured by Nero; yet upon his undertaking to fly in the aire, by Peter's prayers he was caſt down and maimed in the fall, and through pain and ſhame forced to caſt himſelf headlong down from the top of an houſe: ſee 2 Tim. 3. a.

9. And the [d] great Dragon was * caſt out, that old ſerpent, called the Devil and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was † caſt out into the earth, and his Angels were caſt out with him.]

9. And by this means the Devil (that doth ſo oppoſe the Chriſtian faith, and ſeduce men to heatheniſme and to corrupt living) was caſt out of his unlimited power in mens hearts, and many upon this victory of Peter over Simon Magus, turned Chriſtians. d.

† caſt to the ground ἐβλήθη εἰς τὴν γῆν

10. And I heard a loud voice ſaying in heaven, Now is come ſalvation and ſtrength, and the kingdome of our God, and the power of his Chriſt: for the accuſer of our brethren is caſt down, which [e] accuſed them before our God day and night.]

10. And this was matter of joy to all the Chriſtians, nay, to the angels of heaven, who therefore praiſed and magnified the power of the Chriſtian doctrine, which had caſt out that eminent piece of hypocriſie out of the Church, the doctrine of the Gnoſticks, which did really infuſe that into Chriſtians, for which the devil is wont to accuſe the ſervants of God falſely, (and gave an eſſay of it in his charging of Job c. 1. 11.) to wit, that in time of perſecution they will deny and forſwear Chriſt. e.

11. And they overcame him by the blood of the lamb, and by the word of their teſtimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death.]

11. And the faithful ſincere Chriſtians, Peter and Paul, and divers others, having the patience and conſtancy of Chriſt before their eyes, (who laid down his life for them) and his frequent doctrines of taking up the croſs, and following him, reſolved to do ſo as he had given them example and command: and this was a victory over Satan, and theſe inſtruments of his, the Gnoſticks, which would have ſeduced all the Chriſtians from their conſtancy.

12. Therefore rejoice ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Wo to the inhabitants of the earth, and of the ſea: for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, becauſe he knoweth that he hath * but a ſhort time.]

12. A thing much to be applauded & rejoiced at by all good men and angels. But upon this the devil was hugely inraged, to ſee his ſubtilty (the tail of this ſerpent v. 4.) the falſe doctrines and infuſions of theſe hereticks thus miſcarry; and therefore in that rage of his, knowing that if he did not beſtir himſelf mightily, Chriſtianity, prevailing in the purity and ſincerity of it, would utterly be his ruine, and that ſuddenly, he ſet a-foot the perſecution againſt the whole Chriſtian Church by Nero's edicts in a ſharp manner.

13. And when the Dragon ſaw that he was caſt † unto the earth, he perſecuted the woman which brought forth the man-child.]

13. By this to revenge himſelf upon Chriſtianity for the deſtruction of Simon, his beloved inſtrument.

† on the ground, εἰς τὴν γῆν

14. And to the woman were given two wings of a great Eagle, that ſhe might fly into the wilderneſs, into her place: where ſhe is nouriſhed for a *time, and times, and half a time from the face of the ſerpent.]

14. And ſo not only at Rome, v. 6. but in all other parts of the Roman Empire, Chriſtianity was perſecuted, and the Chriſtians forced to flie, ſome one way, and ſome another, (as they had been Acts 8. 1.) by which means they were by the providence of God kept ſafe for ſome while, (ſee v. 6.)

* ſeaſon καιρὸν

15. And the ſerpent caſt out of his mouth waters as a † floud after the woman; that he might cauſe her to be carried away of the floud.]

15. Mean-while Satan uſed all means to purſue the Chriſtians whither they fled, raiſing up perſecutions from Nero againſt them in the provinces, by which he hoped to have utterly drowned and deſtroyed the Church.

16. And [f] the * earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and ſwallowed up the floud, which the Dragon caſt out of his mouth.]

16. But theſe afflictions and calamities which the devil deſigned the Chriſtians, were diverted by the ſeditions raiſed by the Jewes againſt the Romans, by which means it came to paſſe, that all the malice which was by Satan deſigned againſt the Chriſtians, fell actually upon the Jewes, under Veſpaſian and Titus, and ſo at that time the perſecution of the Chriſtians was neceſſarily cooled, and fell upon the Jews their greateſt enemies. f.

17. And the Dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her ſeed, which keep the commandments of God, and † keep the teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt.]

17. And this was a great vexation to Satan, to ſee Chriſtianity thrive the better by this means, and therefore he ſet to his former deſign again, that of ſetting the Emperors upon perſecuting the Chriſtians, viz. the pure Orthodox of them that ſtood out conſtant in confeſſion of Chriſt, and would not, for acquiring ſafety, join with the Jews or Gnoſticks, and comply with them. And this perſecution now deſigned by Satan, is that which fell out under Domitian, the ſubject of the next viſion, c. 13.

Annotations on Chap. XII.

a. Περιβεβλημένη τὸν ἥλιον

V. 1. Clothed with the Sun, and——] What notion is here to be affix'd to the Sun and Moon, may thus moſt probably be reſolved; The Sun being the Spring and fulneſs of light, communicating to all, but needing not to receive light from any, may fitly repreſent the Chriſtian religion, as that contains the doctrines of perfect purity, not only external, but of the heart, and is an addition of perfection to all the laws that had formerly been given to men. And then the Moon, being a fainter light, and proverbially noted for mutability, it may well ſignifie the imperfect, and accordingly mutable œconomy of the Moſaical Law. That the Moon is under this womans feet, may ſignifie that the Church noted by this woman clothed with the Sun, that is, the Chriſtian Church, had now caſt off that yoke of the Moſaical obſervances. Others have applied it to the uſe that Chriſtian religion makes of the Law and Prophets, as a footſtool to reſt upon in ſome degree. ὑποκάτω τῶν ποδῶν αὐτῆς

But

But the phraſe under the feet, rather implies that of bringing low, deſtroying, then making uſe of it; as when the enemies are put under the feet, or made the footſtool, it notes them to be ſubdued. And ſo the Moſaical œconomy was at this time ſolemnly laid aſide by the Chriſtians, and the Nation and Temple deſtroyed in the former Viſions.

b. ἡ οὐρὰ αὐτῆς

V. 4. His tail] Suppoſing the great red Dragon, v. 3. to ſignifie the Devil, (ſee Note d.) the only queſtion is, what is here meant by ἡ οὐρὰ αὐτῆς his tail. To this purpoſe it muſt be obſerved, that the ſerpents power of hurting lies principally in his head; and therefore as it is of them obſerved, that they doe all they can to preſerve their head, as that wherein they are moſt nearly concern'd, ſo the puniſhment that by God is threatned Satan in the ſhape of a ſerpent, Gen. 3. 15. is, that the ſeed of the woman ſhall bruiſe his head, that is, ſhall over-power and maſter him: And accordingly here the Roman Imperial power, by means of which the Devil is able to kill and perſecute Chriſtians, is expreſs'd by the heads of the Dragon, v. 3. And then the tail being moſt diſtant from the head, and here mentioned diſtinctly from the ſeven heads, and that which here follows of drawing the ſtarres, that is, corrupting the Chriſtians, attributed diſtinctly to the tail, as that which ſucceeds ch. 13. 1. to the heads; it will follow, that the tail of the ſerpent ſhall moſt reaſonably have a peculiar notion, & ſignifie his policy & ſubtlety, which is the engine by which he works, before he proceeds to uſe his power, or when his power or force cannot prevail. And of this ſort the Inſtruments ordinarily are Magicians and Sorcerers, and falſe Prophets, that by deceits ſeduce and corrupt men: and none more eminently deſerved this title then Simon and his followers, Firſt, in reſpect of the prodigies that he made ſhew of; Secondly, by his doctrine of compliances, which offered all men waies of eſcaping perſecutions, whether from the Jews or Gentiles, by determining it lawfull to deny Chriſt, and offer ſacrifices to Idols; Thirdly, by gratifying all their carnal deſires, and giving them liberty for all uncleanneſſe. From whence it is that Cyril of Jeruſalem calls Simon by this title, ſo proper to this place, ὁ πατὴρ τῆς κακίας Δεμὼν, the prime Dragon of wickedneſſe, or wicked Dragon. And ſo this is moſt proper to this part of the Eccleſiaſtick ſtory of thoſe firſt times, that aſſoon as the wheat was any where ſown, the enemy ſowed his darnel alſo; whereever Chriſtianity was planted, the Gnoſticks infuſions follow'd, to ſpoil and deſtroy it: and ſo it was at Rome, and that peculiarly at this point of time here noted in this Viſion, before the Imperial edicts for the perſecuting of the Chriſtians came out. For theſe, we know, followed the deſtruction of Simon, (ſee Note b.) and are the ſubject of the next Chapter.

c. Γυνὴ ἔφυγεν εἰς τὴν ἔρημον

V. 6. Woman fled into the wilderneſſe] The time of the womans flying into the wilderneſſe, that is, of the baniſhing of the Chriſtians from Rome, is known in ſtory to have been in the tenth of Nero, at which time having fired the City, he imputed it unto the Chriſtians. That he did it himſelf is affirmed clearly by Suetonius, in Ner. c. 38. quaſi offenſus deformitate veterum ædificiorum, & anguſtiis flexuriſque vicorum, incendit urbem; & incendium ex turre Mœcenatiana proſpectans, lætus flammæ, ut aiebat, pulchritudine, ἅλωσιν Ilii in illo ſuo ſcenico habitu decantavit, Not liking the unbeautifulneſſe of the antient buildings, nor the narrowneſſe and turnings of the ſtreets, he ſet the city on fire, and there burnt all that was ſacred and precious in the city, and looking on the fire from a tower, and delighted, as he ſaid, with the beauty of the flame, ſang in his ſcenical habit the taking of Troy. Thus again we finde in Xiphilin out of Dio. But for this the Chriſtians were accuſed by him, and cruelly puniſhed, ſaith Tacitus Annal. l. 15. and that writer, being an hater of the Chriſtians, is pleaſed to think them guilty, and falſly affirms, that ſome of them confeſs'd the fact, whilſt not only in the general reputation of all men that then lived, of other writers that wrote of thoſe times, but by the confeſſion of Tacitus himſelf, Nero was acknowledged the author of it, who meant to have the honour of building a new city, and calling it by his own name by this means. However, the Perſecution of the Chriſtians began by this pretence, was by Nero's edicts the next year improved and advanced to ſo high a pitch, that Chriſtianity was quite interdicted the Roman Empire. So ſaith Sulpicius Severus; Neque nullâ re Nero efficiebat quin ab eo juſſum incendium putaretur; igitur vertit invidiam in Chriſtianos, actaque in innoxios crudeliſſimæ quæſtiones, quin & novæ mortes excogitatæ—— Hoc initio in Chriſtianos ſæviri cœptum, poſt etiam datis legibus religio vetabatur, palámque edictis propoſitis Chriſtianum eſſe non licebat, Nero could by no means perſwade men but that the city was burnt by his command; whereupon he diverted the envy of it on the Chriſtians, and appointed cruel torments for the examining them, and invented new kinds of death. On this beginning the perſecution brake out againſt the Chriſtians, and after it the religion was prohibited by Laws, and publick edicts made that no man might be a Chriſtian. And this is it which is here meant by the womans flying into the wilderneſſe, and accordingly is by Tertullian called the firſt perſecution; becauſe though the Chriſtians as ſuch ſuffered before in Claudius's time, yet that was not by any Imperial edict, but only by tumults, when the heathen people were incited by the malicious Jews. For as we read Act. 18. the Proconſul Gallio would be no Judge in ſuch matters, but drave the Jews from the Judgment-ſeat. And this was toward the latter end of Claudius, after Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome: In which baniſhment of the Jews ſome Chriſtians might ſuffer occaſionally, and S. John be baniſhed into Patmos; but there was as yet no Edict againſt them as Chriſtians, at the leaſt none for the putting of them to death, as the plea of S. Paul before Felix and Feſtus, his appeal to Cæſar, (which was at the beginning of Nero) make it plain. And accordingly we finde, that when S. Paul came to Rome, Act. 28. he preached there μετὰ πάσης παῤῥησίας ἀκωλύτως, with all boldneſſe or publickneſſe, and was not forbidden. And at the writing of his Epiſtle to the Romans, their faith, ſaith he, was famous in all the world, Rom. 1. and he had oft deſired to come to them, Rom. 15. 22. and that for many years, v. 23. And all this in Claudius's time, before his going to Rome, which argues alſo that this woman was not yet fled, that is, baniſh'd, into the wilderneſſe. And therefore of Nero it is Tertullian's phraſe, that he firſt dedicated perſecution, & primum Neronem in hanc ſectam ferociiſſe, Nero was the firſt Emperor that perſecuted Chriſtian Religion.

d. Ὄφις ἀρχαῖος

V. 9. Great Dragon] The Hebrews call Satan הנחש הקדמוני, the old ſerpent: ſo again, c. 20. 2. And the caſting him out at this time is the proſpering of the Chriſtian faith, conſequent to this diſcomfiture of Simon Magus, and the manifeſtation of the power of Chriſt. So ſaith Arnobius l. 2. Non diſtulerunt res patrias linquere, & veritati coaleſcere Chriſtianæ: viderunt enim currum Simonis, &c. They delayed not to leave all their worldly poſſeſſions, and to cleave to Chriſtianity (which was now under interdict:) For they ſaw Simons chariot and fiery horſe diſpelled by the breath of Saint Peter's mouth, &c. And as by this means the Heathens were converted to the faith, by ſeeing the power of Peter, ſo were the Gnoſticks diſcomfited, ſeeing their leader Simon deſtroyed.

e. ὁ κατηγορῶν αὐτῶν

V. 10. Accuſed them] The accuſation that Satan brings againſt ſincere Chriſtians appears by his dealing with with Job c. 1. 9, 11. to be to this effect, that they are Hypocrites, and will only serve God as long as he protects and defends them. This it hereby appears that Satan looks on, as the charge of all others most for his turn to bring against men, and therefore that which he most desires to have truely said of them. Now the chief doctrine of the sect of the Gnosticks, the followers of this Simon, (who is called the first-born of Satan) was this, that in time of persecution it is lawful to denie and forswear Christ (which was the very thing that the Devil laid to Job's charge,) and consequently all that were by him seduced into that doctrine, Satan might justly accuse before God day and night, as really guilty of that accusation. But when the doctrine of the Gnosticks and the professors of it were now cast out of the Church, then this is here truly said, that the accuser of the brethren, that is, of Christians, is cast out; that is, Satan can no longer with any justice accuse the Christian Church, or, if he doe, he is found to be a false accuser.

V. 16. The earth helped the woman] The solemn notation of Judæa by ἡ γῆ the land, hath often been taken notice of, and is very pertinent to this place, the seditions that were raised there about this time of Nero's reign diverting the malice designed against the Christians: and the same continued all the time of Galba, Otho, Vitellius, Vespasian and Titus: and in all this space the Romans being wholly taken up about the Jews, the heathen Emperors did nothing against the Christians, till Domitian comes, who is the subject of the Vision in the next Chapter. f. ἡ Ἰουδαία τὸ γυναικί

CHAP. XIII.

Paraphrase.

1. AND I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his head [a] the name of blasphemy.]

1. And I was in the island Patmos, upon the sea shore, when I saw the vision, that a.

I am now to set down, viz. concerning the execution of that designe of Satan of bringing persecution on the Christians at Rome, ch. 12. 17. And here the first thing I saw was a beast, representing the heathen worship, as it stood at Rome, rising out of the sea, as that is all one with the abysse, or deep, that is, introduced among them by Satan (see note on ch. 11. c.) and thriving and prospering by the strength and power of the Roman Emperors; that heathen worship represented by this first beast, and the Roman Empire by the seven heads, either as seven Emperors, ch. 17. 10. or else as referring to the seven hills of Rome, the seat of this Idol-worship, usurping to its self that blasphemous title of being a Goddesse, and the ten horns ten Kings, noting those that complied with Rome in this deifying of their Emperors, and in the rest of their Idol-worship, viz. the many Kings that were by the Roman Emperor set over other places, who therefore are said to have ten crowns.

2. And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority.]

2. And this Idolatrous heathen worship, thus assisted by the power of the Empire, began to be very cruel, and cannot sufficiently be expres'd by one cruel beast, but having variety of all kinds of gods in it, from which 'tis represented by a speckled leopard, it exercises all the cruelty both of bear and lion, as was manifest by their persecutions of Christians. And to the sustaining of this beast (the Idolatrous heathen worship) the Devil (that laboured to destroy Christianity, ch. 12. 3.) contributed all his power and skill, did all that he could to hold it up, by prodigies, and by all other means.

3. And I saw [b] one of his heads as it were wounded to death, and his deadly wound was healed. and † all the world wondered after the beast.]

† the whole land ὅλη ἡ γῆ

3. And though one prime Temple on one of the seven b.

hills of Rome, the most stately of all the rest, and so call'd the Capitol, from a Latin word signifying Head, were burnt down by lightning, and esteemed to be smitten by God from heaven, and so Idolatry conceived to have received a fatal blow; yet that was soon rebuilt by Domitian the Emperor of Rome, and that gave a great confirmation to Idolatry among all that lived in the Roman dominions, and took notice of it. See note k.

4. And they worshipped the Dragon which gave power unto the beast, and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?]

4. And they worshipped the Devil, who had thus upheld the heathen religion when the Jewish was destroyed, resolving from hence, that the God of Israel was not able to contend with their Devils, nor his religion able to maintain it self against their Idol-worship.

5. And there was given unto him [c] a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies, and power was given unto him to [d] continue fourty and two moneths.]

5. And hereupon the heathen Idol-worship and worc. d.

shippers began to despise all others, and to scoffe at the God of Israel (and the heathen Emperors to call themselves gods, for so Domitian did) upon the destruction of the Temple at Jerusalem, concluding thence that that God of Israel was not the true God. And soon after this, Domitian began a persecution against the Christians, as those which opposed the heathen worships, and continued it about three years and a half, untill his death.

6. And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name and his tabernacle, and them that dwelt in heaven.]

6. And this same Domitian was very bitter against

God, the Church, and all Christians, in all this being a factor for the beast or Idol worship.

7. And it was given unto him to make war with the Saints and to overcome them: and power was given him over * all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.]

* every tribe πάσαν φυλὴν

7. And was permitted by God to persecute the Christians, and to suppresse them whersoever they inhabited, whether of Jewish or Gentile extraction, (see note on ch. 10. c.)

8. And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose [e] names † are not written in the book of life of the lamb, slain from the foundation of the world.]

† were not written fr̃ the foundation of the world in the book of life of the lamb that was slain, ἀ γέγραπται ἐν τῷ βιβλίῳ τῆς ζωῆς τοῦ ἀρνίου ἐσφαγμένου ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου

8. And all the Christian professors within the compasse e.

of the Roman dominions were put to sore trials, and of them very many were wrought upon by this means, viz. the carnal temporizing Gnosticks, which had not a mind to be martyrs and confessors for Christ, but rather chose to comply with idolatry, then to suffer for Christ.

9. If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10. * He that [f] leadeth into captivity, shall goe into captivity: he that killeth with the sword, must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and faith of the Saints.]

* If any man gather together a captivity, he goeth. Εἴ τις εἰς αἰχμαλωσίαν συνάγει, ὑπάγει concerned to take notice of) there was nothing left to the persecuted but the exercise of their patience and faith, the one in bearing without resistance what befalls them, the other in trusting God with their condition, and never revolting from him, or attempting to relieve themselves by secular arms; for as those are unlawfull for subjects to make use of against the lawfull power under which they are, though never so sharp or injurious to them, so would it prove, if 'twere used, but a means to bring more misery upon them.

9, 10. And this persecution of his against the Christians was so sharp and unresistible, that (which is the thing that all Christians are f.

g. 11. The next part of this viſion was the repreſenting a

12. And all this was made uſe of to advance Idol-worſhip, which before had loſt ſome reputation in the burning of the Capitol, ver. 3.

13. And he doth great wonders, ſo that he [i] maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the ſight of men;]

14. And by theſe and the like prodigies, ſhewed in ſeveral parts of the Empire, they endeavoured to ſet up the ſame Idol-worſhip among them, which was at Rome.

14. And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth, by the means of thoſe miracles which he had power to doe in the ſight of the beaſt, ſaying to them that dwell on the earth, that they ſhould [k] make an image to the beaſt, which had the wound by a ſword, and did live.]

l. 15. And theſe heathen Augurs and Prieſts ſet up oracles in new places, and by reſponſes from them ingaged the Emperor, and his officers in the Provinces, to perſecute and make bloody Edicts againſt the Chriſtians.

15. And he had power to give [l] * life unto the image of the beaſt, that the image of the beaſt ſhould both ſpeak, and cauſe that as many as would not worſhip the image of the beaſt ſhould be killed.]

16. And by that means Edicts came out for all men in the whole Empire to enter into, and join in their heathen worſhips.

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. Ὄνομα βλασφημίας

V. 1. The name of blaſphemy] Ὄνομα βλασφημίας name of blaſphemy literally ſignifies ſuch a title as cannot be aſſumed or owned without blaſphemy. Now blaſphemy is committed two waies, either by ſpeaking contumeliouſly of the true God, or giving divine honour to any elſe; which is alſo the taking that honour which is due to him alone, and beſtowing it upon others, and ſo as contrary to his being acknowledged the one God, as the uſing him reproachfully is to his being God. And therefore it is that Paul and Barnabas having divine honours attributed to them at Lyſtra, they rent their clothes, Act. 14. 14. in the ſame manner as was uſual among them when any man was heard to blaſpheme, ſignifying thereby, that ſacrificing to any creature is direct blaſphemy againſt the Creator. Now what this title of blaſphemy was, which is here referred to, is ſpecified by S. Jerome Qu. 11. ad Algaſ. Æterna cùm dicitur quæ temporalis eſt, nomen eſt blaſphemiæ, The city Rome was called the Eternal city, (So Auſonius Gallus,

Urbis ab æterna deductam rege Quirino
Annorum ſeriem———& Hæc erit æterna ſeries ab origine mundi.)

which to be attributed to any thing which had a beginning and ſhall certainly have an end, is a name of blaſphemy. So in the ſame words * Proſper, Æterna cùm dicitur quæ temporalis eſt, utique nomen eſt blaſphemiæ, cùm mortales, licet reges, in ea dicantur Divi, eiſque ſupplices dicunt, Numini veſtro, altaribus veſtris, perennitati veſtræ, &c. For that which is temporal to be called eternal, is the name of blaſphemy, when their Kings though mortal are called gods, and their ſuppliants addreſſe to them in this ſtyle, To your Deity, your altars, your eternity, &c. See ch. 17. Note a. But beſide this, (and what Athenæus ſaies of it l. 1. where he enſtyles it ἐγκόσμιος Ῥώμη, Rome the Cœleſtial, or heavenly city) it appears by many antient Roman coines (ſet down by Goltzius in Theſauro) that Rome was called a Goddeſſe, there being many ſuch inſcriptions, Ῥώμη Θεά, Rome a Goddeſſe. Accordingly the people of Smyrna built a Temple to it, ſaith Tacitus hiſt. l. 3. and other Provinces uſed the like flattery, erected Temples, appointed Prieſts to the Goddeſſe Rome; and at laſt Adrian raiſed a ſtately Temple, and called it Templum Romæ & Auguſtorum, the Temple of Rome and of the Emperors (that is, dedicated to them, as to gods) ſaith Dio in Adriano. And accordingly this idolatry or blaſphemy is taxed by Prudentius,

—colitur nam ſanguine & ipſa
More Deæ, Nomenque loci ceu numen adorant,

Rome is worſhipp'd by ſacrifice, after the manner of a Goddeſſe, and they adore the Name of the city as a deity. And to this it is agreeable that many other Copies read, ὀνόματα βλασφημίας names of blaſphemy in the Plural, more ſuch blaſphemous titles beſide that of Urbs Æterna, the Eternal city, that one of Θεὰ Goddeſſe, and the erecting Temples to it, containing all imaginable blaſphemies in it.

* Dimid. tempo. c. 7.

b. Μία τῶν κεφαλῶν Κυριολ

V. 3. One of his heads] What is here meant by μία τῶν κεφαλῶν, One of the heads, will be judged, firſt, by the notion of head; ſecondly, of μία one. The head is the uppermoſt part of a man, and ſo proverbially ſignifies any thing that is moſt eminent or conſpicuous; and ſo here, v. 1. the ſeven heads are moſt probably the ſeven hills on which Rome was built. Then for μία, that (for want of degrees of comparison in the Hebrew language) is by an Hebraisme oft taken for πρώτη the first, as Mat. 28. 1. μία Σαββάτων, (not one, but) the first of the week. Both these concurre to apply this phrase, μία τῶν Κεφαλῶν, to the Capitol at Rome, to which it belongs so properly and characteristically. For first, the word Capitol certainly comes from Caput, an head; and Livy renders the reason for it, that a mans head being found in that place where that was after built, (Caput Toli, the head of Tolus, saith Arnobius) the Oracle answered, Eo loco caput summámque imperii fore, that the head and top of the Empire should be there. Secondly, In this place was the Temple of Jupiter, called therefore Jupiter Capitolinus; and he being the first or chief of the gods, the place where his Temple stood may well be the principal of the heads of this city. Now that this head is here said ἐσφαγμένη εἰς θάνατον, slaughter'd or smitten to death, this clearly belongs to the burning of the Capitol; which fell out twice about these times. First, It was set a-fire by those that accompanied Sabinus and Domitian thither, and who were there besieged by Vitellius's souldiers, a little before the death of Vitellius; whose successor Vespasian, being returned out of Judæa, and having committed the warre against the Jewes to his son Titus, in the very next year (at which time the Temple at Jerusalem was burnt) re-built the Capitol most sumptuously, and restored Jupiter's Temple in it: Which as it was a kind of recovery of Rome from a mortal disease (expres'd by a coin of Vespasian's, inscribed Roma resurges, Rome thou shalt rise again) so it was looked on as a great expression of the wrath of God against the Jews, that at that time not onely their Temple was burnt, but that other of Jupiter at Rome permitted to be re-built, and at Jerusalem heathen sacrifices offer'd in the Temple of God by the Roman souldiers, and all Gods Priests fetch'd out of their caves or hiding-places, and killed by Titus's command. Of this re-edifying the Capitol see Tacitus hist. l. 4. And to this the words here would commodiously enough be appliable. But besides this, there was a second wounding of this first head, another burning of the Capitol, in Titus's reign, which was by lightning, and so esteemed to be sent from heaven. And this is more proper to this point of time, to which this Vision belongs, and being done as from heaven might from thence be more fitly objected to Idolatry, as a deadly wound to that worship of Jupiter. And this was so sumptuously repaired by Domitian (whose time is the subject of the Vision in this chapter) that Martial makes Jupiter indebted to him for it,

for

Quid pro Tarpeiâ frondùs honore potest?

What can Jupiter pay thee for his Temple in the Capitol? And on this 'tis said that the whole earth wondred after the beast. Where by ὅλη ἡ γῆ, the whole earth or land, the Roman Territories are most probably meant (see Note k.) which are to Rome as all Palæstine (so often call'd by that style, the land) to Jerusalem; and the ἐθαύμασεν ὀπίσω wondring behind, or after, the beast, signifies their great veneration (wrought in them by this means) to the Idol-worship, which is farther expres'd by their worshipping the Dragon, that is, the Devil, v. 2. called the old serpent, c. 12. 9. and the Devil and Satan, a Dragon being but a flying serpent, by which the Devil hath always been represented. Who being here look'd on as the maintainer of the heathen worship, he is adored and applauded greatly; and that farther expres'd by their saying, Who is like unto the beast? who can fight with him? that is, No man or God is able to oppose this Idol-worship profes'd in the Capitol, or resist the power by which it is upheld.

V. 5. A mouth speaking great things, and blasphemies] One special testimony of the Heathens blasphemy against God upon occasion of the Romans victories over the Jews, is that of Cicero pro Flacco; speaking of the Jews, Illa gens, quàm chara dijs immortalibus esset, docuit, quòd est victa, quòd elocata, quòd servit, That nation hath taught us how dear they are to the immortal gods by their being conquered, and subjected by the Romans to a King of their sending thither. This hath been thought fit by a learned man to be brought to the illustrating of this place, though indeed it belong to it only by way of accommodation, as a proof how apt the Romans prosperity and conquests over Judæa were to make them blaspheme God; not that this speech can belong to the point of time now spoken of, being delivered long before by Cicero. Dionysius Alexandrinus in Eusebius l. 7. c. 10. applies it to Valerian 255. years after Christ, who (by the instigation of the chief of the Magicians in Ægypt, commanding him πολὺ καθαροὺς ἄνδρας καὶ ὁσίους κλίνουσι καὶ διώκειν, to kill and persecute the pure and holy men, ὡς κωλύας, &c. as those that hindred their inchantments) became a great enemy of the Church. The like is again related of Diocletian, that upon a response of Apollo from Delphi, that the just upon earth hindred him from speaking truth, he fell on persecuting the Christians: see Eusebius De vita Const. l. 2. c. 49, 50. But that which is more pertinent to the times whereof, I conceive, the Vision speaks, is Domitian's styling himself Dominus & Deus noster, and forbidding nè scripto quidem ac sermone cujusquam appellaretur aliter, that any, whether in words or writing, should call him otherwise, and appointing his statues of gold and silver to be set up in the Capitol, and his professing his contempt of thunder and lightning. See Suetonius in his life, c. 13.

Ib. Continue fourty and two moneths] That which is read in some Copies, ποιῆσαι πόλεμον μῆνας τεσσαρακοντα δύο, to wage war fourty two moneths, that is, three years and an half, is in other the best and ancientest Copies (without πόλεμον) ποιεῖν μῆνας, &c. and then that is to spend or stay so many moneths. Thus the King's MS. hath it: and so in Eusebius Eccl. Hist. l. 7. c. 10. Dionysius Alexandrinus citing this place reads it, ἐδόθη αὐτῷ ἐξουσία καὶ μῆνες (or, as another reading of Eusebius hath it, μῆνας) τεσσαράκοντα δύο, power was given him fourty two moneths. And then to stay so many moneths is to live so long; which was punctually true of Domitian, who began his persecution in the thirteenth, and dyed in the sixteenth year of his reign. And so this is directly answerable to the space wherein Antiochus had vexed the Jews, Dan. 7. 24. (see Eusebius Eccl. Hist. l. 3. c. 13.) and so is fit to be expres'd in the same form of words, as we see it is.

V. 8. Names are not written in the book of life of the Lambe slain] That the words here should not be read thus, the Lamb slain from the beginning of the world, (though it be perfectly true that Christ was in the designation and decree of God so slain from the beginning) but thus, ὧν ὀνόματα οὐ γεγραπται ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, whose names were not written from the foundation of the world, (that is, were never written) in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain, may sufficiently appear by comparing this expression here with c. 17. 8. where the words are, whose names are not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world. Now some difference there is betwixt the book of life of the Lamb slain here, & the book of life in that place. There the book of life signifies the register of all the good Christians on earth, such as at that time, when their names are said to be written in it, are true believers; but the book of life of the Lamb that was slain signifies peculiarly the register or catalogue of Confessors, such as already have, or are now about to venture their lives for the confeſſion of Chriſt, to take up his croſſe and follow him, and ſo are conformable to this image of Chriſt, this of the Paſchal lamb (by which he was antiently repreſented) the ſacrificed, crucified Saviour. And ſo theſe men of the land, that is, the Jews here that worſhip the beaſt, the Gnoſticks, that to avoid perſecution goe to their Idol-feaſts or ſacrifices, are juſtly thus deſcribed, they whoſe names, from the foundation of the world, have not been written in this book of life of the ſlain lamb, or in the ſlain lamb's book of life.

f. Αἰχμαλωσίαν συνάγειν

V. 10. Leadeth into captivity] Αἰχμαλωσίαν συνάγειν is to gather together a captivity, that is, a number of Captives, as he that undertakes to bring them back out of their Captivity, to be their Captain, and lead them againſt their Conquerour that hath taken them, as Συνάγειν εἰς πόλεμον to gather to warre, c. 16. 14, 16. and 20. 8. and as the word gathering is particularly applied to Captives, and ſo uſed by the Pſalmiſt, Gather us, O Lord, from among the people, &c. Pſal. 106. 47. having in the former verſe mentioned τοὺς αἰχμαλωτεύσαντας, thoſe that had carried them captive, which concludes the ἡμᾶς us there to be the αἰχμαλωσίαν Captivity here (in like manner as περιτομὴ circumciſion is the Jews which were circumciſed, and many the like) juſt as the קבצנו or ἐπισυνάγειν gather together is all one with the συνάγειν gathering. This is after farther expreſs'd by killing with the ſword, that is, making violent reſiſtance and oppoſition againſt the perſecuting Emperors; which for a Chriſtian to do is quite contrary to the faith and patience of the Saints, which conſiſts in ſuffering, not in reſiſting, in having their names written in the ſlain lambs book of life (ſee Note d.) not in the military liſt of thoſe that will fight againſt their lawful Superiours rather then ſuffer under them. Now as God hath in the fifth Commandement of the Decalogue commanded obedience, and (in the Pſalmiſt, and in the Sermon on the mount) meekneſſe, with the promiſe of temporal bleſſings; ſo here doth he deterre from reſiſtance or rebellion, even againſt perſecuting Emperors, by denouncing of temporal judgments of an higher nature then thoſe which by that means any man deſireth or attempteth to avoid. He that goeth about to deliver thoſe conquer'd Captives out of the Emperors hands, out of his oppreſſions or perſecutions, ſhall do them no good, but ſhall himſelf be juſtly puniſh'd by him, by the righteous judgment of God, who loves not thus to be aſſiſted (any more than Chriſt by S. Peter's ſword) againſt his enemies, but denounces (as there in the Goſpel, ſo here) periſhing by the ſword againſt him that thus uſeth the ſword againſt a lawful Superiour, though acting wickedly againſt Chriſt or Chriſtianity. And ſo the onely Chriſtian weapons againſt perſecuting Princes are demonſtrated to be Patience and Faith, enduring meekly what comes from them, and referring our cauſe to God only. And by theſe means (ſo neceſſary for every Chriſtian to obſerve, v. 9.) hath Chriſtianity ever flouriſhed, & by none other.

g. Ἄλλο θηρίον

V. 11. Another beaſt] What this ἄλλο θηρίον other, or ſecond, beaſt ſignified in this Viſion, is determinable by the conſequents (v. 13, 14.) thus far, that it muſt denote ſome one or more Sorcerers or Magicians, to whom it is peculiar to do the great wonders, to make fire come down from heaven, v. 13. to deceive by means of thoſe miracles which he hath power to doe before the beaſt. Of this therefore ſo ſignally ſet down there can be no place of queſtion, nor conſequently that theſe ſorcerers were Heathens, being by the Devil made uſe of to ſupport and advance Heatheniſme and Idolatry. This appears 1. by his ſpeaking like the Dragon, that is, the Devil (ſee Note b.) 2dly, by his exerciſing all the power of the firſt beaſt before him, that is, aſſiſting of the heathen worſhip, v. 1. whoſe deadly wound was cured, that is, which was newly reſtored to a flouriſhing condition again by Domitian's re-edifying of the Capitol, (ſee Note b.) 3dly, by his commanding to make an image to the beaſt, v. 4. (which muſt be again the advancing of heathen worſhip) and ſo the giving breath to the image, as ſhall anone appear. It is therefore moſt reaſonable to interpret this ſecond beaſt of Apollonius Tyaneus, that did ſuch feats at this point of time, and was the perſon whoſe life is ſo ſolemnly written by Philoſtratus, and his miracles by Hierocles compared with and preferred before Chriſts, that he cannot be look'd on as a perſon too mean to be thus repreſented in this Viſion. But this not ſo as to confine it to his perſon, (for Chriſt himſelf is oft not the perſon of Chriſt, but he and his followers, the Chriſtians together) but to comprehend alſo the Magicians, Sorcerers, Augurs, heathen Prieſts, ἱεροσκόποι, that divined by the entrails of beaſts, flying of birds, the whole ſort and profeſſion of theſe. For that it belongs not to Simon Magus, and his followers, Menander and Baſilides, &c. (though they were all Sorcerers) appears, 1. becauſe Simon was worſhip'd in time of Claudius; and though in Nero's reign he came a ſecond time to Rome, yet he was then worſted and deſtroyed by the Apoſtles S. Peter and S. Paul, and the Chriſtian religion advanced by that means, not Heatheniſme, as here it is; and 2dly, the contexture of theſe Viſions, & other characters in the former part of this chapter, determine this of the ſecond beaſt to Domitian's and not to Nero's time: and for Menander and Baſilides, &c. they kept & taught in Paleſtine, Ægypt and Syria, whereas this ſecond beaſt muſt have a larger influence, & that particularly on heathen Rome, and the heathen worſhip there, denoted by the firſt beaſt, whoſe deadly wound had been cured. And for the confirming of this interpretation, it is to be obſerved (what is moſt evident) that this ſecond beaſt, and the falſe prophet, c. 19, 20. had the ſame δωροφορηθέντος deſigne. For as here the ſecond beaſt doth his miracles before the firſt, v. 12. & commands to make an image to the beaſt, v. 14. & cauſeth them to take the mark of the beaſt upon them, v. 16. ſo there the falſe prophet had done his ſignes before the beaſt, by which he had deceived thoſe that received the mark of the beaſt, and worſhip'd his image. And that there the falſe prophet ſignifies the heathen diviners, that foretold out of the Oracles of the Sibyls, &c. will appear c. 16. 13, 14. (Note g.) This being thus evinced, that this whole ſort of deceivers (who by their arts were ſerviceable to the confirmation of heathen Idolatry) are denoted & repreſented by the ſecond beaſt, the ſeveral phraſes in this Viſion & parts of the repreſentation will be very intelligible; as will appear in the following Notes.

h. Κέρατα

Ib. Two horns] Κέρατα horns in the Scripture moſt commonly ſignifie power or ſtrength, becauſe the horns of beaſts being their weapons, their power of defending themſelves, or hurting others, doth moſt properly conſiſt in them: ſee Note on Luk. 1. n. And though it be here the horns of a lamb, which is no ſtrong or formidable beaſt, yet ſtill the horns of the lamb, or ſheep, are the only ſtrength which that creature hath, and horns cannot properly ſignifie any thing elſe but ſtrength. As for the whole phraſe here, Κέρατα δύο ὅμοια ἀρνίῳ, two horns like unto (a or) the lamb, it muſt be interpreted by analogie with what we read ch. 5. 6. There Chriſt having been ſlain, & riſen again, & inſtall'd in his regal power, is repreſented by a lamb having ſeven horns, which are the denotation of his ſeveral branches of power, uſefull to him for the ſubduing his enemies: And ſo here of this ſecond beaſt it is ſaid, that it hath two horns like the lamb, that is, this lamb before deſcribed, ch. 5. in like manner as the beaſts ſpeaking ὡς Δράκων as the Dragon, referres to the Dragon, v. 2, 4. And though the demonſtrative article ὁ be not prefix'd, yet that is ſo ordinarily left out in all Writers, when it muſt be retained in the ſenſe, that no objection can be drawn from thence. This then being thus farre clear, it remains only to enquire what acts of power are here meant by the two horns. And 1. it muſt be reſolved that they are two ſuch as are like two of Chriſt's; for that is concluded from the ὅμοια ἀρνίῳ, like the lamb.

Of

Of which number as the power of miracles and of prophecie are certainly two, ſo there is great reaſon here from the Context to reſolve theſe to be the two that are here meant. For it being already cleared, that κέρατα horns ſignifie powers, two powers are here named diſtinctly in the following verſes; firſt, the power of working ſigns, ver. 14. ſecondly, of giving breath to the image of the beaſt, ver. 15. For that is the denotation of ἐδόθη αὐτῷ in thoſe two (and very ordinary in other) places, It was given to him, that is, Power was given to him, or he had power (ſee Luk. 1. Note p.) Now the σημεῖα ſigns doth acknowledgedly denote miracles; and ſo it is ſpecified, ver. 13. He doth great ſigns, ſo that he makes fire come down from heaven, &c. and ſo that is the firſt horn of this ſecond beaſt, the Magicians and Sorcerers power of working ſome prodigies, like unto thoſe that Chriſt the lamb (himſelf, and in his Apoſtles afterwards) had wrought, reſembling them, but not truly ſuch, falſe, deceitfull miracles. And for the power of giving breath to the image of the beaſt, that is expreſs'd in the next words to be the enabling the image of the beaſt to ſpeak, which clearly denotes the receiving reſponſes from the Devil, or the Devils giving of Oracles, foretelling things to come; which is another imitation of what the Lamb or Chriſt had done, who left the power of prophecie in his Church after his Aſcenſion, as he ſaith of the Paraclete, he ſhall ſhew you things to come, and as S. Paul ſaith Epheſ. 4. 11. that for the founding and confirming a Church, Chriſt gave ſome Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, &c.

i. V. 13. Maketh fire come down——] The firſt of theſe horns or powers, being ſhew'd to be the power of miracles wrought by the Magicians through the power of the Devil, contains under it all the deceitfull wonders wrought by Sorcerers in thoſe times; and the ſtrangeſt of all theſe that were by any of them pretended to, was this of making fire deſcend from heaven, in imitation of Elias, as Jannes and Jambres did by their magick ſome miracles after Moſes. And this is particularly related by Philoſtratus of Apollonius Tyaneus l. 5. c. 5. that he called down fire from heaven. And this is a ſignal evidence that theſe Sorcerers were this ſecond beaſt.

k. V. 14. Make an image to the beaſt] The deſigne of theſe Sorcerers to advance Heatheniſme by that means, and to oppoſe Chriſtianity, and the ſucceſsfulneſſe of their attempt, ſo far as to incenſe the Emperors againſt the Chriſtians, and to engage them to favour and encourage Heatheniſme or Idolatry, is ſufficiently known in ſtory, and appears by that book of Hierocles, (to which we have Euſebius's anſwer, though the book it ſelf be not extant) wherein he compares Chriſt and Apollonius, the Evangeliſts the writers of Chriſts ſtory and Philoſtratus the writer of Apollonius's life, and preferres Apollonius and Philoſtratus very much before the other. And this is the meaning of ver. 12. he did all the power of the firſt beaſt before him, that is, he confirmed men in the belief and practice of all the heathen worſhip which was then a-foot; and as it follows, makes all the inhabitants of the land, that is, the generality of the Roman Empire, to worſhip the firſt beaſt, whoſe wound had been cured, that is, to continue thoſe heathen worſhips of Jupiter Capitolinus, and the like, which ſeemed to have been ſhaken by the burning, but were ſetled again by the re-edifying of the Capitol. And not only ſo, but, as here 'tis added, he ſaith to the inhabitants of the land, that is, commands them, ποιῆσαι εἰκόνα τῷ θηρίῳ ὃ ἔχει τὴν πληγὴν τῆς μαχαίρας, ἐζησεν, to make an image to the beaſt which hath the ſtroke of the ſword, and lived. That that beaſt which hath the ſtroke of the ſword, and yet lived, is the beaſt, v. 1. one of whoſe heads was wounded to death, and the πληγὴ θανάτου mortal wound (all one here with πληγὴ τῆς μαχαίρας ſtroke of the ſword) was cured, is manifeſt; and that hath been cleared to denote the heathen worſhip, as it then ſtood at Rome, the prime part of which was the worſhip of Jupiter Capitolinus. The only difficulty then is, what is the εἰκὼν image of this beaſt. And firſt, it may ſignifie the inventing and introducing of ſome other heathen worſhips or temples beſides thoſe, yet agreeable and like unto thoſe which they had already: And to that ſenſe may be applied what we read of Domitian, his adding of new Deities, and erecting Flavia templa, Flavios Sacerdotes; of which ſaith Martial l. 8. Epigr. 80.

Debentur quæ ſunt, quæque fuere tibi.

Whilſt he built new temples, and re-edified the former, both were to be acknowledged due to him, what now are, and what were before. But there is one objection againſt this interpretation, viz. that as this ſecond beaſt (Sorcery, or the Magicians,) is ſaid at the beginning of the verſe to deceive thoſe that dwell on the land, ſo this beaſt ſaith to the inhabitants of the land ποιῆσαι εἰκόνα, that they ſhould make the image. And there is no reaſon to think that κατοικοῦντες ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς the inhabitants of the land ſhould denote Domitian the Emperor. What ἡ γῆ ſignifies we have oft explained, not the earth, but the land, that is, the whole region or dominion; and that to be defined by the Context. While the diſcourſe was about the Jewes, there it ſignified conſtantly Judæa, and the reſt of the Tetrarchies, all Paleſtine; and now in this chapter (ſee Note b.) the diſcourſe is about the Romans, it muſt by analogie ſignifie the whole Roman Empire, as οἰκουμένη, the world, which ſometimes ſignifies Paleſtine, elſewhere ſignifies the Roman Empire (ſee Note on Mat. 24. e.) And conſequently οἱ κατοικοῦντες ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς the inhabitants on the land will ſignifie ver. 7. and here the Princes and people of the other regions, within the compaſs of the Roman Dominion; and then moſt probably the meaning of the verſe will be, that by the deceits of theſe Magicians, Apollonius, &c. (who, as Philoſtratus makes it evident, went about all the regions, and did their wonders, and drew men after them) the people of all thoſe countries were perſwaded to admit the like worſhips (and build the like Temples) to thoſe in the Capitol at Rome, which may be meant by the θαυμάζειν ὀπίσω to wonder after the beaſt (ſee Note b.) that is, to receive univerſally the worſhip of Jupiter, and to build Temples to him. As for the conceit, that Achilles's ghoſt, which Apollonius in Philoſtratus is ſaid to have raiſed, ſhould be the image of the beaſt here, or that the image of Apollonius himſelf, which his ſcholars appointed to be worſhipped, ſhould be it, there are many inconveniences which lie againſt either of thoſe interpretations. This which we have ſet down is the moſt ſimple, and agreeable to the Context.

l. V. 15. Life] That πνεῦμα ſignifies breath, not life, is ſufficiently known, and conſequently, to give breath muſt be to enable to ſpeak, as it here follows; and to give this to the image of the beaſt (in the notion of that forementioned, Note k.) muſt ſignifie to deviſe arts by which Oracles were now given, or the Devils raiſed to give Reſponſes in thoſe other places where theſe Roman worſhips had been received. That the Oracles at Cuma, at Dodona, at Delphos, in all Bœotia, and in moſt other places, were become dumb before this time, is acknowledged by all heathen writers: and Plutarch's diſcourſes of that ſubject are very conſiderable to ſhew the influence that the Chriſtian faith had on this, & how Idol-worſhip loſt much of its reputation by this means. Theſe Augurs then and heathen Prieſts, as they did undertake to divine by looking into entrails of ſacrifices, & by many other waies, ſo did they contrive the delivering of Oracles in new places, as in Pontus, by Æſculapius, culapius, and the like, as may be ſeen in Lucian's Pſeudomantis. This practice continued publick as long as the Emperors continued Pagan, and afterwards more privately: But about the time to which this Viſion belongs, that is, in the reign of Domitian (as alſo of Trajan and Adrian) upon the great defection of Oracles, the Devil in theſe his agents was moſt active to repair the loſſe by ſetting up new Impoſtures in this kind; and this as a branch or effect of that Prophetick power ſignified by the ſecond horn (of this ſecond beaſt) like unto the lamb, ver. 11. and to this muſt be applied that in the end of that verſe, ſubjoyned immediately to the mention of the two horns, ἐλάλει ὡς Δράκων, the ſecond beaſt ſpake (that is, theſe Augurs propheſied, or delivered Oracles) as the Dragon; Firſt, Wickedly and cruelly, for the advancing of Satan's kingdome, as when by this means they ſtirred up the Emperor and his Officers againſt the Chriſtians. See Lucian in Pſeudomant. concerning Alexander the Magician. And ſo ſaith Baronius An. 272. §. 20. the Gentile-Prieſts did out of the Oracles of the Sibyls incenſe the Emperors againſt the Chriſtians. Secondly, Cunningly, doubtfully, giving their Reſponſes in obſcure forms, veiling their predictions in equivocal ſpeeches, as the Devil, that knows ſome futures, and gueſſeth at others, is wiſely and politickly wont to doe. The former of theſe ſeems chiefly to be meant by ὡς Δράκων as the Dragon, becauſe in this v. 15. after the Image of the beaſt ſpeaking, is immediately added, and cauſe that as many as would not worſhip the image of the beaſt ſhould be killed.

m. Χάραγμα

V. 16. A mark in their right hand] The giving χαράγματα marks in the right hand or forehead was ordinary in Syria and the neighbour countreys, not as a brand or σῆμα (as it is among others, by way of puniſhment; ſee Gal. 6. 17.) but as a note of ſervants, or to diſcriminate the ſervants of one Maſter from another. Theſe marks were either in their right hands (or armes, or wriſts, as χεὶρ oft ſignifies, and not only the hand, which is ἀνθρώχειρ, ſee Mar. 7. Note a.) or in their foreheads: σήματα ὅτι φέρουσιν ἐν τῇ χερσὶν, ſaith Julian, marks of ſouldiers are in their hands or wriſts; and Lucian De dea Syr. hath σίζειν εἰς χεῖρα to be marked on the wriſts. So that to cauſe all to receive this mark, is to force all to the receiving theſe Idol-worſhips; and the way of forcing them is ſpecified ver. 17. ἵνα μή τις δύνηται ἀγοράσαι ἢ πωλῆσαι, that no man might buy or ſell, that would not; that is, incenſing the Emperor and his Officers in the provinces to make interdicts againſt Chriſtian aſſemblies, and to proceed ſeverely and capitally againſt all that uſed any but theſe heathen Idol-worſhips. This whole paſſage ſeems to allude to the tyranny of Ptolemaus Philopator upon the Jews in the third of the Maccabees, Περιθεὶς δημοσίᾳ καὶ τῷ ἔθνει διαβάλλειν λόγον, ᾧ ὅπως τῷ καὶ τῶν αὐλῶν πύργῳ στήλην ἀναστήσας ἐξεκόλαψε, μηδένα ὅλως μὴ δύνασθαι εἰς τὰ ἱερὰ αὐτῶν εἰσιέναι, πάντας δὲ τοὺς Ἰουδαίους εἰς λαογραφίαν καὶ οἰκιλικὴν διάθεσιν ἀχθῆναι——τούτοις τὸν ὑπογεγραμμένους χαράττειν, καὶ διὰ πυρὸς εἰς τὸ σῶμα θέσθαι μῶν Διονύσου κισσοφύλλου— He made an edict to bring diſgrace upon the nation, and upon a tower joyning to the court he erected a pillar, and engraved on it, that no man ſhould enter, but thoſe who ſacrificed after the heathen manner to their gods, and that all the Jews ſhould be forced to be enrolled & put in a ſervile condition, and that thoſe that were enrolled ſhould be marked alſo with fire upon their body with Bacchus's Enſigne, an Ivie-leafe. Which paſſage ſeems to be taken notice of by the Author of the Ἐτυμολογικὸν μέγα, who ſpeaks of Ptolemaus Philopator marking men διὰ τὰ φύλλα κισσοῦ, with Ivie-leaves. All which we ſee ſignifies the marking them out as ſervants with the enſigne of their heathen god Bacchus, as here with the mark of the beaſt, that is, of Idol-worſhip.

μή τις δύνηται ἀγοράσαι ἢ πωλῆσαι

n. Ὄνομα θηρίου Ἀριθμὸς ὀνόματος

V. 17. Name of the beaſt] Beſide the mark of the beaſt, here is mention'd the name of the beaſt, and the number of the name, which are in like manner to be received on their wriſts, or foreheads, as the mark was; for ſo the conſtruction carries it, He cauſeth all ἵνα δώσῃ ἀυτοῖς, that he may give them a mark, ver. 16. And that no man ſhould buy or ſell, ſave he that had the mark, or the name, or the number of the name, Where, as their having a mark given them is all one with receiving and having it, ſo the having the name, and number of the name of the beaſt, muſt be all one with their receiving it. And then this will ſignifie no more then the ſeveral waies whereby ſervants or worſhippers of the heathen Idols were initiated, or received, and diſcriminated from others; Firſt, by a mark or enſign of that God whoſe worſhip it was, an Ivie-leaf for Bacchus (from whence they were called thyrſigeri, and θυρσηφόροι) and the like; Secondly, by the name of the God engraved on them, as Φοῖβος, Διόνυσος, Apollo, Bacchus, &c. and therefore, c. 14. v. 11. we have χάραγμα τοῦ ὀνόματος ἀυτοῦ, which muſt there beſt be rendred, the engraving of his name; Thirdly, by numeral letters, which make up the ſame ſumme that the name of the God makes, which is but a myſtical or cabaliſtical way of having the name underſtood by them that uſe it, but not eaſily underſtood by any man elſe. Of theſe Servius on Virgil makes frequent mention: And Martianus Capella mentions XN as the myſtical name of the Sun, that is, the number of the name. And an example of this manner of deſcribing a God, even Chriſt himſelf, hath been ſet down from the Sibylline Oracles, Note on 1 Pet. 4. f. Having gone thus farre, it is now obſervable that theſe four phraſes, worſhipping the image of the beaſt, ver. 15. having the mark of the beaſt, having the name of the beaſt, having the number of the name of the beaſt, are all here uſed in the ſame matter, (as things commanded under ſevere interdicts, either capital puniſhment, ἵνα ἀποκτανθῶσι, that they may be kill'd, that doe it not, or expulſion from humane ſociety, that they may not buy or ſell, but be diſcommuned) and perhaps thus differently expreſſed to ſet down the ſeveral degrees of complying with Heatheniſme, that the perſecutions brought Chriſtians to, known and mention'd by the antients, that is, the ſeveral ſpecies of the Lapſi; firſt, Apoſtatæ, Apoſtates, that openly renounced the Chriſtian religion; ſecondly, Sacrificati, they that ſacrificed to Idol-gods; thirdly, Thurificati, they that burnt incenſe to them; fourthly, Libellatici, they that received tickets to acknowledge that they had done ſo, though they had not; which being, in reſpect of the ſcandal of it, and by way of interpretation, all one with having ſacrificed, may properly be expreſſed by receiving the number of the beaſts name, which is in effect all one with receiving his name or mark.

Ἔχων ὄνομα

V. 18. Here is wiſdome] What ὧδε ἡ σοφία ἐστὶν, here is wiſdome, ſignifies, is ſomewhat uncertain. It may refer to God; Herein is wiſdome ſhewed, that as the heathen Prieſts veil the names of their gods in ſecret numbers, ſo God hath here ſet down in cypher the name of that heathen god whoſe worſhip is by theſe Edicts preſcribed. And then that which follows, ὁ νῦν ἔχων ψηφισάτω, let him that hath underſtanding count, or reckon, will be no more then, Let him that knows what belongs to myſtical expreſſions of names by numbers take notice of this number now given him, and he ſhall finde how it fits the event. But it is alſo poſſible that the phraſe, here is wiſdome, may referre onely to man: 'Tis an act of ſpecial wiſdome to doe it: and then to that ſenſe will be agreeable what followes, Let him that hath underſtanding caſt the account; where again the wiſdome and underſtanding may either ſignifie skill and ſagacity to finde out the meaning of this myſterie, or elſe prudence to manage it wiſely, that

o Ὧδε ἡ σοφία ἐστὶν

that it ſhall bring no danger upon him, it being that which was not fit publickly to be diſcovered, but if any man had the skill to diſcern it, he would, if he were wiſe, reckon it to himſelf, and ſay nothing, not diſcover that openly which might bring danger or perſecution along with it. To this purpoſe 'tis obſervable, that in the firſt ages of the Church (which were moſt likely to have underſtood and given us light in it) they made no conjectures about it; and 'tis Irenæus's ſaying, that if in his time it were fit publickly to be declared, Οὐ ἐπάνω ἂν ἐρρέθη τῷ γ' ἀποκαλυφθὲν ἐωρακότι, ἐ γὰρ πρὸ πολλοῦ χρόνου ἑωράθη, ἀλλὰ σχεδὸν ἐπὶ τῆς ἡμετέρας γενεᾶς, πρὸς τῷ τέλει τῆς Δομετιανοῦ ἀρχῆς, It would have been declared by him that ſaw the Revelation, for that was but a little while agoe, almoſt in our age, about the end of Domitian's reigne. Intimating, that the reaſon of S. John's not diſcovering it was ſomewhat proper to thoſe times, that is, ſurely, becauſe ſome body that lived in his time, or was ſuddenly to come, was concerned in it. It will now, at this diſtance of ſo many hundred years, be more difficult for us to find it out, and leſſe advantagious to afflict our minds in the ſearch of it. That conceit of Irenæus, that the number is to be found out by the Greek account of letters, hath been taken for the rule by which the work muſt be wrought, and ſo the Greek Alphabet hath had all the applications made to it to expound this riddle: Whereas firſt theſe kind of Arithmetical myſteries were not ordinary among the Greeks of that age; and ſecondly, the Greeks had antiently another way of numbring, beſide that of the letters of the Alphabet in their order, viz. by ſix letters only taken out of the Alphabet, which did comprehend all numbers: And who knows whether that be not the way of numbring by which the operation is to be wrought? And thirdly, it is much more probable, that S. John had reſpect to the Hebrew cuſtome of finding out myſteries in the number of letters, that being very uſual among the Rabbines of that age, under the name of Ghematria, which was a myſterious and abſtruſe art; and, in their account, a ſpecial depth of wiſdome among them. Whatever this number is, 'tis ſomewhat, which, as a note of diſcrimination, is impoſed, v. 16. on all men of that time and place, whereof that Viſion treats, and which ſome had upon them, v. 17. was received by ſome, ch. 14. 11. and not received by others, ch. 20. 4. All this and much more might be ſaid, to demonſtrate it unreaſonable to take any pains in finding out the preciſe name, whereof this of 666 is the numeral expreſſion. The ſenſe of the verſe and the whole paſſage is clear without it, that the heathen Prieſts, and Augurs, and Sorcerers, ſhould incenſe the Emperor againſt the Chriſtians in all the Provinces, and cauſe them to make Edicts of great ſeverity againſt all that did not ſome way comply with their heathen worſhips. And I ſhall not trouble the Reader with any (as more ſcrupulous, ſo) uncertain enquiries.

haſtning about the world, carrying good newes with him, happy tidings for the time to come, to all nations, Jewes and Gentiles, viz. to the Chriſtians of all;

7. Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worſhip him that made heaven and earth, and the ſea, and the fountains of waters.]

7. And thereupon admoniſhing all now to ſtand out firmly and conſtantly, to adhere to the true God, and the Chriſtian faith, in oppoſition to the heathen idolatry, which ſhould now ſhortly be deſtroyed.

8. And there followed another Angel, ſaying [c] * Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, becauſe ſhe made all nations drink of the † wine of the wrath of her fornications.]

8. And as ver. 7. it was foretold that Idolatry ſhould ſuddeny be deſtroyed, ſo pre- [c]

* She is fallen, ſhe is fallen, Babylon the city, the great ſently another Angel, methought, brought news that 'twas done, that that whole impure city of Rome heathen, (under the title of Babylon (ſee note on ch. 18. a.) that old heathen, idolatrous city, that had lain ſo heavy upon the people of God, a numerous populous city, and in each of theſe reſpects fitly expreſſing this) was, that is, ſhould ſpeedily be deſtroyed, for advancing the heathen worſhip, and perſecuting all that would not joyn in it.

9. And methought a third Angel followed, on purpoſe to confirm all weak ſeducible perſecuted Chriſtians, and to fortifie them in their patience and conſtancy under the preſent, or yet remaining perſecutions (ver. 13.) and this he did by denouncing the judgments that the inconſtant ſhould fall under, the direfull ruine which attended all Apoſtatizing, complying Chriſtians, that (after the manner of the Gnoſtick compliers) for fear of perſecutions, had or ſhould forſake the Chriſtian purity, and joyn in the worſhips or practices of heathen Rome; denouncing poſitively, that whoſoever ſhould doe ſo, (ſee note on chap. 13. m. n.)

9. And the third Angel followed them, ſaying with a loud voice, If any man worſhip the beaſt, and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, and in his hand,]

d. 10. He ſhould have his portion with heathen Rome, in the bitter puniſhments, or effects of God's wrath, ſuch as fell upon Sodome and Gomorrha, Chriſt being the Judge, and the Angels the Executioners of it.

10. The ſame ſhall drink of [d] the * wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation, and he ſhall be tormented with fire and brimſtone in the preſence of the holy Angels, and in the preſence of the Lamb.]

*bitter wine of God, mixt, unmixt in the cup of his wrath

11. Even utter deſtruction to all that ſhall have been guilty of this in any degree (ſee ch. 13. note n.) and doe not timely repent of it.

11. And the ſmoak of their torment aſcendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no reſt day nor night who worſhip the beaſt and his image, and whoſoever receiveth the † mark of his name.]

† engraving χάραγμα. see note on ch. 13. n.

12. And herein ſhall the ſincerity of mens hearts appear, and be made manifeſt by the bloody perſecution now approaching, ver. 13. if they ſhall venture any perſecutions from the heathens, rather then thus fall off, and deny Chriſt, if, whatever the hazard be, they ſhall adhere cloſe to the precepts of Chriſtian conſtancy, and the purity of Chriſtian practice, and neither really nor ſeemingly comply with the perſecuters.

12. Here is the patience of the Saints: here are they that keep the commandements of God, and the faith of Jeſus.]

e. 13. And to that purpoſe there came a voice from heaven, ſaying, That there ſhould now come a great trial indeed, (viz. in the times of Diocletian that cruel tyrant) and the perſecutions ſhould lie ſo heavie on the Chriſtians within a while, that they ſhould be happy that were well dead, who were come to enjoy their reward of peace and bliſſe, and are not left on earth for ſuch combats and ſtorms as theſe.

13. And I heard a voice from heaven ſaying unto me, Write, Bleſſed are the dead † which die in the Lord [e] from henceforth; yea, ſaith the Spirit, that they may reſt from their labours, and their works doe follow * them.]

†that are in the Lord, which die within a while, οἱ ἐν κυρίῳ ἀποθνήσκοντες ἀπ' ἄρτι

f. 14, 15. And preſently upon this viſion of thoſe ſharp perſecutions (which generally were means to call down Gods judgments on the perſecuters) methought I ſaw a bright ſhining cloud, and one like Chriſt upon it, in a regal attire, with a ſicle in his hand (all this noting the judgments and exciſion of heathen Rome, which in reſpect of their cruelty againſt the Chriſtians and their other heathen ſins was now, as a field of corn, ready for harveſt.) And another Angel called to him, and bad him proceed immediately to this exciſion, their ſins being come to maturity, and having fitted them for deſtruction.

14. And I looked, & behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one ſat like unto the Son of man, having on his head [f] a golden crown, and in his hand a ſharp ſicle:

15. And another Angel came out of the Temple, crying with a loud voice to him that ſat on the cloud, Thruſt in thy ſicle and reap, for the time is come for thee to reap, for the harveſt of the earth † is ripe.]

† is dried. ἐξηράνθη

16. And he did accordingly, and this vengeance befell heathen Rome.

16. And he that ſate on the cloud thruſt in his ſicle on the earth, and the earth was reaped.]

17. And another Angel or officer of Chriſt's vengeance was ſent out by him on the ſame errand, and methought he came from God in heaven, as out of the ſanctuary, the place where incenſe is offered (an effect of the prayers of the Saints again) with a ſharp ſicle in his hand, an embleme of exciſion.

17. And another Angel came out of the Temple which is in heaven, he alſo having a ſharp ſicle.]

g. 18. And another Angel came from the altar of burnt-offerings, by which the wicked are repreſented, having the execution of God's wrath upon the wicked intruſted to him, and he cried aloud to him that had the ſharp ſicle, and bid him ſet about this work as if it were a time of vintage, cutting down the cluſters of grapes of the vine of the land, that is, deſtroying this idolatrous cruel city and people, as having filled up the meaſure of their iniquities, and being now full ripe for ſlaughter.

18. And another Angel came out from the altar, which had [g] power over fire, and cried with a loud cry to him that had the ſharp ſicle, ſaying, Thruſt in thy ſharp ſicle, and gather the cluſters of the vine of the earth, for her grapes are fully ripe.]

19. And accordingly 'twas done, theſe obdurate ſinners ripe for judgment, were terribly deſtroyed, cut down, and caſt like ripe grapes into a wine-preſſe, the wrath of God falling ſadly upon them.

19. And the Angel thruſt in his ſicle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and caſt it into the great wine-preſſe of the wrath of God.]

h. 20. And this extended not only to the city of Rome, but to other parts of the Empire, wherein Chriſtianity had been perſecuted, and a moſt bloody ſlaughter there was among them.

20. And the wine-preſſe was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the wine-preſſe, even unto the horſe-bridles, by the ſpace of [h] a thouſand and ſix hundred furlongs.]

a. Ῥίζαν, ἢ ἰδὲ ἐρίον

V. 1. I looked, and lo a lambe——] The ſumme of this inſuing Viſion, and the propriety of it to this part of the ſtory, is here fit to be ſet down as preparative to the interpretation of it: and it is this; The ſtate of heathen Rome being ſet down in the former chapter, as it was in Domitian's time, that time of perſecuting of Chriſtianity, and reviving of Heatheniſme (that had loſt a little of its luſtre) here is now a general view given of all that is more largely ſet down in the 16, 17, 18. chapters, that is, of all from Domitian to Conſtantine, or the prediction in groſſe of what is there particularly executed; juſt as the ſixth chapter was the repreſentation of the ſeveral degrees by which the Jews Polity came to its diſſolution, and the premiſing in ſhort what was afterwards to be acted on the Jews in the following chapters. And as there the total destruction of the Jewish state is chiefly insisted on, from v. 12. to the end, so here in this, the period of the Roman idolatrous power, and the destruction thereof by an immense effusion of bloud is described, from v. 14. to the end; but preparatory to that, a description of the pure, constant, Primitive Christians, in the first five verses; an Angel declaring happy tidings to the whole Christian Church for the time to come, and requiring them to walk in a religious fear, and to give glory to God, because he would now appear and judge their persecutors, v. 6, 7. Then another Angel foretelling the destruction of heathen Rome, v. 8. and another, the bitter punishments and utter ruine of apostatizing, complying Christians, v. 9, 10, 11. then a declaration from heaven, that most sore persecutions should fall upon the Church immediately before this happy change, so that they should be happy who were well dead, and were come to enjoy their reward, and not left to undergo so sore a trial, v. 13. And this to point at the time of persecution under Diocletian, Maximian Herculius, Maximian Armentarius, Maximinus, Maxentius, Licinius, which was long and most sharp.

b. Εὐαγγέλιον

V. 6. Everlasting Gospel] That the word Εὐαγγέλιον signifies good news, and by a figure only is appropriated to the Gospel, (as being most eminently such) is sufficiently known. And therefore here in all probability it must be taken in the native sense, and denote simply good tidings. And what they are, appears ver. 7. where the words of this good news are, The day of Gods judgments are come, the former words fear God, and give him praise, being the preface to it. Which though they are a sad proclamation of judgment, and ill news to the impenitent, yet they are a special piece of good news to the pious, constant confessors, that fear God, and confesse and give him praise, that is, couragiously confesse him, whatsoever the danger be, (for so δοξάζειν Θεὸν to praise God, signifies 1 Pet. 4. 16.) Now for the addition of Αἰώνιον to Εὐαγγέλιον, that sure must signifie this good news to be such, as not only the present but future ages were concern'd in. Thus was this (here mention'd) the freeing of the Christian Church from publick universal persecution of the heathen power, which was to be afforded at the time pointed at in this Vision, that is, at the fall of Babylon, v. 8. For after that the heathen persecution was taken off by Constantine, there never came any such universal persecution, but that in one place or other Christians have had the benefit and liberty of assemblies. And though it cannot absolutely be affirmed, that there can never come such universal persecution, yet in that this flourishing estate hath continued the thousand years, c. 20. 11. it may well carry the name of Εὐαγγέλιον αἰώνιον, the everlasting good news, in proportion to what we read of the punishment of the heathen persecutors, whose smoak is said to endure for ever and ever, Rev. 19. 3. That the devil shall be let loose again, after this everlasting good news, is affirmed, c. 20. 7. But then not Babylon (whose destruction here is the subject of this good news) but Gog and Magog shall encompasse the camp of the Saints, and the beloved city, c. 20. 9. And though Gog and Magog in the Ottoman family hath overran that part of the Church, yet in other places, to which the Roman power did never extend, that losse is repaired by the accession of Christian Princes that reign in Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Poland, Russia, &c. so that still it may be εὐαγγέλιον αἰώνιον in the largest sense, as good news concerning all future time, as when Daniel prophesies that the Saints of the most High shall possesse the kingdome for ever and ever, c. 7. 18.

δοξάζειν Θεὸν αἰώνιον Εὐαγγέλιον

c. Βαβυλὼν

V. 8. Babylon is fallen] That by Babylon heathen Rome is signified in these Visions, shall be shew'd at large, Note on c. 18. a. Here only it will be observable, First, why it is called the city, the great, (for so ἡ πόλις ἡ πόλις ἡ μεγάλη, is best rendred) viz. first, in respect of her dominion, see c. 17. 18. that great city which reigneth over the Kings of the earth; and accordingly it was generally known by that title of Urbs Dominatrix, Regno superba, Sanctorum debellatrix, &c. the Imperial city, Proud of her dominion, the subduer and destroyer of the Saints.

Μεγάλη.

——Regina tui pulcherrima mundi,

in Rutilius Numatian, the beautifull Queen of thy world. So in Cicero 'tis Lux orbis terrarum, the light of the world; Ἄστρον τι κοινὸν ἡ ὅλης οἰκουμένης, in Marcianus Heracleota, the common starre of the whole world; Regina & Domina in Julius Frontinus, the Queen and Ruler of the world. Secondly, for the large circuit of the city, to which purpose this testimony of Athenæus is worth observing, lib. 1. Ἐπλείπει δ' ἄν γε οὐχ ἡμέρα μία ἐξαριθμοῦσθαι τὰς ἐν τῇ Ῥωμαίων οὐρανοπόλει Ῥώμῃ ἀριθμουμένας πόλεις, ἀλλὰ πᾶσαι αἱ χῦ ἡμέραι τὸν ἀριθμὸν ἀφαιροῦσι, διὰ τὸ πλῆθος, If I should reckon the cities that are numbred in Rome that heaven-city of the Romans, not only one day would fail me, but as many days as make up a year, the number of them is so great. Secondly, why this title of Babylon is here adapted to it, viz. to keep a special decorum, observable in these Visions, in representing the Christian Church by the antient Jewish. This is observable in many lesser particulars, but most eminently in this description of her Persecutors. There were three most remarkable calamities that fell upon the seed of Israel; The bondage in Ægypt, the Captivity in Babylon, the Persecution of Antiochus. And the like is prophesied in this book to befall Christians. First, Miseries by Jewish persecution, and therefore Jerusalem is called Ægypt, Rev. 11. 8. The second by Roman Idolatry, which is therefore called Babylon here, and c. 17. and c. 18. And the third, when the Devil is let loose, by Gog and Magog, Rev. 20. 8. which are most perfectly parallel to Antiochus, (see the Paraphrase there.) And there is little reason of doubting but these allusions were intended, and there is great decorum and method therein, which ought to be carefully attended.

Αἰγυπτ- Γὼγ καὶ Μαγώγ

d. Οἶνος θυμοῦ

V. 10. The wine of the wrath——] That χολὴ and θυμὸς are all one, that they both promiscuously signifie those intoxicating poisoning mixtures which were put into wine, hath been shew'd in Note on Mat. 27. f. And agreeably to that notion, οἴνῳ θυμῷ is applied in this chapter to signifie two things, abominable sin, and intolerable punishment. The former of them in the 8th verse is joyned with πορνείας fornication, and 'tis the same in effect which it would be if the words had been οἴνῳ ἐσμυρνισμένῳ ἢ πορνείας a myrrhate (bitter poisonous) cup of fornication. Then for punishment 'tis here used ver. 10. being spoken of God, οἴνῳ τῷ θυμῷ τῷ Θεοῦ· not as if θυμὸς signified wrath, (any more then the same word could signifie so v. 8. where 'tis applied to Fornication) but again as θυμὸς and χολὴ are all one, and as they signifie all those poisonous bitter mixtures put into wine; and so οἴνῳ τῷ θυμῷ τοῦ Θεοῦ is God's myrrhate cup of punishments, which he there threatens to pour out on them, expressed again in that that follows, κεκερασμένου ἀκράτου, mix'd unmix'd; Ἄκρατος being the word to signifie wine not mingled with water, merum, strong wine, or red wine, (as חֶמֶר, which is rendred ἄκρατος, unmix'd, Psal. 75. 9. signifies) and κεκερασμένος mix'd with these inebriating spices, meant by θυμὸς, which the Septuagint in that place of the Psalmist, Psal. 75. 9. expresse by πλήρης κράσεως, full of mixture: and then both these put thus together are very proper to expresse the cup of malediction (see Note on Mat. 27. f.) and consequently the curses and fierce punishments of God. Thus c. 16. 19. οἴνῳ θυμοῦ τῆς ὀργῆς αὐτοῦ, the bitter wine of his wrath, not the wine of the anger of his wrath.

Many the like phraſes we find ſcattered in Authors; * Κόνδυ πικείας, in Euſtathius; a cup of bitterneſſe; κύπελλον ὀλέθρου, in Manaſſes, a cup of deſtruction; and again, συμφορῶν ὑπὲρ χείλη τὸν ζωρόν, a cup of afflictions above brim full, and ἀψινθιάζουσα πικρὸν ἐκπόμα κρᾶμα, a bitter cup of the taſt of wormwood; and τὸ τῆς θυμῆ πολήμιον, in † Nicetas Choniata. c. Ἀπάρτι

V. 13. From henceforth] The word ἀπάρτι, (be it ſo read, or ἀπ' ἄρτι in two words) ſignifies, ſaith Euthymius, within a ſhort time, not long after, quickly: ſee Note on Mat. 23. 39. and Mat. 26. 64. In both which (as here) the antient Latine reads amodo, within a while. This verſe belongs to that which went immediately before, v. 12. ὧδε ἡ ὑπομονὴ τῶν ἁγίων ἐστὶν, here is the patience of the Saints, to ſignifie a time of perſecution (ſee ch. 13. 10.) And to that nothing can be more proper then this, that they are to be accounted happieſt that die ſooneſt, that within a while are taken out of this life, from having their part in the evil to come, Iſa. 57. 1. So Eccl. 4. upon mention of the oppreſſors and ſtrength on their ſide, and the no comforter, v. 1. it follows, wherefore I praiſed the dead which are already dead, &c. v. 2. And to this belongs the anſwer of the Spirit in the words following, they ſhall have reſt from their labours, that is, from thoſe perſecutions which attend them here, (ſee Note on Heb. 3. c. 3.) and which only death can give them an end of.

Ὑπομονὴ τῶν ἁγίων

f. Στέφανος χρύσεος

V. 14. A golden crown] That the Στέφανος χρύσεος golden crown is an enſigne of Regal power, is ſufficiently known, and little doubt but here it is ſo, denoting that which in the New Teſtament is oft expreſs'd by the ſtyle of the Kingdome of God, or Chriſt, the deſtroying and ſubduing of his enemies, it being the ſpecial part of the Kings office, debellare ſuperbos, to ſubdue all that hold out againſt him. And as by the golden crown this regal office of Chriſt is here expreſſed, ἀρίπανον ὀξὺ ſo by the δρέπανον ὀξὺ, ſharp ſickle, the approach of that exerciſe of it; the ſickle referring to the ripe harveſt, when the reapers come armed to cut down the corn, and ſharpneſſe denoting the preparedneſſe of this inſtrument for that work, and withall the ſwiftneſſe and univerſality of the exciſion, cutting the whole field down together. And the deſtruction of the Romans (that is, of the heathen part of that people) is here fitly repreſented by it. So in the Goſpel, in the Parable of the wheat and darnel, the harveſt was the time of the exciſion of the Jewes. So Jer. 51. 33. Yet a little while and the time of her harveſt ſhall come, that is, of judgments and exciſion, before expreſs'd by, It is time to threſh her, to which reaping is preparative. And whereas in this chapter there are two ſickles, one to cut down the corn, another the cluſters of grapes, both theſe ſorts of harveſts are to be ſeen, Joel 3. 13. and both for judgments on a people; Put ye in the ſickle, for the harveſt is ripe: Come, get ye down, for the preſs is full, the fats overflow, for wickedneſſe is great. And the reaſon of the phraſe is clear, becauſe God's judgments being attendants and rewards of the ſins of men, when the meaſure of their ſins is filled up, they are then like to a field of ripe corn in time of harveſt, fit to be reaped, ready for Gods vengeance to fall on them; or again to bunches or cluſters of grapes ready for the wine-preſs. And ſo here at the point of time, repreſented in this part of the Viſion (the time of Diocletian) the ſins of heathen Rome were fully ripe, ready for the vengeance of God, when their rage had continued a ſharp perſecution for ten years without intermiſſion, and pillars were erected to Diocletian, as trophies that he had aboliſhed Chriſtianity, and enlarged Paganiſme. See Baronius Anno Dom. 304. §. 8.

g. Ἐξῆλθε ἐκ τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου

V. 18. Power over fire] The θυσιαστήριον Altar here being that whereon the beaſts were offered, and thoſe beaſts to be burnt with fire, and that fire being a denotation of the wrath and vengeance of God againſt the wicked, this Angel coming from the Altar, and having power over fire, is conſequently a miniſter or executioner of Gods wrath upon the wicked impenitents, who are thoſe beaſts to be ſacrificed to God, to be deſtroyed before him.

h. Χιλιάδια χίλια ἑξακόσια

V. 20. A thouſand and ſix hundred furlongs] That the thouſand and ſix hundred furlongs here do referre to the bounds or extent of Judæa, is the opinion of the Learned H. Grotius; and his proof for it is, becauſe S. Jerome, which had lived in thoſe parts, and examined it very accurately, affirms that Judæa was in length an 160 miles, which, accounting every mile to contain ten Greek ſtadia, or furlongs, amounts to 1600 furlongs. But if it be firſt adverted that the wine-preſs is here ſaid to be trodden without the city, and the blood to have extended to this ſpace of 1600 furlongs; ſecondly, that Jeruſalem was in the midſt of the countrey, and conſequently that from thence to the utmoſt bounds of it the ſpace will be but half ſo much as is the longitude of all Judæa; this conjecture will not be ſo agreeable to this place. And therefore it will be more proper, and accordant to the Context, which ſpeaks not of Judæa, but of Rome, to applie it to the adjacent Regions about Rome, to repreſent the bloodineſſe of the warres, and many battails that ſhould in the times of Maximinus, Licinius and Maxentius, lie ſo very heavily upon thoſe countries, which were parts of the Roman Empire, that they cannot be better expreſs'd then by the blood coming to the horſe-bridles, a vaſt effuſion of blood among the Romans.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XV.

1. And I had another viſion concerning the judgments of God upon heathen Rome, and methought I ſaw ſeven Angels with ſeven plagues, all which were to come one after another, and between them to divide the tragedy, and act all Gods vengeance upon them.

1. AND I ſaw another ſigne in heaven, great and marvellous, ſeven Angels having the ſeven laſt plagues, for in them * is filled up the wrath of God.]

2. And methought I ſaw a great multitude of pure zealous Chriſtians (the multitude noted by the ſea, their purity by glaſſe, and their zeal by fire) that had not yielded to the heathen terrors in any the leaſt degree, but continuing conſtant in their purity, and ſtedfaſt confeſſion of faith. And they had in their hands harps, ſuch as were wont to be uſed in the Temple in Gods ſervice, called the muſical inſtruments of God, 1 Chron. 16. 42.

2. And I ſaw as it were a ſea of glaſſe mingled with fire, and them that had gotten the victory over the beaſt, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, ſtand on the ſea of glaſſe, having the harps of God.]

3. And they ſung to Chriſt the ſame ſong (or another after that pattern) that Moſes had done upon the victory and deliverance out of Ægypt, when the Ægyptians were overwhelmed in the ſea, noting their acknowledgment of Gods goodneſſe and mercy to them, who now, they ſaw, would puniſh and deſtroy the perſecuting heathen Emperors. And they magnified the mighty and wonderful works of God, his overruling power and fidelity in making good his promiſes to the Chriſtians his ſervants.

3. And they ſung the ſong of Moſes the ſervant of God, and the ſong of the Lamb, ſaying, Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God † Almighty; juſt and true are thy waies, O King of Saints.]

7. And one of the four living creatures (attending and

8. And the place where this viſion ſeemed to be, that is, the Sanctuary in heaven, ver.

Annotations on Chap. XV.

a. ὁ Ναὸς τῆς σκηνῆς

V. 5. Temple of the Tabernacle] What is here literally meant by ὁ ναὸς τῆς σκηνῆς τοῦ μαρτυρίου, ordinarily rendred the Temple of the tabernacle of the teſtimony, may thus be collected; The tabernacle of the teſtimony clearly ſignifies that tabernacle among the Iſraelites in Moſes's time before the building of the Temple, called אהל מועד the tabernacle of meeting, Exod. 27. 21. and elſewhere the tabernacle of the teſtimony, Act. 7. 44. becauſe God was there pleaſed to exhibit himſelf, and give teſtimony of his preſence, Act. 27. 22. In that there were two regions; the firſt called the Sanctuary, the ſecond דביר or Oracle, the Holy of Holies: and this is here and ver. 6. called ναὸς, and ſo again ch. 16. 1, and 17. not as that ſignifies the whole Temple, but a part of the Tabernacle, viz. the Holy place, or Holy of Holies. What ναὸς elſewhere ſignifies, ſee Note on Act. 19. e. and Rev. 14. c. out of the Scholiaſt on Nazianzen στηλιτευτ. α'. who diſtinguiſhes ναὸς in the Chriſtian Church from ζυὸς and πύλη: the two latter, ſaith he, ſignifie ἱερὸν ὅλον the whole Temple or Church, but the former the place where the Communion-table ſtands, which being divided from the reſt of the Quire, is to that as the Holy of Holies to the Sanctuary. And in this ſenſe of ναὸς it is that Pſal. 82. 2. the vulgar Latine, and from thence the Engliſh in our Liturgie, read Temple, where the Hebrew have דביר, and from thence our Bibles read Oracle. From this place God promiſes to ſpeak to Moſes of all things which he would give him in command to the people of Iſrael, Exod. 25. 23. And accordingly this opening of this holy place, or this Holy of Holies in this tabernacle of the Teſtimony, is a repreſentation of God's revealing his will as from the Oracle concerning heathen Rome; and ſo ſtraight the ſeven Angels came out from thence, habited like the High-prieſt (who alone was permitted to goe into the Holy of Holies in the Temple) and as executioners of this decree have the ſeven plagues, or blows, or judgments, v. 6. that is, come ready to act a complete deſtruction, ſuch as was before meant by the ἑπτὰ βρονταὶ ſeven thunders in the Viſion about the Jews, ch. 10. * holy place: ſee c. 15. a. † land γῆν

1. AND I heard a great voice out of the * Temple, ſaying to the ſeven Angels, Go your waies, and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the † earth.]

1. And the ſeven Angels, the executioners of God's wrath, ch. 15. 6. being thus come abroad, methought I heard a proclamation coming out of the Holy of Holies (the place of Gods exhibiting himſelf) addreſs'd unto them, and appointing them to go and pour out thoſe vials, that is, thoſe judgments of God, upon the Roman Empire, (ſee note on ch. 13. k.)

* boil ἕλκος

2. And the firſt went and poured out his vial [a] upon the earth, and there fell a noiſome and [a] grievous * ſore upon men which had the mark of the beaſt, and upon them which worſhipped his image.]

2. And the firſt Angel did a. ſo, & there fell heavy plagues upon them, which ſwept away a multitude of heathens and carnal temporizing Chriſtians, both in the city of Rome and in other places, (ſee note a,)

3. And the ſecond Angel poured out his vial upon the ſea, and it became as the blood of a dead man, and every living ſoul died in the ſea.]

3. And the ſecond Angel did likewiſe, and there fell great ſlaughters upon the city of Rome, by the cruelty of the Emperors, and on occaſion of ſedition, &c. and very great multitudes died thereby, (ſee note a.)

4. And the third Angel poured out his vial upon the rivers, and fountains of waters, and they became blood.]

4. And the third Angel did likewiſe, and methought his vial fell on the other cities and provinces of the Empire, and a great deal of warre follow'd (note a.) and a multitude were ſlain there alſo.

5. And

5,6,7. And this Angel that pour'd out the vial upon the waters v. 4. God's judgments on those other cities and provinces, did it as a just judgment on them, for the blood of Christians that had been shed by them, and as an act of pity and relief to the persecuted, whose persecutions ended by this means: and so 'twas acknowledged by the souls of those that had been slain by them, (see note on ch. 6. e.)

b

5. And I heard the Angel of the waters say, Thou art righteous, O Lord, which art, and wast, [b] and * shalt be, because thou hast judged † thus.

6. For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink, for they are worthy.

7. And I heard another out of the altar say, Even so, Lord God * almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments.]

* or pitiful, or holy, for the most & best copies read ὁ ὅσιος, not ἰσόμοιρος, † these things, see note b. * ruler of all things, παντοκράτωρ † to it, αὐτῷ

8. And the execution of the fourth Angel was by bringing a great drought and famine on the Empire, such as was in Maximinus's time.

8. And the fourth Angel poured out his vial upon the sun, and power was given † unto him to scorch men [c] with fire.]

9. And though this famine tormented them exceedingly, yet were they so farre from repenting or amending their waies, from receiving the faith of Christ, that they railed at the Christian religion, as the author of all their miseries, and so were more alien'd from it: see note c.

9. And men were * scorched with great heat, and blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues; and they repented not to give him glory.]

10. And the fifth Angel's vial was poured out, not upon the persons of men, but upon the government it self, which was sore afflicted and distress'd (see Jer. 13. 16. where for Darkness the Targum reads Tribulation or Affliction) by the invasion of the Barbarians, and the Emperors were much troubled at it, but could not help it.

10. And the fifth Angel poured out his vial upon the † [d] seat of the beast, and his kingdome was full of darkness, and they gnawed their tongues for pain,]

11. And as before ver. 8. so now again these invasions of the Barbarians were imputed as a punishment inflicted on them for the permitting of Christianity, and so made them set themselves more violently against the Christians; so farre were they from reforming, or mending by this means.

11. And blasphemed the God of heaven, because of their pains and their * sores, and repented not † of their deeds.]

12. And the execution of the sixth Angel was the destroying of Maxentius's forces in Italy, and so weakening of Rome, the mystical Babylon (noted here by Euphrates, the river that belongs to Babylon) and making it capable of being taken, and possess'd by Constantine and his sons, which were Christians.

12. And the sixth Angel poured out his vial upon the great river [e] Euphrates, and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the [f] Kings * of the East might be prepared.]

13. And methought I saw three diabolical spirits, like the frogs of Ægypt, one coming from the devil, another from the heathen worship, and the third from the false prophet: 1. The response of the devils raised by Maxentius's command, 2. the encouragement of the augurs, or heathen priests that divined by entrails, 3. some false predictions out of some passages of the Sibyl's writings.

13. And I saw † three [g] unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the false prophet.]

† the word τρία three is wanting in the Ks MS.

14. And all these were made use of to deceive Maxentius, and give him confidence that he should prosper in his tyranny, and holding out against Constantine, which was the occasion of Constantine's setting upon and destroying his army, of his entring Rome, and of that blow that befell Idolatry by this means.

14. For they are the spirits of devils working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the * earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the † battel of that great day of God Almighty.]

15. (Such unexpected sudden changes as these, such secret undiscernable proceedings of God's providence, may in all reason be admonitions to all to be watchfull, and not to comply with the present prevailing power in any unchristian or uncomely manner, lest when they have done so, that which they have designed, as their greatest security, be indeed their greatest danger.)

15. Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.]

16. And these evill spirits excited him and engaged him and all his armies in a fight, wherein they were utterly vanquish'd and destroyed. See note e.

16. And * he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue [h] Armagedon.]

* they, see note a.

17. And the seventh Angel poured out his vial into the air, (noting a decree of heaven now to be executed on the earth) and presently, methought, I heard a proclamation come out of the Holy of Holies, from the throne of God, denoting the going out of God's decree, which was delivered in these words, It was, or hath been, that is, Heathen Rome is now destroyed, (And this was after in Honorius's time, as will be more fully set down ch. 17.)

17. And the seventh Angel poured out his vial into the aire, and there came a great voice out † of the Temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, [i] * It is done.]

18. And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings: and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, † so mighty an earthquake, and so great.]

18. And methought there were thunders, and lightnings, and an earthquake, such as never had been known before, denoting this vast change, (the greatest of any) that now was by this means wrought in the world.

19. And Rome being, at this time of Honorius, divided into three parties, one Heathen, a second Orthodox, a third Heretical, impure (see note on chap. 17. c.) wicked Christians, this brought in Alaricus, and by that means destruction on all heathen Rome. And thus was God's just vengeance executed upon them.

19. And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell, and * great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of † the wine of the fierceness of his wrath.]

* Babylon the great, Βαβυλὼν ἡ μεγάλη † the bitter wine of his wrath, see note on ch. 14. c.

20. And as 'tis ordinary for islands and hills to be removed by earthquakes, so now the maritime towns and strong holds were destroyed by this incursion of the Gothes.

20. And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found.]

21. And this judgment fell upon them most visibly and discernibly from heaven, and withall in a most heavy unsupportable manner: and yet after this such obduration of hearts possessed them of the heathens that survived these judgments, that they were the more obstinate in their Idolatrous heathen courses, and still railed at the Christians, as the authors of all these miseries that befell them.

21. * And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent: and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail, for the plague thereof was exceeding great.]

* And the hail about the weight of a talent descends out of heaven upon men, Καὶ χάλαζα μεγάλη ὡς πταλαντιαία καταβαίνει ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους

Annotations

2. ἡ γῆ, καὶ ἡ θάλασσα, καὶ οἱ ποταμοὶ καὶ αἱ πηγαί

V. 2. Upon the earth] What is here meant by ἡ γῆ, and ἡ θάλασσα, and οἱ ποταμοὶ καὶ πηγαί, the earth or land, and the sea, and the rivers and fountains of waters, v. 2, 3, 4. may appear by v. 1. where the Angels are appointed to pour out their vials upon the earth or land. That in all reason signifies the Roman Empire, the thing represented in these Visions, as before it signified the nation and people of the Jewes (chap. 7. Note b.) And there is no reason to affix any nice critical notation to either of these single, that the land, v. 2. should signifie severally, and so the sea, v. 3. and the rivers, v. 4. but to take all together for that which was meant by the land, v. 1. for so the series here requires, where the Angels, that were commanded to pour out their vials on the earth, pour them out upon these three, evidently noting these three to be the distribution of that one, and so all one with it. So ch. 14. 7. God is described as the Creator of the heaven, and earth, and sea, and fountains of waters, where all those latter three are set to denote that which is elsewhere ordinarily called the earth, and no more, in opposition to heaven, that is, this inferior, terrestrial globe, and all in it. To this may be added, that when the judgments are represented to fall upon Judæa, some are said to fall on the land, others on the sea, others on the trees, c. 7. not necessarily signifying such a separation of the judgments, some on this, some on that part, but the whole nation together, on which all those judgments fell; and this indeed agreeable to what we read of the judgments that fell on Ægypt, where though some of them were caused by the signes that Moses wrought upon the land, Exod. 8. 16. others by smiting of the waters, streams, rivers and ponds, and all their gathering together of waters, Exod. 7. 19. and so again ch. 8. 5. yet 'tis manifest that the judgments thus produced by every of these, (each smiting of his rod there being proportionable to the pouring out of a vial here) fell indifferently on the whole land, and not one judgment on one part, another on another: And so sure is it to be understood in this place. Many judgments were to be poured out upon the Roman Empire, and by all of them together the whole heathen part of it destroyed. This consideration makes it unnecessary farther to enquire into the productions of the several Vials what each of them distinctly signified, it being sufficient that each of them notes some kind of destruction; and the number of seven being a perfect number, the seven Angels, and their seven vials, and their seven effusions signifie utter destruction, and not necessarily any more, unless it be this, that it was not all at once, but by several degrees and several sorts of judgments, those that ordinarily bring destructions upon provoking people, that have filled up the measure of their iniquities, λοιμὸς, λιμὸς, πόλεμος, infectious diseases, famines and warres: and that these in a very remarkable manner fell upon the Roman Empire about these times, appears as by all histories Ecclesiastical and prophane, so especially by S. Austin in his first book De civ. Dei, written on purpose to defend Christian religion from that charge which was laid upon it, that it brought down all judgments upon the Empire. Which being false, as it was urged by the Heathens to the prejudice of Christianity, viz. that the Judgments came for that sin of permitting Christianity in the Empire, and contempt of their Idol-worships; so was it most true, that for the Heathens standing out and persecuting the Christian faith, most heavy wasting judgments were come upon them. Of the three first Vials it may be yet further noted, that they may have a peculiar aspect on the plagues of Ægypt: the first, that of the Ἕλκος κακὸν καὶ πονηρὸν, the evil and grievous boil, that is, infectious, and very painfull, will be answerable to the boil breaking out upon man and beast through all the land, Exod. 9. 9. and signifie some infectious disease, plague and pestilence, which we know breaks out in boils. So likewise the second and the third, the sea becoming as blood, ver. 3. and the rivers and fountains becoming as blood, ver. 4. are answerable to Moses's stretching out his hand and smiting upon the waters of Ægypt, their streams, and their rivers, and their ponds, and all their pools, or collections of water, upon which they became blood, Exod. 7. 19, 20. Now for these three the histories of those times are very remarkable, viz. for the great pestilences, and horrible effusions of blood. That which Herodian tells us of Commodus's reign, will sufficiently qualifie that for the time of the pouring out of these three vials. At that time, saith he, l. 1. a very great pestilence reigned over all Italy, but especially in the city of Rome (and Dio tells us, that there died above two thousand a day in the city) and a vast number both of beasts and men perished thereby. And so this may be commodiously the pouring out the vial upon the earth, belonging not only to the city of Rome, but to all Italy, as ἡ γῆ the land was wont to signifie not only Jerusalem, but all Judæa. Hereupon the Emperor was perswaded to remove to Laurentum, so call'd from the grove of bay-trees there, the smell whereof the Physicians thought usefull against the plague. And in like manner they prescribed sweet unguents and odours to anoint their ears and noses, to keep out or overcome the pestilential vapour. But nevertheless, saith he, the disease daily increased, and swept away a multitude of men and beasts. As for the blood that was then spilt, the same Author gives us a large story; Cleander, saith he, a servant of the Emperours, bought out of Phrygia, and grown up with him from his youth, and advanced to greatest offices in court and army, aspired to the Empire; To that purpose bought up a vast quantity of corn (which caused a great famine also at Rome) thinking thereby in time of need to oblige the citizens and souldiers, and to gain them all to his party. But the event was contrary; for the famine raging, and the cause of it being visible, all the citizens run out of the city to the Emperour, requiring this Encloser to be put to death. Cleander by his power keeping them from the Emperour (whose voluptuousness made this easie for him to doe) sends out the Emperour's forces armed and hors'd against them, which made an huge slaughter among them, and in driving them into the city gates, by their horses and swords, saith he, meeting with foot-men unarm'd, they kill'd a great part of the people. Which when they that were in the city understood, they got to the top of the houses, and with stones and tiles threw at the souldiers, and by this means put them to flight, and in the pursuit beating them off from their horses, killed great multitudes of them: and this continued very cruelly for some time. And the appeasing of this cost a great deal more blood, the Emperour causing Cleander to be put to death, and his sons after him, and then a great many more, saith he, not daring to confide in any body. To which that author immediatly adds the many prodigies which followed at that time, and the burning down of the Temple of Peace; which beside that it was the treasury of a great part of the wealth of the city, and was accompanied with the burning of a great deal more of the buildings of the city, and among them of the Temple of Vesta, the fire continuing for many daies, till rain from heaven put it out, (which made them impute the whole matter to the anger of the gods) besides all this, I say, it was by all then look'd on as a preſage of great warres, which, ſaith he, accordingly followed. And ſo in this one paſſage of ſtory in that Author we have the interpretation of theſe three vials. As great a plague as ever hath been read of, to be ſutable to the firſt; and a great deal of killing both in the ſedition, and by the cruelty of the Emperour, and by the fire, and by the warres that followed, (wherein the whole region, and not only the city of Rome was concerned) anſwerable to the two latter, the ſea, that is, the multitude of the city, and the rivers and ſprings of waters, the other provinces and cities become blood. But beſide theſe under Commodus, there was ſtore of the like judgments in the following Emperours times, untill Conſtantine: A very great Peſtilence under Gallus, another under Gallienus, both deſcribed by Zozimus; another at the end of Decius, on occaſion of which S. Cyprian wrote his book of Mortality. And in Maximinus's time, ſaith Euſebius, whilſt he and his armies were ſore diſtreſſed by a warre with the Armenians, the reſt of the inhabitants of the cities were grievouſly devoured with famine and peſtilence, infinite numbers dying in the cities, more in the countreys and villages, καὶ αἱ πάλαι τῆ ἀγροικῶν πολύανδροι ἀπογεφυραὶ, and the numbers of husbandmen which had formerly been very great, were almoſt all of them ſwept away by famine and peſtilence. ſaith Euſebius Eccl. hiſt. l. 9. c. 8. And for wars and effuſion of blood and ſlaughters, the hiſtories are all along full of them, and need not be here recited.

b. Ὁσιος

V. 5. And ſhall be] In ſtead of ὁσιώμενος he that ſhall be the Copies generally read ὅσιος. That is anſwerable to the Hebrew חסיד pitiful and merciful, as that is more then צדקה δικαιοσύνη juſtice or righteouſneſs, as hath oft been ſaid. And ſo it is fitly ſuperadded here to the δίκαιος εἶ thou art juſt or righteous, preceding. That the juſtice of God, here acknowledged in theſe vengeances on heathen Rome, denotes his punitive juſtice, there is no doubt, and accordingly follows, ὅτι ταῦτα ἔκρινας, becauſe thou haſt judged theſe. Where the ταῦτα ſeems to denote the perſons neutrally ſet down, the inhabitants of the Empire, which are here ſuppoſed to be judged, that is, juſtly puniſhed, and of whom it follows, ὅτι αἷμα ἁγίων καὶ προφητῶν ἐξέχεαν becauſe they have ſhed the blood of thy ſaints and prophets, that is, of the Chriſtians, and thoſe that by their preaching would have wrought reformation among them, and ſo did act as Prophets, and had the portion of Prophets, were reſiſted and ſlain by them. But beſides this punitive juſtice expreſs'd by theſe judgments, there was alſo ἐποίησε pity, compaſſion to the perſecuted Chriſtians, whoſe ſufferings were abated and taken off by this means. Thus 'tis often to be obſerved in Euſebius's ſtory, particularly at the end of the great ſlaughters, and famine, and plague in Maximinus's time, l. 9. c. 8. (mentioned Note a.) Hereupon, ſaith he, God, the defender of Chriſtians, having ſhew'd his wrath and indignation againſt all mortals for their perſecuting us, reſtored the pleaſant and bright ſplendor of his providence toward us, ſo that from that time peace and light, with the great admiration of all, ſhined out and was revealed to us that ſat in darkneſs before, ſhewing us that God hath the overſight of our affairs continually, chaſtiſing and afflicting us for a time, but after he hath diſciplin'd us ſufficiently, appearing favourable and propitious to us again.

c. ἐν πυρὶ

V. 8. With fire] If ἐν πυρὶ by fire were here literally to be underſtood, many completions there would be of it, by great fires, in the city of Rome eſpecially, within the ſpace referred to by this Viſion. One remarkable one hath been mention'd in Commodus's time, Note a. out of Herodian l. 1. falling on the Temple of Peace, and at length coming to the Temple of Veſta, and burning many great houſes, and ſo continuing for many daies, till the rain from heaven put it out, and ſo by the heathens, ſaith he, conceived to be begun alſo, as it was ended, by the gods without humane means. And this being ſuch, coming from heaven, not from any lower cauſe, may the more probably belong to this place, where the Sun is ſaid to have power given it to ſcorch men with fire, the Sun in the firmament, the great fire of the world, being commodiouſly enough ſaid to ſcorch them, or to ſet them on fire (ſo καυματίζειν ſignifies) who were burnt by fire from heaven. But it is not improbable that the Suns ſcorching of men, denoted ordinarily by καῦμα, may ſignifie that ſcorching and drying up the fruits of the earth from whence a dearth proceeds, and ſo be here ſet to expreſſe a famine: ſo 'tis ſaid of the ſeed on the ſtony ground, that as ſoon as it ſprang up, ἐκαυματίσθη it was ſcorched, and, as it follows, ἐξηράνθη withered away. And many ſuch dearths there were in the ſtories of thoſe times. A moſt eminent one in Maximinus's time, mentioned by Euſebius l. 9. c. 8. Some, ſaith he, for the leaſt bit of victuals, parting with that which was moſt precious to them: one meaſure of corn ſold for two thouſand five hundred Atticks: ſome κατὰ βραχὺ in a little time ſelling all their poſſeſſions to buy bread: others eating graſſe, and therewith poiſonous herbs. Noble women going out of the city to the countrey to beg bread. Others ſtaggering and falling down in the ſtreets, and howling out for one bit of bread, and able to ſpeak no word but that they were famiſh'd. And at length the dogs raving for hunger, and falling upon the men, in their own defence they fell on killing and eating dogs. As ſad a deſcription of raging famine as hath been read of, ſave in time of ſieges. Another famine there was in Commodus's time (mentioned from Herodian Note a.) which put the whole city into a ſedition, but that not comparable to this, and cauſed by Cleander's inſatiate covetouſneſſe and ambition, more then the ſcorching of the Sun. That which here follows, as the effect of this famine, that they blaſphemed the name of God, may moſt probably be the heathens railing at the Chriſtians, as the cauſe of all their evils; for ſo the antients obſerve of them, that whenever plague or famine befell them, preſently they cryed out, Chriſtiani ad leones, Let the Chriſtians be put to death, as the authors of their miſeries. An eminent place we have to this purpoſe in Arnobius l. 10. where naming the very judgments which are here expreſs'd by the foregoing Vials, peſtilences, wars, and dearths or famines, he ſaith of the heathens, that when theſe befell them, they preſently cryed out that ſince Chriſtians began to be in the world, terrarum Orbem periiſſe, the whole world was deſtroyed, and all mankind afflicted with all ſorts of evils: and S. Cyprian in that known place ad Demetrian. That many wars break out, that plagues and famines, that the earth is kept long without any rain, nobis imputari, 'tis by the heathens imputed to us Chriſtians.

d. Θρόνος θηρίου

V. 10. Seat of the beaſt] What θρόνος θηρίου the throne, or ſeat, of the beaſt ſignifies, may thus be gathered; θηρίον the beaſt ſignifies Idol-worſhip, c. 13. 1. and as the throne of that may ſignifie the place where it reſides, ſo it may ſignifie alſo that which ſuſtains and ſupports it, a ſeat being that which ſuſtains and holds up from falling that which reſts upon it. This was the power of the Roman Empire, the ſtrength and dignity thereof, to which ſo great a part of the world was ſubjected, and which it made uſe of to maintain the Idol-worſhip againſt Chriſtianity. And ſo the throne of the beaſt is expounded in the next words by βασιλεία the Kingdome or Empire of Rome. Now that which is here ſaid to befall the Empire by the pouring out of the fifth vial is that it was ἐσκοτωμένη darkned, that is, loſt much of its ſplendor which before it enjoyed, which which belongs clearly to the incurſions of the Barbarians, Perſians, Goths, Almans, &c. about theſe times which are here deſcribed, as every where appears in ſtory. As for the πόνος pain that here follows, it is the great grief and anxiety that it coſt them to contend and ſecure themſelves from theſe Barbarians, who being ſo contemptible in the eyes of the Romans, it was matter of great indignation to them to be thus infeſted by them, as Ægypt by flies and lice. And whereas, v. 11. ἕλκη boils are joyned with πόνοι pains, I ſuppoſe thoſe boils may again refer to that plague of Ægypt, (as the darkning of the Kingdome plainly doth) and denote the effects of the Barbarians incurſions: as the boils, Exod. 9. 9. were produced by ſcattering aſhes of the furnace toward heaven, to which the inrodes of thoſe Barbarians in reſpect of their multitudes might fitly be reſembled. And then their blaſpheming of the God of heaven, is their railing at Chriſt and Chriſtianity, as that which in the heathens opinion brought all theſe evils upon them. c. V. 12. Euphrates] That it is agreeable to the calling of Rome Babylon (ſee Note on c. 18. a.) to ſet Euphrates, the River that belongs to Babylon, to ſignifie Tyber that belongs to Rome, hath been formerly ſhew'd, c. 9. Note e. And that it ſo ſignifies here, there is little doubt. From hence it follows, that the drying up of Euphrates, being an alluſion to the hiſtory of Cyrus, prophetically ſet down Jer. 50. 38. and drought is upon her waters, and they ſhall be dried up, and c. 51. where is mention of the drying up her ſea, and making her ſprings dry, v. 36. it muſt in reaſon be interpreted thereby. There in the taking of Babylon, Cyrus turned away the river Euphrates, and entred the city through the channel thereof. (See Oroſius l. 11. c. 6.) And ſo the drying of the river being the preparative to the taking the city, and the making that weak and acceſſible which otherwiſe was impregnable, this phraſe of drying up the water of Euphrates is thought commodious to be made uſe of, to expreſſe the weakning of the ſtrength of Rome, and making it conquerable, or, as it here follows, that the way of the Kings——might be prepared. To prepare a way we know is to remove difficulties and obſtructions, to level and plain a paſſage, and that in the Prophets expreſs'd by exalting valleys, and bringing hils low, and plaining the rough places. And when rivers or waters are in the way, then the drying them up, is preparing the way, making them paſſable. And ſo the fitting the city of Rome for conqueſt by Conſtantine and his ſons (who are here called Kings from the riſing of the Sun, ſee Note f.) is the full interpretation of drying up Euphrates, that the way of the Kings might be prepared. Of this the hiſtory is clear in Euſebius Eccl. hiſt. l. 9. c. 9. (and ſo in Zozimus alſo) that Maxentius having faſtned himſelf in Rome (out of which he went not himſelf, having no confidence in the love and fidelity of the people) he fortified every place and region and city with armies for guards, and had a thouſand troops of ſouldiers to ly in ambuſh in every part of Italy, and the reſt of his dominions where the enemy was likely to come: Theſe ſure were the obſtructions, or difficulties, in Conſtantine's way to Rome, which are here to be dryed up, or removed; and accordingly it follows in the hiſtory, that Conſtantine being aſſiſted by God ſet upon his firſt, and ſecond, and third army, and overcame them all; and poſſeſſing himſelf of the greateſt part of Italy, came cloſe up to Rome. And ſo 'tis viſible what this drying up the river, by which their way was prepared, ſignifies, the ſubduing thoſe armies in Italy, ſo that now nothing withheld his paſſage from Rome; which is here looked on as a very great thing, proportionable to Cyrus's turning the river Euphrates, and entring Babylon through the channel of it. But there was yet one difficulty more to be conquer'd, before Conſtantine could enter Rome. For his onely deſigne being to deliver the Romans from the tyranny of Maxentius, and not to do any hurt, but rather bring relief to the inhabitants of the city, there was now no way to reconcile this difficulty, whilſt Maxentius remained fortified in the city. And therefore in God's wonderful providence it was ſo diſpoſed, that Maxentius and all his party came out of Rome, but in ſtead of joyning battail with Conſtantine, fled from him immediately; and having formerly built a treacherous bridge over Tyber, on deſign to draw Conſtantine's army over it, and ſo by the failing of the bridge to drown them, Maxentius himſelf and his forces are forced that way, and drowned in the pit which they had prepared for others, and himſelf and his life-guard were the firſt that thus periſhed. This ſo ſignal a deſtruction Euſebius thinks fit to compare to the Iſraelites victory over Pharaoh in the Red ſea, and ſaith it was according to the prediction of the divine oracles in all probability referring to this Viſion here. The concluſion of it was, that this being done, Conſtantine came Conqueror to Rome, where without any oppoſition he was received by young and old, Senators and Nobles, and all the people of Rome, with chearful countenances and joyous acclamations, as the preſerver and benefactor of them all; and commanding the ſign of the croſſe to be ſet on the right hand of his ſtatue, he affix'd theſe words in Latine, Hoc ſalutari ſigno, veraci fortitudinis indicio, civitatem noſtram jugo Tyranni ereptam liberavi, et S. P. Q. R. liberatum priſco ſplendori & claritati reſtitui, By this ſalvifick ſign, the true expreſſion of fortitude, I have freed our city, and delivered it from the tyrants yoke, and have reſtored the Senate and people of Rome to their antient ſplendor and brightneſs. And in like manner the Senate dedicated to him a triumphall arch, Liberatori urbis, fundatori quietis, To the deliverer of the city, and founder of their peace, as may be ſeen in Euſebius, Socrates, and Sozomen and others. And ſo this was a farther completion of this prophecie, and a laſt part of the drying up Euphrates, (parallel to that of the drying up of the Red ſea before the Iſraelites) and preparing Conſtantine's peaceable entrance into the city.

Ib. Kings of the eaſt——] What ἀπ' ἀνατολῶν ἡλίου, from the riſing of the Sun, ſignifies, may be reſolved by theſe two conſiderations; firſt, that the Kings or Magi that came to worſhip Chriſt, ſoon after his birth, whilſt Herod deſigned the killing of him, are ſaid to come ἀπ' ἀνατολῶν from the riſing of the Sun, Mat. 2. 1. And agreeably to that, Conſtantine and his ſons, which had given up their names to the Chriſtian faith, and were promoters of it whilſt Maxentius perſecuted it, may be thus in Prophetick ſtyle fitly deſcribed by the Kings from the riſing of the Sun. Secondly, Chriſt himſelf is called Ἀνατολὴ the riſing Sun (ſee Note on Luc. 1. 5.) and ſo ſeems to be called here, c. 7. 2. where the Angel aſcending from the Eaſt is one ſent immediately by Chriſt; and then βασιλῆς ἀπ' ἀνατολῶν Kings from the riſing of the Sun may be a very fit phraſe to expreſſe Chriſtian Kings. And it is to be obſerved, that Βασιλεῖς Kings, in this Book, is not confined to the Emperors or ſupreme Governours, but is more looſely uſed for Commanders, all in authority (ſee Note g. and c. 11. Note f.) and ſo may in the Plural be appliable to Conſtantine and his ſons, and the Chriſtian Commanders under him.

g. V. 13. Unclean Spirits] What is here meant by πνεύματα ἀκάθαρτα unclean ſpirits may in part be reſolved by Euſebius in the ſtory of Maxentius, Eccl. hiſt. l. 9. c. 9. where the firſt thing that he ſaith of him, is, that he relied on Magical arts in this whole matter, and thereupon kept himself up close in Rome, and would not go out of it. So again De vita Constant. l. 1. c. 30. At last he fell to Magick and Sorcery; sometimes cut up women great with child, sometimes ript up the bowels of tender infants, sometimes killed lions, all to divine thereby: He often used wicked adjurations to raise up Devils, saith he, by whose help he might avert the violence of the warre from him, hoping that they would help him to the victory. Now these impure spi- τρεῖς rits are here said to be three, but the Kings MS. wants that word τρεῖς three. If we read it without three, then it is already explained, that he made use of Magick and Augury. But if the word three be retained, then either may it signifie that he betook himself wholly to these arts, (the number of three, as of seven, having oft no other importance in it but to signifie a great deal) or else peculiarly these three sorts; first, Augury, or divination by entrails; secondly, Calling up of devils, (both particularly mention'd by Eusebius) and thirdly, the use of the Sibylline Oracles, which the Roman Sorcerers and Diviners generally dealt in, and Maxentius made use of; see Zozimus l. 2. Of these ὡς Βάτραχοι it is farther said, that they were ὡς βάτραχοι as frogs, referring to those creatures brought forth upon Ægypt by the Magicians at Pharaohs command, Exod. 8. 7. Of which, as it is known that they are impure creatures, breeding and dwelling in the mire, and so these impure spirits or arts are fitly compared to them; so it is also observable, how useless and unprofitable they are, they croak, but do nothing else, and so they fitly resemble these Magical arts, which made a great noise, but never brought him the least advantage, but rather hastened his ruine, by relying on them. Then these frogs are said to come out of the mouth of the Dragon, and the beast, and the false prophet: which again, if the word three be not retained, will conclude these Magical arts, which he made use of, to proceed promiscuously from these three; but if the word τρεῖς three be retained, then it will be proper to confine the responses of the devils, when they were raised by him, to the first of the three, those that came out of the τοῦ Δράκοντος mouth of the Dragon, for that is every where the Devils title in this Book, (see Note on c. 12. d. and 13. b.) and the devils being (as was said) raised by Maxentius to direct and assist him, the first of these frogs is said to have come out of the devils mouth immediately. Secondly, the art of divining by entrails, and to that purpose killing of women and children as well as beasts, being directly a piece of Heathenisme, confined to their Augurs and Priests; the second of these frogs is said to τοῦ Θηρίου have come out of the mouth of the Beast, that is, Idol worship, so called, c. 13. 1. the Priests being the mouth thereof. Thirdly, the heathen Prophets undertaking to fetch grounds of their predictions most frequently from the Books of the Sibyls, such fragments thereof as were remaining among them; the third frog is said to τοῦ ψευδοπροφήτου come out of the mouth of the false prophet, that is, of the Colledge of diviners, which thus by study in those Oracles undertook to foretell things to come. And of Ποιῦντα σημεῖα all these it is said, that they did signes, either by foretelling sometimes things that came to pass, which gave them authority among men, or else by shewing some deceitfull wonders: and that they went out, ἐπὶ, upon, Βασιλεῖς τῆς οἰκουμένης or to, the Kings of the whole world, that is, to Maxentius the Emperor, and his Commanders under him, call'd Βασιλεῖς Kings in the Plural, (see Note f.) and incited them to the war of the great day of God, that is, to fight with Constantine, that instrument of Gods to bring in Christianity into the Empire.

V. 16. Armageddon] What Armageddon, which h. is here said to be an Hebrew word, signifies, or of what Ἁρμαγεδών composition it is, is a matter of some question. The Learned H. Grotius conceives it to be הר מנדון the mount of meeting, to note the place and battel where the armies met, viz. on Constantine's side 90000 foot and 8000 horse, of Germans, Gauls and Britans, on Maxentius's side 170000 foot, and 18000 horse, of Romans, Italians, &c. in Zozimus: and that this is here said in reference not to the valley of Megiddo, where Josias was slain, but to the waters of Megiddo, Judg. 5. 9. where the Canaanites were slain by Barac; which appears the more probable, because the Hebrew הר is in Greek rendred Ἀρ, as Ἄργαειζιν in Eusebius Præp. for הר גריזין mount Gerizin. But another composition of the word may be yet more probable, viz. that of Drusius, that it be made up of חרמא and גדדין, the excision or destruction of their Armies, as גד in Hebrew, or their fortunes, (all their former good successes) as גד in Chaldee signifies. And so the clear meaning of the verse is this, that the evil spirits. v. 14. the Magicians and Augurs, &c. gathered them together, (so 'tis said ver. 14. συναγαγεῖν αὐτὰς, and to them in the Plural neuter belongs the συνήγαγεν in the Singular) caused them to fight this great battel with Constantine, which was the utter destruction of that great army of the Heathens, and so a very heavy judgment or excision, the effect of the Vial of the sixth Angel. This victory of Constantine over Maxentius was so signal and considerable, that, as Onuphrius tells us, Fast. l. 2. the Indictions (that known way of computing of times among the Romans) were taken from thence: ab eaque die primam Indictionem inchoari, saith Baronius, and from that day the first Indiction began; ut liberatam à Maxentii tyrannide urbem & Ecclesiam indicaret, that it might proclaim and commemorate the freeing of the City and Church from Maxentius's tyranny. By which it may appear, how memorable a passage this was, and how fit to be the matter of this Vision. See Abr. Bucholcers Chronology Anno Chr. 312.

V. 17. It is done] It is usual in Prophecies to set i. down the sad events most covertly. Thus * Scaliger Γέγονε * Annot. in Festum. observes, Augures sedentes in templo abstinebant vocibus malè nominatis, ideóque Alteram avem potiùs quàm Aversam dicebant; The Augurs, as sitting in the Temple, abstained from the sadder expressions, and therefore when they meant to signifie any ill abroad, they called it not the Averse but the Other Augury. Accordingly is that style of Horace,

* Sperat infestis, metuit secundis, * Od. 10. l. 2.
Alteram sortem——

This the Græcians call † μηδὲν ὑγιὲς φλαῦρον, and † Demosth. καὶ Ἀνδροτίων & * μὴ βλασφημῶν, not to deliver any sad thing, not to * Id. Const. Leptin. speak any hard or evil saying. And their name for this figure is ἀφημισμός. Agreeable to this is the ordinary style of fuit, or vixit, he hath been, or he hath lived, for mortuus est, he is dead; fuimus Troes, fuit Ilium—— we have been Trojans, Troy hath been; and in * Demosthenes, νῦν ὁ πορίσει, now it shall be rich, * Const. Lept. to signifie that it hath been, and is yet poor. Δεῖ γὰρ οὕτω λέγειν, καὶ μὴ βλασφημῶν, saith he, for thus I must speak, and not use grosse or harsh expressions. And just such is γέγονε here, It hath been, that is, now it ceaseth to be, it is destroyed, by this figure ἀφημισμὸς, fit for Prophecies.

CHAP. XVII.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND there came one of the ſeven Angels which had the ſeven vials, and talked with me, ſaying unto me, Come hither, I will ſhew unto thee the judgment of the great whore, that ſitteth upon many waters,]

1. And another viſion I ſaw to the ſame purpoſe. One of thoſe executioners of God's wrath came unto me, ſaying, I will ſhew thee the vengeance that is ready to befall the Imperial dignity of Rome, fitly entitled the great whore, (great in it ſelf, and whore for their impieties againſt God, their worſhip of many heathen gods, directly owning that title, as an harlot is ſhe that takes in many others in ſtead of the one husband) ſitting, that is, ruling, over many waters, that is, much people, having many nations under her dominion.

2. With whom the Kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.]

2. From the power and authority whereof many other kingdomes (ſee c. 13. 14.) have been confirmed and fortified in their idolatrous courſes, and had their falſe worſhip propagated to them, the whole Roman Empire running mad after her vile heathen practices.

3. So he carried me away in the Spirit into the wilderneſſe: and I ſaw [a] a woman ſit upon a ſcarlet-coloured beaſt, full of names of blaſphemy, having ſeven heads and [b] ten horns.]

3. And in this viſion methought I was in a deſart, (fit to repreſent the deſolation that was to be expreſſed in that viſion) and there I ſaw what he had promiſed me, v. 1. a woman, that great whore mentioned there, the Imperial power of Rome heathen, ſeated on an Emperor in a ſcarlet robe, a great blaſphemer againſt the true God, and advancer of Idolatry, and he had ſeven heads, (the city of Rome built on ſeven hills) and ten horns, that is, ſo many other Kings that ruled over divers countries, and were confederate with the Roman Emperor. a. b.

4. And the woman was arrayed in purple and ſcarlet colour, and * decked with gold, and precious ſtone, and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand, full of abominations and filthineſſe of her fornication.]

4. And this Roman power was in great proſperity, much ſumptuouſneſſe was beſtowed upon their Idol-worſhip, and all manner of abominable filthineſſe was committed therein.

†for whoremongers, πορνων, ſo Arethas and the antient Latin.

5. And upon her forehead was a name written, [c] Myſterie, Babylon the great, the mother of † harlots, and abominations of the earth.]

5. Which being ſo frequent and acknowledged in their ſecreter devotions, are beſt deſcribed by the word Myſterie, which was the word which the Greeks uſed for their uncleaneſt meetings, and by Babylon (ſee note on ch. 14. c. and ch. 18. a.) which of old was famous for theſe, and ſo deſtroyed. From hence came all the Idolatry of the other cities, ſee v. 2. c.

6. And I ſaw the woman drunken with the blood of the Saints, and with the blood of the Martyrs of Jeſus: and when I ſaw her, I wondred with great admiration.]

6. And beſide her Idolatries and uncleanneſſe, ſhe was repreſented as a great perſecuter of Chriſtians, (ſee c. 1. d.) At this ſight of a woman thus repreſented, in all glory, and then drunk with blood, and vomiting it out, I was much aſtoniſhed.

7. And the Angel ſaid unto me, Wherefore didſt thou marvel? I will tell thee the myſterie of the woman, and of the beaſt that carrieth her, which hath the ſeven heads and ten horns.]

7. And the Angel that ſhewed it me, v. 1. told me the interpretation of it, viz. that it was deſigned by God to repreſent the Roman heathen power, the ſeven hills on which it was built, and the ten Kings confederate with it.

8. The beaſt that thou ſaweſt, was, and is not, and ſhall aſcend out of the bottomleſſe pit, and go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth ſhall wonder, (whoſe names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world) when they behold the beaſt [d] which was, and is not, * and yet is.]

8. And the ſcarlet beaſt v. 3. on whom this power is ſeated, and which blaſphemeth and defieth the God of heaven, that is, the perſon of the Emperor, in whom this power is veſted, at the time to which this part of the viſion refers, (ſee note a.) is one which was in power, but at this point of time, that is, after Veſpaſian's return out of Judæa, was out of it, but ſhall come to it again, ſent, as it were, out of hell, to perſecute the Chriſtians. And when he, that is Domitian, ſhall have delivered up the Empire again to Veſpaſian, upon his return out of Judæa, and for ſome years become a private man again; this ſhall be matter of great admiration and aſtoniſhment to all that are not Chriſtians, whereſoever they are, ſeeing by this means that the perſecuter of Chriſtians is gone out of power (and when he comes in again, ſhall not continue long, but himſelf be cruelly butchered, v. 8. and 11.) and Veſpaſian, a favourer of the Chriſtians, but deſtroyer of the Jews, is come in again, even while Domitian was alive, which made it the more ſtrange. d.

† ſenſe νοῦς

9. And here is the † mind which hath wiſdome; The ſeven heads are ſeven mountains, on which the woman ſitteth.]

9. This is the meaning of the riddle; The ſeven heads are the ſeven hills, which are ſo famouſly known in Rome.

10. And * there are ſeven Kings, five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he muſt continue a ſhort ſpace.]

10. And beſide they denote the ſeven Kings or Emperors thereof, (that have had any thing to doe with the Chriſtians) which are here to be numbred from the time of the beginning of theſe viſions, till this of the writing of them: Of them five are dead, all of violent deaths, poiſoned, or killed by themſelves or others, viz. Claudius, Nero, Galba, Otho, Vitellius, one then reigned, viz. Veſpaſian, and a ſeventh was not yet come to the Kingdome, viz. Titus, who when he ſhould come to it, ſhould reign but two years and two moneths.

11. And the beaſt that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the ſeven, and goeth into perdition.]

11. And Domitian, deſcribed v. 8. as he that was, and is not, that is, one that in Veſpaſian's time, while he was buſie in other parts, exerciſed all power at Rome, and was called Emperor, is the eighth, that is, comes to the Empire after thoſe ſeven, being the ſon of one of them, to wit of Veſpaſian (in whoſe time alſo he held the government of Rome) and this a wretched accurſed perſon, a cruel bloody perſecuter of the Chriſtians, and ſhall be puniſh'd accordingly.

12. And the ten horns which thou ſaweſt are ten Kings, which have received no kingdome as yet, but receive power as Kings one hour with the beaſt.]

12. As for the ten Kings of the barbarous nations, noted by the ten horns, v. 3. thoſe which (though after v. 16. they ſhared the Roman Empire, yet) as yet had not done ſo, had no Kingdome as yet within the Roman Territory, they for a ſmall time complied with the Roman power.

13. Theſe have one mind, and ſhall give their ſtrength and power unto the beaſt.]

13. And did as the Emperor did, perſecuted the Chriſtians in their Territories.

14. Theſe ſhall make [e] war with the Lamb, and the Lamb ſhall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings, and they that are with him are called and choſen and faithfull.]

14. And having done ſo, they ſhall ere long be ſubdued to the Chriſtian faith, according to God's promiſe that Chriſt ſhould be King of kings, &c. that is, that Kings and Potentates ſhould be ſubdued unto him, and (according to the reaſonableneſſe of it) that the Chriſtian faith conſiſting of nothing but patience and perſeverance e.

under perſecutions, without any reſiſting, or rebelling againſt the perſecutors, ſhould at length approve it ſelf to Kings and Potentates, and prevail upon them to embrace the faith of Chriſt.

15, 16. And he ſaith unto me, the waters, that is, the people of ſeveral nations, that were under the Roman Emperour ſo lately, and the ten Kings of thoſe nations that had no power or kingdome within the Roman Territories, v. 12. ſhall invade the Roman Empire, and at length ſpoil the City of all the bravery, and deprive them of many of their former dominions, and ſet the City (a third part of it c. 16. 19.) on fire, (ſee Procop. Vand. l. 1.)

15. And he ſaith unto me, The waters which thou ſaweſt, where the whore ſitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16. And the ten horns which thou ſaweſt upon the beaſt, theſe ſhall hate the whore, and ſhall [f] make her deſolate and naked, and ſhall eat her fleſh, and burn her with fire.]

f.

17. And all this an eminent act of God's providence, both that all thoſe nations ſhould firſt confederate with the Romans, and alſo that they ſhould now break off, and execute God's vengeance upon them.

17. For [g] God ſhall put in their hearts † to fulfill his will, and to agree, and give their kingdome unto the beaſt, until the words of God ſhall be fulfilled.]

Annotations on Chap. XVII.

a. Κόκκινον θηρίον

V. 3. A woman ſit upon a ſcarlet ——] That the beaſt here muſt ſignifie the Idolatrous heathen worſhip, may be thought, by comparing this verſe with c. 13. 1. There the beaſt, whereby that is acknowledged to be repreſented, is ſaid to have ſeven heads, and ten horns, and upon the heads the name of blaſphemy: And ſo here, much to the ſame purpoſe, the beaſt is full of names of blaſphemy, having ſeven heads and ten horns. But it muſt be obſerved firſt, that there are more beaſts then one mention'd in theſe Viſions, and not all ſignifying the ſame, but viſibly divers things, and that difference obſervable from other circumſtances. As firſt, here is the addition of κόκκινον ſcarlet-coloured, which refers to the colour of the Imperial robe, which was ſuch, ſaith Pliny Nat. hiſt. l. 22. 2. And ſo that inclines it to ſignifie the Emperor in this place: and though θηρίον, a beaſt, may ſeem a mean title to repreſent ſo great a perſon, yet when it is conſidered, that rage and cruelty, and all manner of uncleanneſſe, may be found in an heathen Idolatrous Emperour, all theſe being ſo fit to be repreſented by a θηρίον, or wild beaſt, ſuch an Emperour as this may well own that title. And ſo when Julian introduceth C. Caligula, it is in this ſtyle, μετισόρχεϑ' ϑηρίον πονηρὸν, an evil beaſt ſucceeds, in his Satyre againſt the Cæſars; and in like manner of Vindex, Galba, Otho, Vitellius, ταυτὶ τὰ ϑηρία, theſe beaſts; and of Domitian, with a peculiar Epithet, to denote his cruelty (ſuch as was Proverbially obſerved in Phalaris) τὸ Σικελικὸν ϑηρίον, the Sicilian beaſt, and again, φονικὸν ϑηρίον the bloody beaſt, exactly parallel to the ſcarlet-coloured beaſt in this place. Secondly, here is a woman ſitting upon that beaſt, which makes it differ again from that repreſentation, c. 13. And this woman appears to be the whore in the firſt verſe of this chapter: for being there told by the Angel, that he ſhall ſee the judgment of the great whore, it follows immediately, he carried me, and I ſaw a woman, &c. Now that this woman or great whore is the Imperial power of heathen Rome, appears by her ſitting upon many waters, ſitting there noting rule and dominion (as the many waters is great multitudes of people) and ſo by the Kings of the earth committing fornication with her, v. 2. Agreeable to which it is, that the beaſt whereon ſhe ſits ſhould be the perſon of the Emperour, in whom that power was veſted, or ſeated, as we ſay; which is farther expreſs'd, v. 7. by the beaſts carrying the woman, the Greek word βαστάζειν there being that which belongs to carrying of burthens, &c. on ſhoulders, and that, we know, is figuratively applied to power or government, Iſ. 9. 6. the government ſhall be upon his ſhoulders. And ſo likewiſe by verſe 18. it is as evident that the woman is that great Imperial City which reigneth over the Kings of the earth. As for the ὀνόματα βλασφημίας the names of blaſphemy, they are moſt ſignally appliable to Domitian, who called himſelf Lord God (ſee c. 13. Note c.) and oppoſed the true God, and ſet up many falſe idol-gods in defiance of him, which is the moſt real blaſphemy, and is ſo ſtyled by the Author of the book of Maccabees. And to conclude, that this beaſt here is a perſon, and an Emperour (and not the heathen worſhip, ch. 13. 1.) it is evident by v. 11. where, of the Kings mention'd v. 10. this beaſt is ſaid to be the eighth; and by the addition of he that was, and is not, it is as clear, that it was Domitian at the time when he had delivered up the Empire to his Father Veſpaſian at his return from Judæa, being ſhortly to return to it again. Which with the reſt of the deſcription of him v. 8. is appliable to no other but to him: ſee Note d.

b. Ten horns] That theſe ten horns, or Kings, were thoſe barbarous nations that lay on the North of the Euxin ſea, and of Danubius, and the Rhene, (which were the ordinary bounds of the Roman Empire on that ſide) the number of them will ſufficiently evince. Procopius reckons them up to that number of ten, Oſtrogothi, Viſigothi, Vandali, Gepidæ, Longobardi, Heruli, Burgundions, Huns, Franks, Saxons. Of theſe it is ſaid, v. 12. that they were ten Kings οἵτινες βασιλείαν οὔπω ἔλαβον, which had not yet received the kingdome. This cannot be underſtood, that they had as yet (in that point of time to which the Viſion belonged) no dominions of their own, for they are called δέκα βασιλεῖς ten Kings, and it is evident in ſtory, that thoſe barbarous Nations had their ſeveral Kings in that time. The meaning then muſt be, that they had as yet no dominion within the Roman Territorie, (but only made ſudden incurſions into it) their receiving the Kingdome being when they ſhared the Empire among them. So the Fathers in the time of perſecution interpreted it, Romani imperii abſceſſio in decem reges diſperſa, ſaith Tertullian, The departure of the Roman Empire diſperſed into ten Kings: & decem regibus, in quos dividetur quod nunc regnat imperium, ſaith Irenæus, The ten Kings into which the Empire, which now reigns, ſhall be divided. And then, before they came to this having a kingdome, dominion in the Roman Territories, it is ſaid of them, that as Kings they receive power with the beaſt, that is, join and comply, and act with the beaſt, aſſiſt heathen Rome in perſecuting the Chriſtians, (but that only μίαν ὥραν one hour, a ſmall ſhort while) which is farther expreſs'd by having one mind, and giving their ſtrength and power to the beaſt. What point of time it was when this was done, being but μίαν ὥραν for a ſhort ſpace, is the onely matter of difficulty. And here firſt, it is clear, that this time here pointed to is before they took kingdomes within the Roman Territorie, both by the βασιλείαν οὔπω, they had not yet received the kingdome; and becauſe when they did ſo, they

Secondly, it must be before the Emperours became Christian; for θηρίον the beast signifying the Roman Idolatry, not simply, but having power and persecuting Christians, their giving that power to the beast supposes it to be while it is the beast, that is, heathen and persecuting. Thirdly, it must be before these barbarous nations had received the faith, for after, they would not join with the beast; and that is an argument again, that it was before they got possession of any piece of the Roman dominion: for it is manifest in story, that a great part of these nations were Christians, though Arians, before that. For the first of them that came on the South of Ister, (which is Danubius, when it toucheth upon Illyricum) were those who in the time of Valens obtained of him to come into Thracia, and to dwell on that side of Ister, and to defend that limit of the Empire against the other Goths that were Pagans; see Theodor. l. 4. c. ult. Sozom. l. 6. c. 3, 7. Paulus Diaconus hist. Miscel. l. 12. c. 14. and Ammian. Marcel. And from these Arian Goths swarmed afterwards those which invaded Italy, Africk, Spain. As for the short incursions which the Goths made into Asia, or the Franks into Gallia, in the time of Gallienus and of Claudius, wherein the Christians suffered much by them, (and the space would fit μίαν ὥραν well) that cannot be it neither, because then they did not give their strength and power to the beast. Fourthly, then that which is the most probable is this, That the Christian religion was propagated among those barbarous people, and was not publickly persecuted by them, whiles the Roman Emperours from time to time did most bloodily pursue it. That it was spread among them, that one place in Tertullian adv. Jud. c. 8. may suffice. Et Britannorum inaccessa loca Romanis, Christo verò subdita, & Sarmatarum, & Dacorum, & Germanorum, & Scytharum, & abditarum multarum Gentium, &c. The places which the Romans had not come to were subdued to Christ, the Britans, the Sarmatians, the Dacians, the Scythians, the Germans, and many secret Nations. Which words do plainly point at those very nations which afterwards overrun the Empire. And there are not related any persecutions in those parts, which would not have been altogether omitted in Ecclesiastical history, if there had been any publick authoritative persecution there. And it is observable here in England, from the days of King Lucius until the reign of Diocletian, (when Alban the Protomartyr of England suffered) the Christians continued in peace and quietnesse. See Bede Eccl. hist. l. 1. c. 4. Hereupon it may be collected that Diocletian being a violent and furious persecuter, that extended his persecutions to all parts of his Empire, at least in the two last years of his reign, a vigorous and active Prince, that enlarged the limits of the Empire, particularly to those Northern parts, Daciâ restitutâ porrectis usque ad Danubii caput Germaniæ Rhetiæque limitibus, having recovered Dacia, and reach'd out the limits of Germany and Rhetia as far as the head of Danubius, as it is said of him in the Panegyrick ad Dioclet. & Maximian. (and more particularly Pomponius Lætus in that short history which he gives of Diocletian, speaks to the very point of time, Diocletianus, rebus toto Oriente compositis, Europam repetiit, ubi jam Scythæ, Sarmata, Alani & Basternæ jugum subiverant, unà cum Carpis, Cattis & Quadis, &c. Diocletian having composed affairs over all the East, returned to Europe, where the Scythians, Sarmatians, Alans and Basternians, together with the Carpi, Catti and Quadi, and others had already undergone, and submitted to his yoke; so that at the time when he triumphed for the Persian victory, these Northern people were brought under some yoke, which was in the eighteenth year of his Empire. See Eusеb. in Chronic. and then in the same year he and Maximian contrived and decreed the general persecution over the whole Empire, which before that time was but in some parts. See Eusеb. l. 8. c. 1. and 9.) From these considerations, I say, it may be collected, that this was a time in which the Pagan bordering Princes might be stirred up in compliance with such Emperors, to persecute poor Christians within their Territories, and yet that persecution last but a very short time; partly, because the condition of that sort of people is to be restlesse, and always attempting somewhat upon their neighbours that did thus awe them, being impatient of any yoke; and partly, because Diocletian resigned the Empire about two years after. That we cannot attain unto a full knowledge of the proceedings of that time, the reason of Baronius is good, because no writer of that time (who did set down by way of History the actions of Diocletian) is extant, the work of Claudius Eusthenius his Secretary, who did write the actions of him and his three collegues, being perished. In this obscurity of the time we can but guesse; but this conjecture is probable, and suits well with μίαν ὥραν the short space, and all other circumstances of the Context.

V. 5. Mysterie] The word μυστήριον signifies a secrecy. It is also an unclean word, set by Achilles Tatius to signifie the nakednesse of a woman. Among the Gentiles it was used to denote their secretest Idol-worships, their πλεταὶ and ἐποπτεῖαι, which being for the most part very unclean and abominable, as in their Eleusinia sacra, &c. they were generally styled μυστήρια, and divided into μεγάλα and μικρὰ, their greater & lesser mysteries. These, saith Tertullian, the Gnosticks imitated, and had in their worships curtains drawn, and silence strictly kept to vail and keep secret what they did. Hence is it, that this word is here thought fit to expresse the Idolatry and heathen-worship of this city, which had generally this of uncleanesse joined with it. c. Μυστήριον

V. 8. Which was, and is not] That Domitian had and exercised all power at Rome in his Father Vespasian's time whilst he was employed abroad in Syria, &c. appears by Tacitus, who saith of him distinctly, Domitianum Cæsarem consalutatum, &c. that Domitian was saluted by the name of Cæsar, Hist. l. 3. in fine, and nomen sedémque Cæsaris Domitianus acceperat, Domitian had received the name and throne of Cæsar, l. 4. in initio, and by all other writers of those times. At the return of Vespasian he was devested of his power; and so though he had been Emperor, and still continued alive at that point of time to which this part of the Vision refers, yet 'tis true of him, οὐκ ἔστι he is not: by which it may be guest at what time these Visions were written, at least to what time this Vision refers, viz. to the time of Vespasian after his return out of Syria, the war being left unto Titus. And this distinctly appears v. 10. by the enumeration of the eight Emperours there, of which Claudius being the first, Nero second, Galba third, Otho fourth, Vitellius fifth, it is there said, five are fallen, and one is, that is, is now alive at this point of the Vision, viz. Vespasian, and Titus the seventh is not yet come, and after his short reign, then v. 11. follows this successor of his, Domitian, described, as here, by the title of, he which was, and is not, and is the eighth, (for so he was) and is ἐκ τῶν ἑπτὰ of, or, from, the seven, that is, the son or off-spring of one of them, viz. of Vespasian. This person being a great persecutor of Christians, God's judgments were remarkably to fall upon him, which is the meaning of ὑπάγει εἰς ἀπώλειαν, he goeth to perdition, v. 11. for he was butcher'd by his own servants: and Apollonius Tyaneus the great Magician is said to have cryed out at Ephesus d. Θηρίον ἦν, καὶ οὐκ ἔστι, καὶ αὐτὸς ὄγδοος ἐστὶ Ἐκ τῶν ἑπτὰ Ὑπάγει εἰς Ἀπώλειαν many miles off, at the minute when he was kill'd, Strike the Tyrant, ſtrike the Tyrant, and to have told them, Believe it, the Emperour is kill'd this very moment; which the Devil, it ſeems, (whether from this and the like prophecies of God here, or by his ſpeedy conveyance of what he ſaw, I cannot affirm) by his familiarity with that Magician enabled him thus to declare.

V. 14. Warre with the Lamb] Warring with the Lamb, ſignifies oppoſing and perſecuting Chriſtianity; not as if there were ſet battels between them and Chriſtians, but ſuch as are ſuppoſeable againſt thoſe whoſe principle was to ſuffer, not to reſiſt the perſecuting Emperors, (under whom they were:) For this is the condition of the Lamb here to endure, to be ſlaughter'd, but not to fight again. This is here ſaid of theſe ten Kings (confederate with the Romans) that they ſhould thus war, that is, be uſed as ſouldiers to execute the Romans bloodineſſe upon Chriſtians: and this is true of the Goths and others, while they were confederate with heathen Rome; though ſoon after they themſelves came over to Chriſtianity, (though moſt to Arianiſme,) (Gothi per legatos ſupplices popoſcerunt, ut illis Epiſcopi, à quibus Chriſtianæ fidei regulam diſcerent, mitterentur. Valens imperator Doctores Ariani dogmatis miſit. Gothi primæ fidei rudimentum, quod accepere, tenuerunt, The Goths deſired by their Embaſſadors, that Biſhops might be ſent them from whom they might learn the Rule of faith. Valens the Emperour ſent them Arian Doctors. The Goths retained thoſe rudiments which they firſt received, Oroſ. l. 7. c. 33.) no doubt much forwarded therein by ſeeing the patience and conſtancy of Chriſtian Martyrs, who have no other way to overcome their enemies, and ſo in that only reſpect are ſaid to conquer them here, that is, to bring them to Chriſtianity, and ſubject them to Chriſt's kingdome. For of Alaricus 'tis clear that he was then a Chriſtian, and ſent Embaſſies to Honorius by Biſhops, (ſee Sozomen l. 9. c. 8.) and that Attalus was baptized by Sigeſarius a Gothiſh Biſhop, and by that was the dearer to Alaricus and all the Goths, c. 9. And that in reverence to S. Peter, Alaricus gave mercy to all thoſe that fled to his Temple for Sanctuary, and reſtored all that was taken out of the Church (by a Gothiſh ſouldier, who aſtoniſh'd with the richneſſe of the ſight told Alaricus of it) and at the putting all in their places, ſung an hymne to God, Barbarians and Romans together, ſaith Oroſius l. 7. c. 20. 39. and ſo 'tis clear of the greateſt part of the army, of whom ſaith * Oroſius, Chriſtiani fuere qui parcerent, &c. they were Chriſtians that ſpared, Chriſtians who were ſpared, Chriſtians for the memory of whom there was any ſuch thing as ſparing. To the manifeſtation of this pertains that paſſage ſet down by * Hieron. Rubeus, that Saul an Hebrew, or, as others affirme, a Pagan, who had the chief command under Stilico, deſigning to take advantage, and ſet upon the Goths when they were not prepared, did it upon Eaſter-day. And Alaricus diſcerning their approach, ſent to deſire he would deferre the fight till the morrow, in reſpect of the religion of the day, promiſing then to meet him. But Saul would not hearken to it, but ſet upon them unarmed, and holding up their hands and eyes in prayer to heaven for aid, in tam ſancti myſterii celebratione, in the performance of the duties of the day, and ſo killed many of them; till Alaricus after the ſpace of an hour, ſaying that they had now ſatisfied the religion of the day, and exhorting his ſouldiers to follow him ſtoutly, brake in upon them with a great army, and repulſed and put them to flight; and if Honorius and Stilico had not come to their relief, eo omnino die de Roma terrarum domina, quæ victori præmium erat futura, actum fuiſſet, Rome had been deſtroyed upon the Fate of that day.

V. 16. Make her deſolate] The Goths and Vandals overrunning Italy and Rome it ſelf, (Alaricus the Goth and Genſericus the Vandal Kings, and divers others, πολλῶν ἐπανισαμένων τυράννων, many Kings making inſurrections, ſaith Sozomen) is famouſly known in ſtory. See Socrat. l. 7. c. 10. Sozom. l. 9. c. 6. Of the ſpoils alſo that were made by them Hiſtorians are plentiful, eſpecially Procopius. Of Alaricus and his, that they left nothing behind them, either of private or publick treaſure, the Commander giving order to his ſouldiers, ſaith Sozomen l. 6. 9. ἐκέλευε τῇ Ῥωμαίων πλοῦτον ἁρπάζειν, to plunder all the wealth of the city, and ὡς ἂν δύναιτο πάντας τοὺς οἴκους λῃζόμενος, as near as was poſſible to ſpoil every houſe. Of Genſericus, that he brought by ſea to Carthage a vaſt deal of gold and ſilver; and that he robb'd the Temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, or Olympius. So Socrates of Alaricus, that they took the city and rifled it, and τὰ πολλὰ τῶν θαυμασίων ἐκείνων θεαμάτων κατέκαυσαν, burnt many of thoſe admirable ſpectacles. So alſo that they conquer'd many Provinces of the Romans, and poſſeſs'd them as their own, as Dacia, Pannonia, Thrace, Illyricum, France, Spain, Africk, Italy and Dalmatia, which is here called the eating of the fleſh of the whore. As for their burning of the city, (though that ſignifie not their burning it all down to the ground, but onely πολλὰς τῆς πόλεως οἰκοδομὰς many buildings of the city, and in Socrates, the many admirable ſpectacles there) that is known to be done by Totilas at the firſt entring the city, though Beliſarius was a means that 'twas not all burnt down; ſee Procopius Goth. 4. and Sozomen l. 9. c. 6. This being done in the time of Honorius the Emperour, and Innocentius Biſhop of Rome, & ſo in time of Chriſtianity, may be thought not to belong to heathen Rome. But then 'tis obſervable, 1. that by the providence of God not onely Honorius himſelf was out of the city, but that Innocentius (after the firſt taking of it, before the ſecond) was like Lot out of Sodom (ſaith Oroſius l. 7. c. 39.) removed out of that city to Ravenna, where the Emperor was, on occaſion of an Embaſſy mention'd by Sozomen l. 9. c. 7. and by Zozimus: 2dly, that there were at that time very many profeſſors of Gentiliſme there, in the Senate, not only in the city, as may appear by that paſſage in Sozomen, that at the firſt ſiege, ἀναγκαῖον ἐδόκει τοῖς Ἕλλησίζουσι τῆς συγκλήτου δύειν ἐν τῷ Καπιτωλίῳ, καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ναοῖς, The Gentiles of the Senate, or thoſe of the heathen profeſſion there, thought it neceſſary to worſhip and ſacrifice in the Capitol and other heathen Temples (which 'tis clear were then among them) ſome Thuſcian Magi being ſent for by Attalus the ὕπαρχος or Governour of the city, who promiſed by thunder and lightning to drive away the Barbarians. Continuò de repetendis ſacris celebrandiſque tractatur, Preſently they entred into conſultation about reſtoring their Gentile ſacrifices, and offering them, Oroſ. l. 7. c. 38. And another paſſage there is in Sozomen c. 9. that upon the miſcarriage of Attalus, (his loſing that dignity of Emperour, of which he was ſo ambitious, that he would not be content to be a partner with Honorius) ἐδυσφόρουν Ἕλληνές τε, &c. the Gentile Idolaters that were in the city, and thoſe of the Arian party, were extremely troubled; the Gentiles gueſſing by Attalus's inclination and former courſe, (being but now lately become Chriſtian, ſince from being ὕπαρχος Governour of Rome, he was now joined with Alaricus, and chriſtned by a Gothiſh Biſhop) ὡς τὸ παράπαν ἑλληνίζειν αὐτὸν ἡγοῦντο, did verily believe that he would profeſs'dly favour and ſet up Gentiliſme, καὶ τὰς πατρίους ἀποδιδόναι ναοὺς καὶ ἑορτὰς καὶ θυσίας, and reſtore the antient temples and feaſts and ſacrifices. And indeed 'tis clear by the paſſages of the ſtory, that though the Heathens in Rome were the men that called Alaricus to their aſſiſtance, to take the patronage of them; yet by God's turning of things it fel out

f. Ἐρημωμένην ποιήσουσι πόρνην

out, that they beyond all others found the vengeance of his coming to light heavily upon them. Nay, 'tis Oroſius's obſervation, that God permitted Alaricus to enter the city, that he might bring contumely and reproach upon the Idolaters or Heathens there, and give the triumph and victory to Chriſtian religion over Gentiliſme, now conquer'd and laid proſtrate; and that many Gentiles, or Pagans, aſtoniſh'd with what they ſaw thus brought to paſſe quite contrary to their expectation, turned Chriſtians by this means, l. 7. c. 39. Thirdly, it was the common complaint of the Gentiles at that time, that the reception of Chriſtianity had provoked the gods to ſend theſe vaſtations upon them, the direct contrary of which is at large ſhewed by Salvian De providentia, viz. that the Chriſtians were the only preſervers of the world: and indeed it is clear by the ſtory, that had it not been for them Rome had been quite deſtroyed; for, ſaith Sozomen, Alaricus when he took it, commanded his ſouldiers to rifle the city, &c. but αἰδοῖ τῇ πρὸς τὸν Ἀπόστολον Πέτρον, ἄσυλον εἶναι προσέταξε τὸ περὶ τὸν σορὸν ἐκκλησίαν, μεγάλῳ τε, καὶ πολλὴν χώραν περιέχουσαν, through reverence to S. Peter, he commanded that the Church built about his Tomb which takes up a great circuit, and could hold a great multitude, ſhould be a ſanctuary to all that would make uſe of it: and ſo ſaith [a] Oroſius, Gothi, relictâ intentione prædandi, ad confugia ſalutis (hoc eſt ſanctorum locorum) agmina ignara cogentes, The Goths gave over their intention of rifling, and forced troops of Chriſtians, not knowing what they did, to ſave themſelves by flying to conſecrated places. (And Iſidore adds, that of thoſe that were by the ſouldiers found out of the Churches, as many as named the name of Chriſt, or the Chriſtian Saints, were conſtantly ſpared by the ſouldiers, and that thus many thouſands did eſcape.) By which means the Chriſtians were generally delivered and ſaved from the general deſtruction, (and alſo with them ſome Gentiles, ſaith S. Auguſtine De civ. Dei l. 11. c. 1. which fled with the Chriſtians to the monuments of the Martyrs and the Baſilicæ of the Apoſtles,) and ſo were the σωζόμενοι or eſcapers here too, as before among the Jewes at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. And, as he ſaith, τοῦτο γέγονεν, &c. this was the cauſe that Rome was not quite deſtroyed, thoſe that were ſaved there in that Sanctuary (διασωθέντες, ſaith he) being many, who afterward rebuilt the city, c. 9. And Sozomen c. 10. hath a famous ſtory to this purpoſe of a young ſouldier, that having taken a very handſome Chriſtian woman, and being by her conſtancy kept from defiling her, carryed her to the Baſilica, that ſo ſhe might be ſafe from all others, and kept pure for her own husband. And S. Jerome on the other ſide tells of ſome Chriſtians, which thinking by diſſembling or concealing their religion to ſave themſelves, were miſerably uſed, but at laſt being diſcerned to be Chriſtians, were releaſed and carryed ſafe to the Baſilica. See Jerom. Ep. 16. ad Princip. & Ep. 8. in the former mentioning this of Marcella and Principia, in the latter of Proba, Juliana, and Demetrius. But then fourthly, (which is moſt to be conſidered) even the ſins of Rome Chriſtian at this time were ſo great, as moſt juſtly to bring theſe judgments upon them, thoſe Gentile ſins of all manner of unnatural villany being moſt frequent among them, which were with as much reaſon now to expect the fury of God's wrath to be poured out on ſuch vile impure Chriſtians, as before we found the judgments that fell on the impenitent Jewes, to have lighted on the Gnoſtick Chriſtians of that people and that age. To this purpoſe, 1. 'tis Sozomens's affirmation, that 'twas then the judgment of prudent men, that this that befel Rome, was from the wrath of God (ὑπὸ θεομηνίας ταῦτα συμβαίνειν τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις καὶ ποινὴν ὧν περὶ τὸ ὕβρισται πολλῶν ῥᾳστώνης καὶ ἀκολασίας εἰς ἀνδρὸς καὶ ξένους ἀδίκως ἥμαρτον) as a puniſhment of what they had done upon themſelves and ſtrangers through ſloth and incontinence (which ſure refers to the ſins of Sodome, pride of the fleſh, pampering and idleneſs, and the effects of that, all unnatural luſts both on themſelves and ſtrangers, as the Sodomites on the Angels that came among them, and therefore Oroſius ſaid of Innocentius, that he was reſcued as Lot out of Sodome) though the Tranſlator there make it to be but injuſtice and oppreſſion of the poor, miſtaking them for the ξένοι ſtrangers there. 2dly, 'Tis the joint affirmation of Socrates and Sozomen, that a Monk of Italy coming in haſt to Rome, to intercede, and perſwade Alaricus to ſpare the city, he anſwered him, ὡς οὐχ ἑκὼν ἐπιχείρῳ, that he did not voluntarily ſet upon this enterpriſe (juſt as Titus profeſs'd of Jeruſalem) ἀλλά τις σωματοχῶς ὀχλῶν αὐτὸν βιάζεται, καὶ ἐπιτάττει τὴν Ῥώμην πορθεῖν, but that ſome body continually importuned and enforced him, commanding him that he ſhould deſtroy Rome, which at laſt he did. Theſe are the words in Sozomen, and in Socrates to the ſame ſenſe, οὐκ ἐγὼ ἐθελουσίως τὰ ἐκεῖ ποιοῦμαι, ἀλλά τις καθ' ἡδονὴν ὀχλεῖ μοι βασανίζων καὶ λέγων, ἄπιθι, τὴν Ῥωμαίων πόρθησον πόλιν, I go not a voluntier about this buſineſſe, but ſome body is very troubleſome to me, tormenting me, and ſaying, Go, and deſtroy the city of Rome: which as it is the clearing of thoſe words here v. 17. God put into their hearts, &c. ſo it ſignifies the great ſins of this place, which thus brought God's judgments upon them. 3dly, 'Tis the plain acknowledgement of Salvian every where throughout his books De Providentia, that the impieties of Chriſtians were ſo great, and particularly thoſe abominable commiſſions and cuſtomary practices of all unnatural uncleanneſſes, (which have been conſtantly the deſtroying not only of the Canaanites, &c. but of the Jewes and the Chriſtians) that it was God's will they ſhould thus be puniſhed by the Barbarians, who though they were very weak and ſlothful, not fit for war at all, in compariſon of the Romans, yet were, ſaith he, more chaſt and pure then they, and ſo were appointed by God to be ſcourges of them. See l. 7. And again, that the Barbarians being Chriſtians, though Arians, were much more tolerable then theſe, which though not all Arians, were many very abominable livers.

V. 17. God ſhall put in their hearts] The ſtrangeneſſe of this iudgment on that city, and the immediate hand of God in it, will appear (beſide what hath been ſaid of ſome body moleſting, and forcing Alaricus to it Note 1.) by theſe three things. 1. By the ſuddenneſſe of the taking of it, ſo ſuddenly, that when word was brought to Honorius to Ravenna, that Rome was deſtroyed, he thought they had meant a cock called by that name Roma, as Proſper hath it in Chronico: and this is referred to in the Viſion, c. 18. 10. For in one day thy judgment cometh, and v. 19. for in one houre ſhe is become deſolate. 2dly, That they made ſuch ſpeed in rifling it, that when one would think three years had been little enough to obey Alaricus's command, in ſearching out and taking away all the treaſure of the city, all * Hiſtorians agree, that they were but three days about it; onely Marcellinus ſaith, that the ſixth day after Alaricus entred he went out again. 3dly, That Alaricus having thus taken, and rifled, and poſſeſs'd the city, ſhould neither ſtay in it and keep it, nor go on with his army againſt the Emperour, but abſolutely retire, ſo ſoon after ſo ſtrange a ſucceſſe; as if God that had ſent him on this meſſage or ſervice on purpoſe, and never ſuffered him to be quiet till he had done it, as ſoon as the work was done for which he ſent him, had immediately recalled him, and not permitted him to goe one ſtep farther, and ſo only uſed him as a means to deliver up the city to the Chriſtians, the Idolaters being generally deſtroyed out of it by this means, and the Chriſtians as generally preſerved.

CHAP. XVIII.

1. And another repreſentation I received of the deſolation that was to befall heathen Rome by Alaricus, &c. and of the conſequents of it; For methought I ſaw, a mighty Angel come down from heaven in a moſt glorious manner, or with power to diſabuſe the world, and ſhew them what they ſaw not before, viz. how falſe it was that was ſaid of that city, that it was eternal.

1. AND after theſe things I ſaw * another Angel come down from heaven, having great power, and the earth was lightned with his glory.] * an Angel Ἄγγελον

2. And he cryed, aloud, that all might hear, ſaying, That great heathen city, ſo like Babylon of old for greatneſſe, populouſneſſe, heatheniſme, luxury, oppreſſing the people of God, is now deſtroyed, faln from that eternity it dream'd of, and is now overrun with Barbarians, (ſo ſcorned before and hated by them) that is, Goths and Vandals, &c. as with Satyrs and Owles, Zim and Ohim, &c.

2. And he cryed mightily with a ſtrong voice, ſaying, [a] Babylon the great is faln, is faln, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul ſpirit, and a cage of every unclean and hatefull bird.]

3. And this is a moſt juſt puniſhment of her foul Idolatries, which ſhe hath infuſed into other Nations as far as her power extended, and of her great pride and luxury, the expences laid out on which were the inriching of the Merchants of other Nations, which brought in fewel to the feeding, materials to the ſupporting of it.

3. For all nations have drank of † the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the Kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich * through the abundance of her delicacies.] † the bitter wine, ſee note on c. 14. c. * by the power of her pride, ἐκ τῆς δυνάμεως τῆς στρήνους αὐτῆς, ſee note on 1 Tim. 5. c.

4. And another voice, methought, I heard, warning all Chriſtians to come out of her, that is, firſt, to abſtain ſtrictly from all communicating with her ſins (contrary to what the looſer ſort of Chriſtians did;) and ſecondly, to depart out of the city (as the Emperor Honorius and the Biſhop Innocentius did to Ravenna, at the time of Alaricus's ſiege;) and thirdly, to flie to the Baſilica or Chriſtian Church at the time of plundering or deſtroying Rome (as the Chriſtians did) as the only way of reſcuing them from the deſtruction.

4. And I heard another voice from heaven, ſaying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her ſins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.]

5. For the voice or crie of her ſinnes is come to heaven, and now the vengeance is come upon her.

5. For her ſinnes have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembred her iniquities.]

6. Now ſhe ſhall be payed for all her provocations, and as ſhe hath meted to others, (the Chriſtians perſecuted by her) ſo ſhall it be by the Goths, &c. meted to her with advantage; ſhe hath mixed a poiſonous cup, a mixture of wine and myrrhe, in ſeducing ſome, and perſecuting others, and now ſhe ſhall have twice as much bitterneſſe provided for her.

6. Reward her even as ſhe rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works; in the cup which ſhe hath † filled, fill to her double.] † mingled, mingle κεράσατε, κεράσατε

7. For all her pride, and luxury, and haughtineſſe, and blaſphemy in calling her ſelf Eternal, and pronouncing that ſhe ſhould never be ſubdued (ſee Iſa. 47. 7, 8.) now ſhe ſhall ſee ſhe is mortal, and ſubject to be overcome as well as others.

7. * How much ſhe hath glorified her ſelf and † lived deliciouſly, ſo much torment and ſorrow give her; for ſhe ſaith in her heart, I ſit a Queen, am no widow, and ſhall ſee no ſorrow.] * In as much as Ὅσα † behaved her ſelf proudly, ſee v. 3.

8. For as a puniſhment of her pride and huge opinion of her ſelf, that ſhe ſhould reign for ever, on a ſuddain, all together ſhall an huge vaſtation come upon her, a plague, a ſlaughter, and a famine, and a burning of the city, a third part of it, ch. 16. 19. & 17. 16. (ſee note on ch. 17. c.) and all this a viſible judgment of God upon her, in whoſe hands are all the creatures, ready preſs'd for his ſervice, to execute his vengeance on his enemies.

8. Therefore ſhall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine, and [b] ſhe ſhall be * utterly burnt with fire; † for ſtrong is the Lord God who judgeth her.] * burnt, κατακαυθήσεται † for it is the ſtrong, ὅτι ἰσχυρὸς

9. When this comes to paſſe, then ſhall thoſe of the ten kingdomes which have continued under her obedience, and joyned with her in her idolatries and luxuries (ſee 1 Tim. 5. c.) lament and mourn for her, but not be able to aſſiſt her.

9. And the Kings of the earth, who have committed fornication, * and lived deliciouſly with her, ſhall bewail her, and lament for her, when they ſhall ſee the ſmoak of her burning,] * with her, and dealt proudly, μετ' αὐτῆς πορνεύσαντες καὶ στρηνιάσαντες, ſee v. 3.

10. But on the contrary forſake, & be afraid of bringing her any relief, the deſtruction coming ſo ſuddainly and irreſiſtibly (ſee note on ch. 17. c.) upon her.

10. Standing afarre off for fear of her torment, ſaying, Alas, alas, the great city Babylon, that mighty city, for in one hour is thy judgment come.]

11. And ſome loſſe this will be to the merchants, v. 3. who will have many commodities lying on their hands, without any vent, no body being ſo rich and ſo vainly luxurious as theſe that are now deſtroyed:

And methought an Angel of God took a stone as big as a mil-stone (denoting this city) and threw it into the sea, and expressed his meaning in so doing to be, that he might represent the desolation of that city, and its great change both from its being the harbourer and promoter of heathen worship, and the seat of the Empire, v. 14. Annotations on Chap. XVIII.

a. Βαβυλὼν

V. 2. Babylon] That the title of Babylon here is bestowed on Rome in the Vision of her destruction is resolved by S. Augustine De Civ. Dei l. 18. c. 2. Ipsa Babylonia quasi prima Roma, Roma quasi secunda Babylonia est, Babylon was as a first Rome, and Rome is as a second Babylon; and c. 22. Condita est Roma velut altera Babylon, & prioris filia Babylonis, Rome is built as another Babylon, and daughter of the former Babylon. And the ground of it may probably be this, because Babylon was the seat of the Assyrian Monarchie, as Rome of the Roman, and the Assyrian Monarchie being the first, as the Roman the last (illud primum, hoc ultimum imperium, saith Orosius, li. 7. c. 2.) Rome, that thus succeedeth Babylon, may well be called by that name. And so by Tertullian adver. Mar. l. 3. c. 13. Babylonia apud Joannem Romanæ urbis figura est, perinde magnæ & regno superbæ, & sanctorum Dei debellatricis, Babylon in S. John is the figure of Rome, as being, like that, a great city, proud of its dominion, and a destroyer of the saints of God; and the same words are again repeated, l. 3. adv. Jud. So 1 Pet. 5. 13. the συνεκλεκτὴ ἐν Βαβυλῶνι, the fellow-chosen, or fellow-Church in Babylon, the assembly of Christians in that heathen city, is by the Scholiast affirmed to denote the Church of Rome, διὰ τὸ φαινὰς, because of the splendor of it, saith he. And so generally the antients understood it, and Orosius hath set down the parallel betwixt them in many particulars, l. 7. 2. And this being premised will be a key to the whole Chapter: for Babylon is the note of an heathen, unclean, abominable city; and so belongs onely to so much of Rome as was then capable of that title, saith S. Jerome ad Algas. qu. 11. and, Cecidit Babylon magna: est quidem ibi Sancta ecclesia, tropæa Apostolorum & martyrum, est Christi vera confessio, est ab Apostolis prædicata fides, & Gentilitate calcatâ in sublime sic quotidie erigens vocabulum Christianum, The prophane heathen Babylon is fallen, Babylon the great: in the place thereof is the holy Church, the monuments of the Apostles and Martyrs, the true faith of Christ, or profession of Christian Religion, that which was preached by the Apostles, and heathenisme being trodden down, the Christian name is daily advanced on high, Ep. 17. ad Marcellam: and not to the Christian part of it, called by the other title by S. Peter, the Church in Babylon (and Babylon it self never set to signifie the Church;) not to the Emperor Honorius, who was then a Christian, and at Ravenna safe at that time from the invaders; nor again to Innocentius the Bishop, who was by the ordering of God's providence, betwixt the first and second siege, rescued (like Lot out of Sodome, or the Christians out of Jerusalem) out of the city to Ravenna also; nor generally to the Christians, who were some of them, saith * Palladius, gone out a little before, being perswaded by Melania to a Monastick life, and carried to Sicily first, and thence to Jerusalem, where, saith he, ἔχαιρον μὴ συμπαραπονλεῖς τοῖς ἀνηκεστοῖς κακοῖς τῆς πορθήσεως, they rejoiced that they were not together involved in the miserable evils of that vastation, δοξάζοντες τὸν Θεὸν ἐπὶ τῇ ἀρίστῃ μεταβολῇ τῶν πραγμάτων, glorifying God for the excellent change of affairs, καὶ τῇ παραδόξῳ αὐτῶν σωτηρίᾳ, and for their own wonderfull deliverance; and the rest which were left in the city, at last saved by flying to the Basilicæ, & many carried thither by the very souldiers that they might be safe (see Note on c. 17. c.) who consequently survived to restore and re-edifie the city, a more Christian city then it had been before. But to the heathen part of the city and that polluted profaner sort of Christians, who (as was said Note on c. 17. c.) called this judgment ment (these enemies as their patrons) on the city, and by the admirable disposition of Gods overruling hand of Providence, were themselves the only men that suffered under it. So that the summe of this fall of Babylon is the destruction of the wicked and heathen, and preserving of the pure and Christian Rome, and so in effect the bringing that city and Empire to Christianity. To this purpose, see S. Hierome adverſ. Jovinian. l. 2. Ad te loquar qui ſcriptam in fronte blaſphemiam Chriſti confeſſione deleſti, Urbs potens, urbs orbis Domina— Maledictionem quam tibi Salvator in Apocalypſi comminatus eſt, potes effugere per pœnitentiam, I will ſpeak to thee who haſt blotted out the blaſphemie written in thy forehead, by the confeſſion of Chriſt —— Thou potent city, thou city, Miſtreſs of the world—— Thou mayeſt avoid the curſe which Chriſt in the Apocalypſe hath threatened to thee, by repentance; adding, cave Joviniani nomen quod de Idolo derivatum eſt, beware of the name of Jovinian, which is derived from the Idol-god Jupiter: and this peculiarly in respect of those remaining heathens and hereticks, which now at the time when S. Hierome wrote, not long before the coming of Alaricus, were at Rome, and at length set up their Idol-service again in the time of the siege, and were signally destroyed at this taking of it. So again, S. Hierome in præfat. de Spiritu S. speaking of Rome, Cùm in Babylone verſarer, & purpuratæ meretricis eſſem colonus, When I lived at Rome, and was an inhabitant of the purple whore. All noting this heathen Rome to be the subject of these prophecies. This being here set down obscurely in prophetick style by way of Vision, was but darkly understood before the coming of it, yet so far expected by Christians, that the heathens did take notice of this their expectation, and looked upon them as men that had an evil eye upon that City and Empire, and mutter'd ruine to it. Thus in Lucian's Philopat. (or whose soever that Dialogue is, if it were not his) the Christians, character'd (though not named) by the mention of the Trinity in the beginning of the Dialogue, and described by that scoffer as a sottish fanatick people, are brought in (as at that time, when Trajan (under the title of αὐτοκράτωρ Emperor toward the end) was warring in the East against the Persians) and set down as those that wished all ill to the city, that is, Rome, and consequently to that Army in Asia, by their discourse of the news of the times, betraying their wishes and expectations that it might be defeated by the Persians. Thus, saith he, in the person of Critias of these ἐπικεκυφότες καὶ κατηφεῶντες, stooping, pallid people, that when they saw him, they came cheatfully toward him, supposing that he brought τινὰ λυγρὰν ἀγγελίαν, some sad news or other; ἐφαίνοντο δ' ἔτοι ὡς τὰ κάκιστα εὐχόμενοι, καὶ ἔχαιρον δὴ τοῖς λυγροῖς, they seemed to be men that prayed for all that was ill, and rejoiced in sad events: and their first question, saith he, was, πῶς τὰ τῆς πόλεως καὶ τὰ τῆ κόσμε, how the affairs of the city and the world went, (that is, of Rome, and the Roman Empire, as that is called οἰκουμένη the world in the Scripture; or else the affairs of the world, meaning the Roman enterprise against the Persians) and being answer'd by him, that all was well they nodded, saith he, with their browes presently, and replyed οὐκ ἔστιν δυσχερῆ δ' ἡ πόλις, 'Tis not so, but the city is in ill condition: and afterwards, ὡς μεταλλαγῶσι τὰ πράγματα, ἀταξία δὴ καὶ ταραχαὶ τὴν πόλιν καταλήψονται, τὰ ἐναντία τούτων γενήσονται, that there should be a change, that disorders and troubles should seise upon the city, their Armies should be worsted by the enemies; adding that they had fasted ten days, καὶ δὴ τὰς παννύχους ὑμνῳδίας ἐπαγρυπνοῦντες, and watching all nights, and spending the time in singing hymns, had dream'd these things; which may obscurely refer to these Visions which John saw on the κυριακὴ Lord's day, that is, probably on the annual day of Christ's resurrection, which followed a time of fasting and praying, the Christian Lent, which, as appears by the story of the first times, was uncertainly observed in respect of the number of days, by some more, by some fewer then ten days. Or if this be but a conjecture, yet the time of seeing visions being in Scripture oft set down after, or in a time of fasting, (as Act. 10. 10. of S. Peter, and v. 30. of Cornelius) 'tis agreeable to the character of Christians, whom he desired to describe in that Dialogue, thus to set it. And then he advises them τὰς ἀλλοκότους ταύτας φαντασίας, καὶ τὰ πονηρὰ βουλεύματα, &c. μήπω θεὸς ὑμᾶς εἰς κόρακας βάλοι, διὰ τὸ τῆ παιδὶ ἐπαοιδὰς καὶ λόγους κιβδήλους ἐπιφημίζειν, to leave off those strange fancies, and wicked consultations, and divinations (which may well refer, in his dark manner of speaking, to this book of Revelation) leſt God, saith he, deſtroy you for cursing your country, and spreading such false reports, when (saith he) the Persians are subdued by the Roman forces. And so he gives them over as doaters, and means not to heed what they say, with a τὰς δὲ λήρους ἐάσωμεν, and ὁ φέρων τὰς ἱστορίας. That this opinion he conceived of Christians, and their ill affection to the Roman Empire and City, and their boding ill concerning them, was the effect of some sparkles of this prophecy, flown abroad among the Gentiles very early, even in Trajan's time, is more then probable out of these passages thus set down. So in a narration of Hippolytus set down by Palladius, we have a virgin Christian accused to the heathen Judge at Corinth, ὡς βλασφημοῦσαν καὶ τοὺς καιροὺς, καὶ τοὺς βασιλεῖς, καὶ τὰ εἴδωλα, as one that blaſphemed the ſeaſons, and the Kings, and the Idols, in probability, that she foretold evil, talked of ruine, that should befall the Government or Idolatry of the heathens, and that the seasons of it now approached. For that is the meaning of the like phrase, when the Jews say of Stephen, that he ceaſeth not to ſpeak blaſphemous words againſt the holy place and the Law, Act. 6. 13. for so it follows, ver. 14. we have heard him ſay that Jeſus ſhall deſtroy, &c. To which it will not be amisse farther to add, that the Jews in their paraphraſes on the Old Testament, taking Rome under the prophetick title of Edom (which is very agreeable to the style of Babylon here) do frequently foretell the destruction of it. And thereupon they that set out the later Venice Edition of the Bible, leave out many passages of the Chaldee paraphraſe and the Rabbines looking thus directly against Rome, which are extant in the former Venice Bibles, and in what hath been printed at Paris by Stephanus. As when Obad. 1. Kimchi saith, What the prophets ſay of the deſtruction of Edom in the latter days, they ſay of Rome, they leave out the words of Rome: and when 'tis there added, For when Rome ſhall be deſtroyed, there ſhall be redemption of Iſrael, those words are quite omitted. So in the last verse of Obadiah, the fenced great city of Eſau, and that fenced city is Rome, that latter part is left out again. So the Chaldee paraphraſe on Lam. 4. 21, 22. for thou daughter of Edom, hath, thou Rome in the land of Italy; but those words are left out in that Edition. See M. Taylor's Proeme to the translation of the Jeruſalem Targum. The like interpretations of Rome for Edom, and the destruction thereof, may be seen in the Jeruſalem Targum, Gen. 15 12. where these words, Terror tenebricoſus magnus cadens ſuper eum, are thus mystically rendred, Terror is eſt Babel, tenebricoſus hic eſt Media, magnus hic eſt Græcia, cadens iſte eſt Idumæa (i. Romanum imperium.) Illud eſt imperium quartum, quod cadere debet, neque reſurget in ſecula ſeculorum. And so again on Levit. 26. 44. after Babel, Media, Greece, they name again regnum Idumæa, meaning, no doubt, the Roman Empire thereby; adding in diebus Gog, which that it belongs to the Romans that destroyed Jeruſalem, and, say they, should after be destroyed by the

the Messias, see that Paraphrase on Numb. 11. 26. in these words, In fine extremo dierum Gog & Magog, exercitus eorum Hierosolymam ascendent, & manibus Regis Messiæ illi cadent, They shall be destroyed by the hands of Messiah the King. So in the Sibylline Oracles, where Βελιὰρ Beliar or Belial is set to denote the Romanes, as appears by

Ἐκ δὲ Σεβαστῶν ἥξει Βελιὰρ κατόπισθεν,

Beliar shall come from the Augusti, or Romane Emperors, at length coming to the great destruction threatned by God, under the expression of fire, this is to fall upon Beliar peculiarly,

Ἀλλ' ὁπόταν μεγάλοιο θεοῦ πλάσσωσιν ἀπιλαὶ
Καὶ δύναμις φλογέυσα δι' ὕδατος εἰς γαῖαν ἥξει, Καὶ Βελιὰρ φλέξει, καὶ ὑπερφιάλους ἀνθρώπους
Πάντας, ὅσοι τούτῳ πίστιν ἐπεποιήσαντο.

The flaming power of God shall burn Beliar, and all the proud men that trust in him. And of the Jews 'tis clear, that there hath been a tradition among them, that in the last days there should come a great enemy, which they call ארמילוס Armilus, which in Hebrew is Romulus, lightly changed by the transposition but of one letter, (see Note on Joh. 11. b.) and that he should be destroyed by the Messias; which may well be (as all the rest) but the mistakings of this prophecy here delivered, and from hand to hand conveyed among the Jews to their posterity, who looking on the Romans as their destroyers, thence perswaded themselves that their Messias (whom they still expect) should destroy them.

b. Καταυθήσεται

V. 8. She shall be utterly burnt] The κατακαυθήσεται, which is ordinarily rendred shall be utterly burnt, may seem to have some difficulty in it, and be objected against our interpretation of this Vision, because it is known that the desolation and firing by Alaricus, Gensericus and Totilas, was not an utter desolation or firing of the whole city, but of a part thereof. And to this the answer is insufficient, that κατακαίειν is conflagrare, to be set on light fire, and doth not necessarily import that fires consuming of all that might be consumed, because other expressions here follow in this matter which cannot be so answered: as v. 21. where the stone like a mill-stone is cast into the sea, which seems to signifie a total destruction, and it is added, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no longer, ὐ μὴ ἔτι. And so again, ver. 22, 23. The voice of harpers, &c. and the sound of a mill-stone shall be found no more in thee, and the light of a candle shall shine no more in thee, &c. To all which the answer must be, by observing that all these three expressions are phrases taken out of the prophesies of the Old Testament, and are in all reason to signifie here as there they shall appear to have signified, that is, onely as prophetical schemes of expressing a subduing, or victory, and no more. Thus the burning here is an allusion to Dan. 7. 11. his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame, which yet signified no more then the translating of the Monarchy from the Seleucidæ to the Romans; and proportionably here the subduing this heathen city to the faith of Christ, which was the effect of this blow that befell Rome. So the throwing the great stone into the sea, v. 21. alludes to Jer. 51. 63. Thou shalt cast a stone into the midst of Euphrates, and say, Thus shall Babylon fall, and shall not rise, &c. And yet Babylon long continued a great city, though the dominion of it was translated from the Chaldæans to the Medes. And for the voice of the harpers, &c. v. 23. it alludes to Jer. 25. 10. I will take from them the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the Bridegroom, and the voice of the Bride, the sound of the mill-stones, and the light of candle. And yet Judæa, of which that is spoken, still had people inhabiting it. And so these expressions, thus interpreted, as in the Paraphrase they have been, are perfectly agreeable to the sense which must needs belong to them in these other places where they are used by the Prophets. Meanwhile how great the destruction was that now befell that city, may competently appear by one testimony of Palladius that lived at that time, Lausiac. Hist. c. 118. in these words, Θύελλά τις βαρβαρικὴ ἡ καὶ ἐν περσπτείαις πάλαι χειμὼν ἐπῆλθε τῇ Ῥώμῃ, καὶ ἐκ ἔασεν οὐδὲ ποὺ ἐπ' ἀρχῆς ἀνδριάντας χαλκοῦς, ἀλλὰ πάντα πορθήσασα βαρβαρικῇ ὠμοτάτῃ παρόδῳ χειν ἀπωλείᾳ, ὡς γενέσθαι τῶν Ῥώμῃ τῶν ἐν χιλίοις διακοσίοις ἔτεσιν φιλοκαλησάσαν, καὶ τῷ ὄντι Σιβύλλης ῥῆσιν, ῥώμῃ. A certain barbarian tempest, which the Prophets of old had foretold, seized on Rome, and left not so much as the brazen statues in the streets, but plundering all with a barbarous madness, delivered it up to destruction, so that Rome which had flourished a thousand and two hundred years, according to the Sibylls word, became a desolation.

c. Σώματα

V. 13. Slaves] Σώματα, saith Julius Pollux, signifies, when it is taken simply by it self, without any additament, those that are not bond-slaves but free-men, which sell or hire themselves for money, Σώματα ἁπλῶς ἐκ ἂν λάβοις σώματα, &c. And this, because free-men have power over their own bodies, whereas slaves have nothing but souls. As for the ψυχὰς ἀνθρώπων, souls of men, the phrase is taken out of Ezechiel, c. 17. 13. who speaking of Tyre, a city of Merchants, saith that they traffick בנפש אדם super anima hominis, for the soul of man, which S. Hierome renders mancipia, slaves, and so the latter Greeks call slaves ψυχάρια, little souls; and so Gen. 12. 5. the souls which they had gotten in Haran, may be their bond-servants, because, as was said, slaves have souls though nothing else in their own power.

Ψυχαὶ ἀνθρώπων

d. Ἐμποροί σου

V. 23. Thy Merchants] Who are thy Merchants here, may be thought uncertain, because the word thy either may refer to forain nations, who trade with thee, or else may be thy traders or traffickers, the chapmen in Rome. In this latter sense some learned men have chosen to take it, that the Roman luxury was so great, that tradesmen that dealt in selling of commodities lived there like Princes. But if we compare this place with what is said of Tyrus, Ezech. 27. the former will appear to be the sense of it: for there v. 12. Tarshish was thy Merchant, and v. 13. Javan, &c. were thy Merchants; and so the meaning is clearly this, that the Merchants of other nations that traffick'd with Rome, had such vent for their commodities there at any rate that they grew very rich by it.

CHAP. XIX.

Paraphrase.

1. AND after these things I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, saying, Allelujah, Salvation, and glory, and honour, and power unto the Lord our God.]

1. Another vision I received much to the same purpose with the former; but differing in this, that the former looked especially on the city of Rome, and the luxury and pride of the inhabitants thereof, but this looked especially on the heathen religion there destroyed, and exchanged for the Christian, but that not all at once, but by several steps and degree: and first, methought, I heard a multitude of Christian people, (employed like the Saints and Angels in heaven) singing of Allelujahs, praises and thanksgivings to God, as to him who had wrought great mercies for them.

2. Magnifying his fidelity to themſelves, and his juſt vengeance on the Idolatrous perſecutors, that had debauched ſo many to their courſes, and ſhed ſo much blood of Chriſtians.

2. For true and righteous are his judgments, for he hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his ſervants at her hand.]

3. And again triumphing in this act of Gods, that this was like to be a fatal irreparable blow to the Roman Idolatry.

3. And * again they ſaid, Allelujah: and her ſmoak † aroſe up for ever and ever.]

4. And the Biſhops or repreſentatives or governours of the Chriſtian Church in Judæa, ch. 4. 4. and proportionably to them, all other Biſhops, and the four Apoſtles, formerly mention'd as the planters of the Chriſtian faith in Judæa, ch. 4. 6. and two of them now in Rome alſo, Peter and Paul, gave their acclamations to thoſe Hallelujahs.

4. And the four and twenty Elders, and the four * beaſts fell down, and worſhipped God that ſate on the throne, ſaying, Amen, Allelujah.]

* living creatures ζῶα

5. And all Chriſtians in the world, of what quality ſoever, were admoniſhed of their duty and obligation to doe ſo too.

5. And a voice came out of the throne, ſaying, Praiſe our God, all ye his ſervants, and ye that fear him both ſmall and great.]

6. And that admonition was preſently anſwer'd with the acclamation of all the nations (that is, Chriſtian people in them) over all the world, thundring out Allelujahs to God for this illuſtrious enlargement of the kingdome of Chriſt, the converſion of that Imperial city to Chriſtianity;

6. And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thundrings, ſaying, Allelujah, for the Lord God † omnipotent reigneth.]

7, 8. Which is, as it were, the marriage of Chriſt to a lovely ſpouſe his Church, (and ſo matter of rejoicing to all that hear of it, Joh. 3. 29.) which ſhould now be adorned as the Prieſt entring into the ſanctuary under the Law, to note the liberty and the privileges which ſhould be beſtowed on the Church by the Emperour Conſtantine.

7. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made her ſelf ready.

8. And to her was granted that ſhe ſhould be arrayed in fine linen, clean & white: for the fine linnen is the a * righteouſneſs of ſaints.]

a. * ordinances of the holies.

9. And an Angel bad me take notice of this, as of the bleſſedeſt happieſt change that ever was wrought in the world, and happy he that ſhould be a ſpectator of it. Of which yet I might be as confident it would come, as if I ſaw it, God having firmly decreed and made promiſe of it.

9. And he ſaith unto me, Write, Bleſſed are they which are called unto the marriage-ſupper of the Lamb. And he ſaith unto me, Theſe are the true ſayings of God.]

10. And the joy of this news ſo tranſported me, that as Abraham, for the joy of the good news, Gen. 17. 17. fell on his face, &c. ſo I could not but fall down to acknowledge my ſenſe of ſo bleſſed a news and meſſenger: But when I did ſo, he bid me forbear. For, ſaith he, I am no more honourably employ'd by Chriſt then thou art, I am now a meſſenger to make known this prophecie to thee of the converſion of Emperors, &c. to the Goſpel, and thou and ſuch as thou, Apoſtles of Chriſt, are Embaſſadours of as honourable and bleſſed news as this. Let God have the praiſe of all: for to be an Apoſtle of Chriſt, a witneſſe and publiſher of his reſurrection, &c. is to be a Prophet ſent and indued with the Spirit of God, and ſo as valuable as that office which now I am executing, of foretelling things to come.

10. And I fell at his feet to worſhip him: and he ſaid unto me, See thou doe it not; I am thy fellow-ſervant, and of thy brethren, that have the teſtimony of Jeſus: worſhip God, for the teſtimony of Jeſus is the Spirit of prophecie.]

11. And methought I ſaw Chriſt coming from heaven in a pompous manner, riding or ſitting upon the white horſe (as he did c. 6. 2.) that is, in the preaching of the Goſpel, and according to his promiſe, and his juſt judgments againſt his enemies, proceeding againſt them, that is, againſt the Emperour Maxentius (ſee c. 16. 12, 14.)

11. And I ſaw heaven open'd, and behold a white horſe, and he that ſate upon him was called faithfull and true, and in righteouſneſſe he doth judge and make warre.]

12. And methought his eyes were like fire, ſearching to the ſecrets of the heart (noting him to judge and diſcern who are fit to be deſtroyed, who not) and he had many crowns on his head, tokens and teſtimonies of as many victories over enemies, whom he had overcome either by their yielding, that is, converſion, or falling before him, that is, deſtruction; and as a token of thoſe victories, he hath a note or ticket by which to receive his reward, which no body ſees but himſelf, (ſee ch. 2. 17. and note i.) that is, he is acknowledged victorious.

12. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns, and he had a name written that no man knew but he himſelf.]

13. And he was in a royal purple garment, noting that regal power to which he was inſtalled as a reward of his crucifixion, Iſa. 63. 1, 2. Phil. 2. 9. now to belong to him moſt illuſtriouſly; and his name in which he was repreſented, was that known title of Chriſt, The word of God, noting that which is now done to be an effect of divine power, wrought by his word, without any viſible working of ordinary means toward it.

13. And he was clothed in a veſture dipt in blood, and his name is called, The word of God.]

14. And the Angels the miniſters of his vengeance attended him in a glorious and ſplendid manner.

14. And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horſes, clothed in fine linen, white and clean.]

15. And out of his mouth proceeded that terrible ſharp part of the Goſpel, his threats againſt his enemies, and thoſe now to be executed on the heathen, whom he ſhall now ſubdue by his power, becauſe they will not be converted, in which reſpect he is now preparing for them the bittereſt poiſonous potion that ever was drank by any.

15. And out of his mouth goeth a ſharp ſword, that with it he ſhould ſmite the nations, and he ſhall rule them with a rod of iron, and he treadeth the wine-preſſe of the † fierceneſſe and wrath of almighty God.]

† bitter wine, and of the wrath of God, the ruler of all, οἶνον τοῦ θυμοῦ καὶ τῆς ὀργῆς τοῦ θεοῦ τοῦ παντοκράτορος

16. And by this means he will ſhew himſelf what really he is, too ſtrong for any power on earth to reſiſt or ſtand out againſt.

b. 16. And he hath b on his veſture and on his thigh a name written, King of Kings, and Lord of lords.]

17. And methought I ſaw an Angel ſtanding in the ſun (noting the clearneſs of the viſion now delivered) and he called to all the birds of prey, Goths and Vandals, &c. that they ſhould come, as to a feaſt, to this judgment of God upon theſe Idolaters, (noting the great ſlaughter which was now foretold, to which Vultures doe betake themſelves out of a natural ſagacity, as Job ſaith of the Eagle, Where the ſlain are, there is he.)

17. And I ſaw an Angel ſtanding in the ſun, and he cried with a loud voice, ſaying to all the fowls that flie in the midſt of heaven, Come and gather your ſelves together to the ſupper of the great God,]

18. That

* rulers of thousands, χιλιάρχων

18. And telling them that there should be abundant prey for them, an huge destruction.

19. And I saw the beasts and the Kings of the earth, and their armies gathered together to make warre against him that sat on the horse, and against his army.]

19. And the Idol-worship set up at Rome, and under her dominion, set it self to persecute Christianity.

20. And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake burning with brimstone.]

20. And the Roman Idolatry, and the Magick, and Auguries, and the divinations of the heathen Priests, that had deceived the carnal Christians so farre as to consent and comply with the heathenish Idolatry, were to be like Sodom and Gomorrha, utterly extirpated: see ch. 13. 11. and note g.

21. And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth, and all the fowls were filled with their flesh.]

21. And the rest, that is, all the secret Idolaters, were swept away in the same destruction also, (for thinking that these armies against Rome would be favourable to any more then to the Orthodox, pure Christians, they then thought it a fit time to discover themselves, but strangely miscarried in it, the Christians that fled to the Basilica, or Temple, being the only persons that found deliverance, see note on ch. 17. e.) and so all their Idol-worship was destroyed, (which is the summe of this Chapter.)

Annotations on Chap. XIX.

a. Δικαιώματα τῶν ἁγίων

V. 8. Righteousnesse of the Saints] Some difficulty there is in this phrase, τὰ δικαιώματα ὅσιοι τῶν ἁγίων, which is ordinarily rendred the righteousnesse of the saints. For the word δικαιώματα is not thus used in these books, (see Note on Rom. 8. b.) but for the Ordinances of the Mosaical law. And then ἅγια being the very word which is used to denote the Sanctuary, Heb. 8. 2. ἁγίων λειτουργὸς, the minister of the sanctuary, and ἅγια the sanctuary, ch. 9. 2. and elsewhere, and τῶν ἁγίων being the Neuter as well as the Masculine gender, and by consequence capable of being accommodated to this sense, it is not improbable that δικαιώματα ἁγίων should denote the ordinances of the sanctuary, the Levitical laws or customes, among which this was one, that the Priest, when he went into the Sanctuary, should wear that vesture of fine linen, pure and white. Thus Levit. 16. 'tis appointed, Thus shall Aaron come into the holy place, v. 3. He shall put on the holy linen coat, and he shall have the linen breeches upon his flesh, and shall be girded with a linen girdle, and with the linen mitre shall he be attired: these are holy garments, &c. that is, the garments which he is to use when he goes into the Sanctuary, which being appointed him by this law of God to Moses, may fitly be called δικαιώματα τῶν ἁγίων the Ordinances of the holies. And if it be so, then it will most fitly be applied to this Spouse of Christ, the Christian Church (to which Christ was ready so solemnly to be married, ver. 7. in respect of the publick profession of the Christian religion by the Emperor Constantine and his Courtiers) that it should now be clothed after the manner of the Priest when he went into the Sanctuary, to note the great liberty and immunities and privileges now bestow'd on the Church by the Emperour. This we have formerly seen express'd by our being Kings and Priests unto God, (chap. 1. Note c.) Priests in respect of liberty of assemblies, and executing the office of Bishops, &c. in the Church: Which being so eminently bestow'd on the Church by Constantine, above all that ever had been in the Church before, may here in like manner be most fitly express'd by being clothed in the holy garments, which denoted the Priests going into the Sanctuary.

b. Ἱμάτιον Νυμφ.

V. 16. On his vesture and on his thigh] The mention of the ἱμάτιον and μηρὸς, vesture and thigh, are here put together, to denote the robe Imperial by the former, and the sword, which is girded on the thigh, by the latter, as enfignes of supreme power and authority, especially when on them both, on the Robe and the hilt of the sword, as the ensigne of that office, is written that most honourable title, KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS, thereby noting him to be superiour to all power and force in the world, triumphantly victorious over all.

CHAP. XX.

Paraphrase.

1. AND I saw an Angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomelesse pit, and a great chain † in his hand.

1. And I saw another representation, by which I discerned what should succeed the conversion of heathen Rome to Christianity, viz. a tranquillity and flourishing estate of Christianity for some time, though not for ever. And first, methought, I saw an angel coming from heaven, a token of very good news at this time and elsewhere (as sometimes of judgments from God) with the key of hell, and a great chain in his hand (to signifie what follows v. 2. that Satan should now be shut up and chained.)

2. And he laid hold on the Dragon, that old Serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand years,]

2. And he apprehended the Devil, that is set down under the title of Satan and the Dragon in former visions, c. 12. 9. and bound him for the space of a thousand years, noting the tranquillity and freedome from persecutions that should be allowed the Church of Christ from the time of Constantines coming to the Empire.

3. And cast him into the bottomlesse pit, and * shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand yeares should be fulfilled, and after that he must be loosed a little season.]

3. And he secured him there by all ways of security, binding, locking, sealing him up, that he might not deceive and corrupt the world to idolatry, as till then he had done, but permit the Christian profession to flourish till these thousand years were at end, and after that he should get loose again for some time, and make some havock in the Christian world.

4. And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witnesse of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands, and they a lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.]

4. And I saw chairs and some sitting upon them, that is, Christian assemblies and judicatures, and such a general profession of Christianity, in a. opposition to the idolatries of the

the heathens, thoſe in the Capitol at Rome, and the like unto them in other places of the Roman Empire (ſee note on c. 13. b.) as if all that had died for Chriſt, and held out conſtantly againſt all the heathen perſecutions, had now been admitted to live and reign with Chriſt, that is, to live quiet, flouriſhing, Chriſtian lives here, for that ſpace of a thouſand years, v. 5.

b. 5. As for the old Idolaters or Gnoſticks, there was nothing like them now to be ſeen, nor ſhould be till the end of this ſpace of a thouſand years. This is it that is proverbially deſcribed by the firſt reſurrection, that is, a flouriſhing condition of the Church under the Meſſias.

5. But [b] the reſt of the dead lived not again until the thouſand years were finiſhed. This is the [c] firſt reſurrection.]

d. 6. And bleſſed and holy, that is, ſafe (ſeparate from all danger) are all they that are really in the number of thoſe that partake effectually of theſe benefits, who as they are reſcued from thoſe deſtructions which the Roman tyranny threatned them with, which is the interpretation of the ſecond death, ſo they ſhall now have the bleſſing of free undiſturbed aſſemblies for all this ſpace: ſee c. 1. note d.

6. Bleſſed and holy is he that hath part in the firſt reſurrection: on ſuch [d] the ſecond death hath no power, but they ſhall be Prieſts of God and of Chriſt, and ſhall reign with him a thouſand years.]

c. 7. But after this ſpace, the ſins of Chriſtians provoking God to it, this reſtraint being taken off from Satan, he ſhall fall a diſturbing the Chriſtian profeſſion again. (This fell out about a thouſand years after the date of Conſtantines Edict for the liberty of the Chriſtian profeſſion, at which time the Mahomedan religion was brought into Greece, a ſpecial part of the Roman Empire.)

7. And when the [e] thouſand years are expired, Satan ſhall be looſed out of his priſon,]

f. 8. And then ſhall he ſet about the ſeducing of men in all quarters to the Mahomedan or other falſe religions, particularly Gog and Magog, the inhabitants of thoſe Countries where the Mahomedan religion began to flouriſh, to engage them in vaſt numbers in a war to invade and waſte the Chriſtian Church in Greece, &c.

8. And ſhall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four † quarters of the earth, [f] Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battel, the number of whom is as the ſand of the ſea.] † corners of the land γωνίας τῆς γῆς

9. And accordingly, methought, they did, they went in great numbers, and beſieged and took Conſtantinople, that city ſo precious in God's eyes for the continuance of the pure Chriſtian profeſſion in it, and known among the Grecians by the name of new Sion, and in the chief Church there, called the Church of Sophia, they ſet up the worſhip of Mahomet, (juſt two hundred years ago:) And thoſe that did ſo, are in their poſterity to be deſtroyed, (and though it be not yet done, 'tis to be expected in God's good time, when Chriſtians that are thus puniſhed for their ſins ſhall reform and amend their lives.)

9. And they went upon the breadth of the earth, and compaſſed the camp of the Saints about, and the beloved city; and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.]

10. And the devil, methought, that wrought in them, that ſtirred them up, was remanded and returned again into his priſon, and this Empire of his was again deſtroyed, as the idol-worſhip of the heathens, and the Magicians, Sorcerers, Augurs, and heathen Prieſts before had been.

10. And the Devil that deceived them was caſt into the lake of fire and brimſtone, where the beaſt and the falſe prophet are, and ſhall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.]

11. And after this, in another part of this viſion I ſaw, methought, a throne ſet up in great ſplendor and glory, and Chriſt in Majeſty ſitting thereon, very terrible, and a new condition of all things in the world was now to be expected. (And ſo that which was the deſign of all theſe viſions, (ſent in an Epiſtle to the ſeven Churches, to teach them conſtancy in preſſures) is ſtill here clearly made good, that though Chriſtianity be perſecuted, and, for the ſins of the vicious profeſſors thereof, permitted oft to be brought very low, yet God will ſend relief to them that are faithful, reſcue the conſtant walker, and deſtroy the deſtroyer, and finally caſt out Satan out of his poſſeſſions; and then, as here, come to judge the world in that laſt eternal doom.)

11. And I ſaw a great white throne, and him that ſate on it, from whoſe face the earth and the heaven fled away, and there was found no place for them.]

12. And all that ever died were called out of their graves before him: & as for the judging every one, the rolls or records of all their actions were produced, & withall another book brought forth, called the book of Life, (ſee note on Rev. 3. b.) wherein every ones name is entred that ever undertook Gods ſervice, and blotted out again, if they were fallen off from him, and according to their works, ſo were their names continued in that book of life, if they continued faithful unto death, but not otherwiſe.

12. And I ſaw the dead, ſmall and great, ſtand before * God: and the books were opened, and another book was opened, which is the book of life, and the dead were judged out of thoſe things which were written in the books according to their works.] * or the throne, the King's MS. reads τῷ θρόνῳ

13. And all that were buried in the ſea, that is, periſhed by water, and all that were dead and laid in graves, and all that any other way were dead, came out of their graves, their bodies were re-united to their ſouls, and every one was judged according to his works.

13. And the ſea gave up the dead which were in it, and death and † hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to their works.] † hades

14. And then death it ſelf was deſtroyed eternally, an everlaſting being now ſucceeding in the place of this frail mortal one. And this is it that is proverbially called the ſecond death, wherein this whole world hath its period and conſummation.

14. And death and * hell were caſt into the lake of fire: this is the ſecond death.] * hades

15. And whoſoever had not his name found written and continued in (not blotted out of) the book of life v. 12. whoſoever died not conſtant in the faith, he was caſt out into eternal fire.

15. And whoſoever was not found written in the book of life, was caſt into the lake of fire.]

Annotations on Chap. XX.

a. Ἔζησαν καὶ ἐβασίλευσαν μετὰ Χριστοῦ

V. 4. Lived and reigned with Chriſt] The meaning of the thouſand years living and reigning with Chriſt of thoſe that were beheaded, &c. may perhaps be ſufficiently cleared and underſtood, by obſerving theſe three things; Firſt, that here is no mention of any new reign of Chriſt on earth, but only of them that were beheaded, and of them which had not worſhip'd, &c. living and reigning with Chriſt. The doctrine of the Millenaries ſuppoſes the former, that Chriſt muſt come down on earth, and have a new kingdome here in this world. But this thoſe mens living and reigning with Chriſt doth not ſuppoſe, but rather the contrary, that the kingdome of Chriſt here ſpoken of is that which he had before, and which is every where called his kingdome, and that now only thoſe that had been killed, and baniſh'd out of it before, were admitted into a participation participation of that kingdome μετὰ τοῦ Χριστοῦ with Christ. Now what this living and reigning of the beheaded, &c. (then beginning) was, may appear by conſidering what is meant, firſt, by the beheaded, and others here named; then ſecondly, by their living and reigning. The beheaded are they that reſiſted unto blood in their combats againſt the Heathen idolatry and practices, the conſtant ſervants of Chriſt, that perſevered ſo till death, and that in oppoſition to the beaſt and his image, to that which was practiſed in Rome to Jupiter Capitolinus, and the tranſcripts of it in other places (ſee Note on c. 13. g. and r.) and ſo all thoſe phraſes conclude the ſubject of the propoſition to be the pure, conſtant, perſevering Chriſtians. One thing only is to be obſerved of theſe, that by them are not ſignified the ſame particular perſons or individual members of the Church that had formerly been ſlain, any more then the ſame individual perſons of the reſt of the dead, v. 5. (that is, of the Apoſtatizing unchriſtian livers) can be thought to have lived again after the end of the thouſand years, when they are ſaid to be revived, and ſo Satan to be let looſe a little while; but rather on the one ſide, as on the other, a ſucceſſion of ſuch as they were, the Church of Chriſt being to be conſidered as a tranſient body, ſuch as a river, &c. which alwaies runs in a ſucceſſion of parts, one following the other in a perpetual motion and mutation: In which reſpect I ſuppoſe it is ſaid of the Church, that the gates of hades ſhall never prevail againſt it, that is, that it ſhall never be deſtroyed, which of any particular perſons, or the Church of all the Christians of any one age, cannot ſo fitly be affirmed, but only of the Church in the perpetual ſucceſſion of Chriſtians. And then for theſe mens living and reigning, firſt, it muſt be obſerved, that 'tis not here ſaid that they revived, or were raiſed, as the Millenaries pretenſions ſuppoſe, but only that they lived and reigned; which two being oppoſite to dying and being ſubject to others, will denote a peaceable, proſperous, flouriſhing eſtate of the Orthodox profeſſors, in ſtead of their former ſad and perſecuted condition. For that is the meaning of living, as may appear by the title ὁ ζῶν living given to Chriſt, ch. 1. 18. in oppoſition to ἐγενόμην νεκρὸς, I was dead, his illuſtrious, in ſtead of his deſpiſed condition; and ſo of reigning, as of being Kings (ſee Note on c. 1. d.) and of being Kings and reigning upon the earth, c. 5. 10. And all this together will be one way of evidencing the truth of this interpretation. Secondly, the meaning of the phraſe will appear by comparing it with that other phraſe, by which the ſame thing is expreſs'd, v. 1, 2, 3. binding of Satan, and caſting him into the abyſſe, ſhutting and ſealing him up, that he ſhould deceive the nations no more, that is clearly the reſtraining of Satan's malice, and ſhortning of his power in perſecuting and corrupting the Chriſtian Church: by conſent with which, their living and reigning muſt needs ſignifie their perſevering and enjoying quiet. Thirdly, by their having and ſitting on thrones, and judgments being given unto them, which literally ſignifies the quiet poſſeſſion of judicatures and cenſures in the Church, that diſcipline by which purity is preſerved, and which is never enjoyed quietly in the Church but by the countenance and favour of Princes, which therefore is to be reſolved the meaning of their reigning (as moſt remarkably they began to doe in Conſtantine's time; ſee c. 19. 8. who ſet up Eccleſiaſtical judicatures in his Empire) as it is of their ſitting on thrones, whereas the letting Satan looſe is the caſting off theſe cords from them. And this is the clear meaning of the firſt reſurrection, ſee Note c. As for the ſpace of a thouſand years, ſee Note e.

V. 5. The reſt of the dead] It follows here, that the λοιποὶ τῶν νεκρῶν, the reſt of the dead revived not till the thouſand years were done. Who the reſt of the dead are is manifeſt; not all beſide the Martyrs, as the Millenaries pretend, but all but thoſe formerly named, v. 4. that is, all that worſhipp'd the beaſt, or his image, or received his mark in their foreheads or hands, that is, all the Idolaters and Apoſtates, and remainders of Gnoſtick Chriſtians, and all that complied with either, which are called λοιποὶ νεκρῶν the reſt of the dead moſt fitly. For firſt, it hath been manifeſt, ch. 19. 18, 21. that there were others ſlain beſide thoſe that were beheaded for the conſtancy of their confeſſion of Chriſt; nay ſecondly, at this part of the Viſion 'tis clear, that as the conſtant profeſſors were not all ſlain, but only ſome of them beheaded, and others preſerved, (and ſo beſide the beheaded here are enumerated thoſe that had not worſhipp'd the beaſt, nor his image, nor received his mark upon their foreheads or hands) ſo the Idolaters, Apoſtates and Gnoſtick Chriſtians, &c. had their univerſal ſlaughters, ch. 19. 2, 3. 20. 21. and therefore theſe may well be οἱ λοιποὶ τῶν νεκρῶν, the reſt of the dead here, it being punctually ſaid of them, ch. 19. 21. καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ ἀπεκτάνθησαν, the reſt were ſlain. And then that they revived not till the thouſand years finiſhed, muſt needs ſignifie that the Church was now for that ſpace freed from ſuch Heathen perſecuters, and purified from ſuch avow'd mixtures of thoſe vile unchriſtian practices, which is but the negative part annex'd to the poſitive preceding.

Ib. Firſt reſurrection] What is meant by the firſt reſurrection here, may be diſcerned by comparing it with the ſecond reſurrection in the ordinary notion of it. That ſignifies the reſurrection to eternal life: Proportionably this muſt ſignifie a reviving, a reſtoring to life, though not to that eternal. Here it is figuratively uſed to expreſſe the flouriſhing condition of the Chriſtian Church for that thouſand years wherein the Chriſtian profeſſors, in oppoſition to idolatrous Heathens and Gnoſtick Chriſtians, live ſafely and happily in the enjoying the aſſemblies; which is, ſaith he, as if the primitive Martyrs were fetch'd out of their graves to live again here in tranquillity upon the earth. Where only it is to be noted, that the reſurrection here is of the Church, not of the particular perſons (the beheaded, &c.) thus to be underſtood, that the Church that was perſecuted, and ſuppreſs'd, and ſlain as it were, and again corrupted and vitiated in its members, now roſe from the dead, revived again.

V. 6. The ſecond death] This phraſe the ſecond death is four times uſed in this book, ch. 2. 11. and here ch. 20. 6. then v. 14. then c. 21. 8. It ſeems to be taken from the Jews, who uſe it proverbially for final, utter, irreverſible deſtruction. So in the Jeruſalem Targum, Deut. 33. 6. Let Reuben live, and let him not die the ſecond death, by which the wicked die in the world to come. Where, whatſoever be ſignified among them by the world to come, (the age of the Meſſias in whatſoever Jewiſh notion of it) it ſeems to denote ſuch a death from which there is no releaſe. And according to this notion of it, as it reflects fitly on the firſt death, (which is a deſtruction, but ſuch as is reparable by a reviving or reſurrection, but this paſt hopes, and excluſive of that) ſo will all the ſeveral places wherein 'tis uſed be clearly interpreted: ch. 2. 11. he that overcomes ſhall not be hurt by the ſecond death, that is, if this Church ſhall hold out conſtant, it ſhall not be cut off, that is, though it ſhall meet with great perſecutions, ver. 10. and death it ſelf, yet that utter exciſion would no way better be prevented then by this of conſtancy and perſeverance in ſuffering of all. So here, ſpeaking of the flouriſhing condition of the Chriſtian Church, reviving after all its perſecutions and corruptions to a ſtate of tranquillity and purity, On theſe, ſaith he, the ſecond death hath no power, that is, they have not incurred that utter exciſion (having their part in the firſt reſurrection) but they ſhall be Prieſts to Chriſt and God, and reign, &c. that is, have a flouriſhing time of Chriſtian profeſſion for that ſpace of a thouſand years. So in the 14. ver. where death and hades are caſt into the lake of fire, that is, death and the ſtate of mortality utterly deſtroyed, (O death, I will be thy death,) it is added, this is the ſecond death, that is, mortality is utterly deſtroyed, there ſhall now be no more death, the life ſhall be eternal: ſo c. 21. 8. the lake that burneth with fire and brimſtone (the utter irreverſible deſtruction, ſuch as fell on Sodome, called αἰώνιον πῦρ eternal fire, utterly conſumptive) is called the ſecond death, into which they are ſaid to goe that are never to appear in the Church again. And though in theſe different matters ſome difference there muſt needs be in the ſignifications, yet in all of them the notion of utter deſtruction, final, irreparable exciſion, may very properly be retained, and applied to each of them.

V. 7. Thouſand years are expired] When theſe thouſand years of the peaceable Chriſtian profeſſion ſhould begin, and when determine, is a thing of ſome doubt. And the cauſe of the doubt is, the ſeveral points of time wherein the deſtruction of Heatheniſme in the Roman Empire may be placed. For as in every ſo great a change, there are ſeveral ſtages, or degrees of motion, ſo was it here. Conſtantine's receiving the faith, and concluding of the perſecutions, and by Decree proclaiming liberty of Chriſtianity, may moſt properly be ſtyled the binding of Satan, the dragon that ſought to devour the child as ſoon as it was born; and then the beginning of the thouſand years will fall about An. Dom. 311. at which time the converſion of heathen Rome to Chriſtianity is ſet down, and celebrated by Prudentius, l. 1. cont. Symmachum, beginning thus,

c.

Cùm princeps gemini bis victor cæde tyranni, &c.

To the ſame purpoſe ſee Euſebius Eccleſ. Hiſt. l. 19. c. 1. But then, after that the Emperors were Chriſtian, Heatheniſme ſtill continued in Rome and in the Empire, in ſome degree (ſee Note on ch. 17. f.) till by the coming of the Goths and Vandals and Hunnes, under Alaricus, Genſericus and Attilas, the city and Empire of Rome was, all the heathen part of it, deſtroyed, and Chriſtianity fully victorious over it. And if this be the beginning of the binding of Satan, and caſtſting him into the abyſſe, then the thouſand years muſt have another date about the year of Chriſt 450. or 455. the city having been taken by Alaricus and the Goths An. Ch. 410. and by Genſericus and the Vandals An. 455. but the warre between Theodoſius and Genſericus beginning An. 441. and the great fight between the Romans under the Emperor Marcion, and the Hunnes under Attilas (in which 162000 were killed) being An. Chr. 451. the greateſt ſlaughter that hath ever been read of, as it is deſcribed by Jornandes, a little river being by the blood of the ſlain raiſed, ſaith he, into a torrent. Agreeable to this double beginning may be aſſigned a double end to theſe thouſand years. For if the letting looſe of Satan here were at the riſing of the Ottoman family, and bringing Aſia and Greece to Mahomediſme, that will be about the year 1310. and ſo about a thouſand years from Conſtantine's Edict: But if it were at the Turks taking of Conſtantinople (mentioned here ver. 9) and turning the Temple of Sophia to Mahomedane worſhip about the year 1450. then will that be about a thouſand years from the ſacking of Rome by Genſericus. But the former of theſe interpretations is moſt fit for the place, that from Conſtantine's Edict to the planting of Mahomediſme in Greece by Ottoman. For the taking of Conſtantinople is mentioned after this letting looſe of Satan, and therefore is not it ſelf in any reaſon to be defined that point of time wherein he was let looſe, but rather that other wherein Mahomediſme began to proſper; for then the Chriſtian religion fell under heavy perſecutions again, which is contrary to the Martyrs living and reigning (as it hath been explained to ſignifie Note a. & c. 1. e.) which was to laſt for the whole thouſand years; and did ſo in the former account, but wants ſeven-ſcore years of it in the latter. I can foreſee but one objection againſt this beginning of the thouſand years from Conſtantine, and that is the practices of Julian againſt the Chriſtians, which ſoon followed Conſtantines favour to them; which may conſequently be thought unreconcileable with the truth of this prediction thus interpreted, the peace of the Church, and ceſſation from perſecution for that ſpace. But to this the anſwer will be eaſie, that Julian, although himſelf an Apoſtate, was yet for ſome time ſo far from attempting to perſecute the Chriſtian religion, that he choſe rather to diſſemble his own, and to make as if he were a Chriſtian. So ſaith Aſterius that lived in his time, Hom. 3. de avarit. Τὸ πρόσωπον τῦ Χριστιανῦ ἀφεὶς ἀπορίπτω, γυμνώσας ἣ τὸ δέρμα τὸ κομιδῆ, ὃ ἐν πολλῷ τῷ χρόνῳ καθυπεκείμην, &c. He put off the vizard of the Chriſtian, and laid open the ſcene, by drawing the curtain, which he had a long time kept cloſe: and to that purpoſe Epiphaniæ feſto templum Chriſtianorum ingreſſus eſt, ſolenniter numine invocato, he went to the Chriſtians Church at their Chriſtmas feſtivities, and ſolemnly joyn'd in the ſervice, ſaith Ammianus Marcellinus. After, when he came to put off the diſguiſe, and to appear, as he was, an enemy of the Chriſtians, yet this he did more by ſubtilty then violence, arte potius quàm poteſtate, he made uſe of art more then power, ſaith Oroſius l. 7. c. 30. as all writers both profane and Eccleſiaſtical acknowledge. All that Ammianus mentions of his cruelty, is that he permitted not the ſchools of Grammar or Rhetorick to be open for them, Inter quæ erat inclemens, quòd docere vetuit Magiſtros Rhetoricos & Grammaticos Chriſtianos, nè tranſirent à numinum cultu, One of his faults was his cruelty to the Chriſtians, that he forbad the Maſters to teach them, for fear they ſhould forſake the worſhip of the gods, li. 25. to which the Chriſtian writers add, that he admitted them not into the army, nor offices, nor to honours. Ut negaretur fides Chriſti, honoribus magis provocare, quàm tormentis cogere ſtuduit, That the faith of Chriſt might be denyed, he more indeavoured to provoke men by honours, then to conſtrain them by torments. Oroſ. l. 7. c. 30. So Aſterius, Hom. 3. de avarit. ſpeaking of his Apoſtaſie, adds, Καὶ τοῖς τῦτο βυλομένοις ποιεῖν πολλὰ προσέλεθε τὰ χρήα, many advantages were propoſed to them that would doe the ſame: And again, πόσοι τὸ τῆ ἀξιωμάτων δέλεαρ ὡσπερεξάμενοι, μεθ' ἑκόντος καθέπιον τὸ τῆ παραβάσεως ἄγκιστρον; How many receiving the baite of dignities ſwallowed down the hook of Apoſtaſie? Δακτυλοδεικλέμενοι παρεδόθη, ἢ ἕτοι τῷ Χριστῷ, δι' ὀλίγον ἀργύριον, &c. pointed at as traitors, and thoſe of Chriſt, for a little money. Militiæ cingulum non dari niſi immolantibus jubet, procurationem provinciarum juriſque dicendi Chriſtianis ſtatuit non debere committi, utpote quibus etiam lex propria gladio uti vetuiſſet, He would not allow the military girdle to be given to any that did not ſacrifice, permitted not the government of the provinces, or making of laws, to be committed to the Chriſtians, objecting that their own law forbad them to uſe the ſword, Ruffin. Eccl. hiſt. l. 1. c. 32. To the ſame purpoſe 'tis thought it was that he promoted the building of the Temple of the Jews at Jeruſalem, but God permitted not that to proſper; but as Ammianus l. 23. confeſſeth, metuendi globi flammarum prope fundamenta crebris inſultibus erumpentes fecere locum exuſtis aliquoties operantibus inacceſſum, hócque modo elemento obſtinatius repellente, ceſſavit inceptum, Great flames oft broke out near the foundations and burnt the workmen, and kept them off, and ſo the fire obſtinately reſiſting, the attempt was given over. And Ruffinus's obſervation is very pertinent to this whole matter, l. 1. c. 32. Proficiebat quotidie in hujuſcemodi legibus exquirendis, quibus quibus etsi quid versutum vel callidum, tamen quod minus videretur crudele, decerneret, He daily sought out new laws, wherein though he shew'd great subtilty of invention and cunning against the Christians, yet he abstain'd from all that might have any shew of cruelty. And though S. Jerome, Theodoret and * others affirm of him that at his expedition against the Persians he vowed to offer up to his gods the blood of the Christians, in case he returned conquerour; yet we know that God so disposed, that he was wounded and died in that † expedition, and that in the prime of his strength at one and thirty years old, and as Orosius saith, Deus impia consilia impii morte dissolvit, God brought the wicked counsels to nought by the death of this wicked man. And accordingly Athanasius is said to have foretold of him in these words, comforting the Christians who feared a persecution, Nolite, ô filii, conturbari, nubecula est & citò pertransit, Be not troubled, it is a little cloud and passeth away quickly, Ruffin. l.1.c.34. And a Christian being asked by Libanius, Julian's instructer, what the carpenter's son was a doing, answered that he was making a coffin for Julian: Which befell him so soon after, that S. Jerome on Habakkuk c. 3. relates a speech of a witty heathen on occasion of Julian's death; How, said he, doe the Christians say of their God that he is patient and long-suffering, whereas by this Emperor's death it appears that he could not defer his indignation, nè modico quidem spatio, for the least space: Nihil iracundius, nihil hoc furore præsentius, said he, There could not be greater and more sudden anger and fury express'd. And although Athanasius himself was by him designed to the sharpest part of persecution, yet God was pleased to avert it from him, as Ruffinus relates the story l.1. cap. 34. And when at last upon occasion of the removal of the body of the Martyr Babylas, he commanded the Christians to be seised on and punish'd, the story mentions none but only Theodorus, a young man, that suffered by it, who sang all the while under the tormentor, and complained when his punishment was at end, that he was a looser by his release. See Ruffinus, and Socrates, and Theodoret. By all which appears the power and fidelity of God in making good this promise of his to the Christian Church, and restraining this Apostate's malice from disquieting the Church, and so it is a very great and convincing argument for the truth of this interpretation, rather then an objection against it. Having said thus much for the interpreting of these thousand years in a way which is very remote from the conceits of the Millenaries, I must expect this objection and suggestion of theirs against it; 1. that the Chiliasts opinion and interpretation of this place was received universally in the first ages of the Church; and 2dly, that it was delivered down from the Apostles, and that Justin Martyr hath affirmed the former of all Orthodox men in his time, and Irenæus produced testimonies of the latter. For the testimony of Justin Martyr, it is true that he hath these words of this matter, ἐγὼ ὃ καὶ ἄλλοι πολλοὶ ταῦτα φρονοῦμεν, but I and many others are of this opinion; and again, ἐγὼ ὃ καὶ εἴ τινες εἰσιν ὀρθογνώμονες κατὰ πάντα Χριστιανοὶ, I and as many Christians as are orthodox in all things. From hence indeed it is rightly concluded, that Justin was himself of this opinion, and some, nay, if we believe him, many others with him. But that either this was the uncontradicted doctrine of the Church in his age, or that Justin saith it was so, is falsly collected from hence. For first, they are the plain words of Justin p. 306. b. Πολλὰς ὃ αὖ καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς καθαρᾶς καὶ εἰλικρινοῦς ὄντων Χριστιανῶν γνώμης τοῦτο μὴ γνωρίζειν ὑπέμνησά σοι, I have signified to you that many do not acknowledge this doctrine (of Christ's reigning here a thousand years) and those Christians of pure and pious opinion and judgment; and that either the αὖ should against consent of all Copies be turned into ὅ, or that the μὴ not should be left out, were a bold Criticisme, and of very ill example to the evacuating the force of all testimonies, (making mens words mutable into the direct contradictory) and beside would render it a very perplexed period. Secondly, it appears by Trypho, that he thought Justin had equivocated in telling him he believed it, upon this ground, because other Christians were not of this opinion. Hereupon he saith to Justin, εἰπὲ μοι ἀληθῶς, tell me truly whether you are sincerely of that opinion, ἢ ἵνα δόξῃς ἀνικανῶς· and Justin answers, that he would not say it, if he had not thought it, and thereupon repeats his having told him, that he and many others were of that opinion, and promises to write a book of this disputation, and confesse it to others as well as him; and adds that he means not to follow men and their doctrines, but God: which argues his acknowledgment that the opinion was not uncontradicted by men, nor generally consented to by Christians. Thirdly, those words which seem most to the contrary, ἐγὼ ὃ καὶ εἴ τινές εἰσιν ὀρθογνώμονες κατὰ πάντα Χριστιανοὶ, but I and as many as are Orthodox in all things, will not come home to the proving any more then this, that he was of this opinion, and some others in all things consenting with him. For it being supposed that he was of that opinion, it cannot be expected of him that he should affirm any, that held it not, to be of right opinion in all things. Fourthly, it appears that he speaks of three sorts of men; the first that denied both the Resurrection and the thousand years, and those he calls λεγόμενοι Χριστιανοὶ, ἄθεοι, ἀσεβεῖς, ἀμαθεῖς), nominal Christians, Atheists, impious, heretical leaders; the second that acknowledged the Resurrection, and denied the Millennium, and those are contained under Christians of pure and pious opinions; the third that held and maintained both, as himself and many others, and (if there were, or) as many as were Orthodox in all things, that is, that in his opinon were such. As for Irenæus, 'tis true, he sets dow the doctrine of the Chiliasts for a tradition, but withall renders an account of his doing so, Presbyteri qui Johannem viderunt meminerunt audisse se ab eo, & hæc Papias Johannis auditor, Polycarpi contubernalis, vetus homo, testata reliquit, The Elders that saw John, remember that they heard this of him, and Papias, S. John's auditor, that dwelt with Polycarp, an antient man, left these things testified. By which it appears that this testimony of Irenæus amounts but to little more then the assertion of Papias, who hath not been a person of any reverend authority in the Church of God. And indeed upon the same grounds Irenæus takes up another opinion, and mentions it as a tradition too, (which is sure farre enough from being tradition, or true) that Christ lived till betwixt 40 and 50 years old, for which he voucheth Scripture, and the authority of omnes Seniores, all the Elders, qui in Asia apud Johannem discipulum Domini convenerunt, that were in Asia with John, who, saith he, witnesse that John delivered this to them, and farther, that they that saw the other Apostles, heard the same of them, and bear witnesse of such a relation. Whatsoever can be built on such an authority may as competently be refuted by the authority and reasons of Dionysius Alexandrinus, that lived not much above an hundred years after S. John, and opposed himself directly against it: and though some others were otherwise minded, yet was this doctrine of the Chiliasts condemned by the Church, and since that time, all accounted Hereticks that maintained it.

V. 8. Gog and Magog] What is meant by Gog and Magog must first be fetch'd from the prophecy of Ezechiel c. 38. 39. where by both these together Antiochus the great enemy and destroyer of the Jews is signified, as having the dominion of Syria and Asia both: see the Learned H. Grotius on Ezekiel. Answerable to

Dial cum Tryph. p. 307

this is it that Gog should here signifie the Lydian Asia, or Lydia, and the neighbouring regions, the Princes whereof are called Gygæ, which is lightly deduced from hence. And so in the collection of the Sibyllin oracles, Lydia and Pamphylia are expres'd to be the interpretation of Gog. And by this the Ottoman family is fitly described, not onely in respect of their malice & mischief wrought on the people of God, which makes the resemblance betwixt them and Antiochus complete (see c. 14. note c.) but because they first shew'd themselves in Lydia, and so peculiarly may be called Gog. Μαγὼγ By Magog Syria is meant, or indeed, in a greater latitude, Scythia, as S. Jerome affirms from the Jews, on Ezech. And so saith Josephus, Μαγώγας Σκύθας ὑπ' αὐτῶν προσαγορευομένους, The people of Magog are called by them Scythians. By these two together the Ottoman family seems to be signally meant, of which was Mahomet the second, who besieged, and after fifty or, as Crantzius saith, sixty six days siege, took Constantinople, the seat of the Eastern Empire, called from thence new Rome, and of the principal Patriarchate there, and converted their cheif Church, Templum Sophiæ, the Temple of Wisdome, into a Temple for Mahomedan worship, and this, as Leunclavius's Annals, as Crantzius, and other the most diligent Chronologers set it down, Ann. Dom. 1453. a thousand one hundred twenty two years after the building of it (and changing the name from Byzantium) by Constantine. Of this see Æneas Sylvius Europ. c. 3. and 7. and Ep. 131, 155, 162. who by what he saith of it out of antient writers, viz. that when it was in its flourishing condition, they that saw it look'd upon it ut deorum potiùs in terris habitaculum, quàm Imperatorum, as an habitation of the gods on earth, rather then of the Emperors, affords us one farther reason why it is here called ἠγαπημένη πόλις, the beloved city, (and so also in respect of the antient learning preserved there, which made all men prize it) as its being an eminent Christian city, gives it the title of παρεμβολὴ τῶν ἁγίων the camp of Saints. Ἠγαπημένη πόλις Παρεμβολὴ τῶν ἁγίων

a. 1. And for a clearer representation of that flourishing estate of the Christian Church for a thousand years, c. 20. (to which was annex'd, as in a parenthesis, in a few verses, the rise, and successe, and destruction of Mahomedisme, at the end of the third verse, and from v. 7. to v. 11. and to that again the day of the last doom, from v. 11. to the end of the chapter) there was farther represented to me a most eminent, illustrious change, a kind of new world, all the idolatry, &c. that was before, being done away.

1. AND I saw a [a] new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away, and * there was no more sea.]

b. 2. And I saw visibly, methought, another Jerusalem coming down to be here upon the earth, set out in a very beautifull glorious manner, such as brides appear in (see c. 19. 17.) that is, the Christian Church in as much solemnity of serving and worshipping God, as in the Jewish Temple at Jerusalem had been; and that was upon Constantine's receiving the faith, and setting out his edict for Christian religion, see c. 20. 4.

2. And I John saw the holy city, [b] new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.]

c. 3. And I heard an acclamation out of heaven given to this appearance, signifying it to be the Christian Church now solemnly espoused to Christ, which he will consequently protect and defend (see Ezech. 37. 27.) as long as they faithfully adhere to him.

3. And I heard a great voice † out of heaven, saying, [c] Behold, the tabernacle of * God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and † God himself shall be with them, and be their God.]

† from the throne, the King's MS. reads ἐκ τῆς θρόνου, *God with-Σὺν μετὰ † And he shall be God with them, their God, καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ Θεὸς ἔσται μετ' αὐτῶν, Θεὸς αὐτῶν

4. And all persecutions, and pressures, and putting to death, and banishing, and punishing for religion, which was before so ordinary, and all inconvenience or incommodation by being Christians, were done away.

4. And God shall wipe away * all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away.]

5. And God owned this great change [all become new] (as the return from captivity is called a new thing, Isa. 43. 19.) as an act of his special providence, and bid me take notice of it as a thing of prime eminent importance and concernment, and as a decree of his that it should certainly come to passe.

5. And he that sate upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write, for these words are true and faithful.]

6. And he farther said unto me, Here is an end of the former state of Idol-worship, persecution, &c. (see c. 16, 17.) or, This I have done by my eternal power, and now every one that will shall have a free exercise of Christianity, without any thing done by him to purchase or contribute toward it, without any thing of inconvenience suffered by it.

6. And he said unto me, † It is done: I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, I will give unto him that is a thirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.]

† or, I have been (that is, have, and am, and will be) Alpha—for others read γέγονα τὸ Α

7. He that continueth constant unto the Christian rule, shall have all felicity in this world in doing so, (shall not now pay so dear for it as before they were wont, in times of the prevailing of idolatry) and live in the Church, my family, as the Son with the Father, in all freedome and safety.

7. He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be * his God, and he shall be my son.]

* God to him, and he shall be a son to me, αὐτῷ Θεὸς, καὶ αὐτὸς ἔσται μοι ὁ υἱός

d. 8. But for the false, apostatizing, cowardly Gnosticks, notable for so many ill qualities, abominable villanies of lust, bloodinesse, persecuting of the Orthodox pure Christians, adultery, sorcery, idol-worship, deep dissimulation, and lying, and falsifying, yea perjuries, and all such as they were, they shall utterly be turned out of the Church (see note on c. 20. d.) not to appear any more among the Christians.

8. But the [d] † fearful and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murtherers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all * liars shall have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death.]

9. And there came unto me one of the seven Angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lambs wife.]

10. And

10. And he carried me away in the ſpirit to a great and high mountain, and ſhewed me that great [c] city, the holy Jeruſalem, deſcending out of heaven from God,]

10. And methought I was carried unto the top of a great mountain, and there was ſhewed this Chriſtian Church (called a city upon an hill Mat. 5. 14.) mentioned before under the title of the new, as here of the holy Jeruſalem, (holy in reſpect of order and diſcipline for holineſſe of living) and that glorious beautiful flouriſhing ſtate beſtowed on it by God, v. 1. c.

14. And the wall which encompaſs'd the city (as that Ezec. 40. 5. round about the houſe) that is, the Chriſtian faith or doctrine, was built or founded upon the preachings of the twelve Apoſtles of Chriſt.

15. And he that talked with me had a golden reed to meaſure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.]

15. And that angel with me had a reed in his hand, c. 11. 1. to meaſure all theſe, and give the dimenſions of each, as things that were like to continue for long uſe (whereas that which was likely to be ſoon taken away, was not to be meaſured, c. 11. 2.)

16. And the city lieth four-ſquare, and the length is as large as the breadth, and he meaſured the city with the reed twelve thouſand furlongs: the length, and the breadth, and the height of it are equal.]

16. And the city or church being in the figure of a cube (an equable, ſtable figure) having every way the ſame dimenſions, was both in length and breadth twelve thouſand furlongs (by the length noting the duration of it, by the breadth the extent of its circuit) and the height was equal to the length and breadth of it, noting the flouriſhing condition of it equal to the extent and duration.

17. And he meaſured the wall thereof an hundred and fourty and four cubits, * according to the [f] meaſure of a man, that is, of † the Angel.]

* the meaſure μέτρου † an Angel ἀγγέλου

17. And the wall (that is, the Chriſtian faith or doctrin) which ſurrounded and incloſed the city, was an hundred fourty four cubits in compaſſe, that is, twelve times twelve cubits, allowing an equal proportion to every of the twelve Apoſtles (the foundations of this wall, v. 14.) in the planting that faith, building that wall. And the rod v. 14. by which he meted all this, was a pole of ſix foot long, equal to the ſtature of the Angel that appeared to me, that is, of a man, Ezek. 40. 3. f.

18. And the building of the wall of it was of Jaſper, and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glaſſe.]

18. And the matter of which this wall was made was Jaſper, a very precious and durable ſtone, (ſee c. 4. 3.) noting the ſeveral ingredients in the Chriſtian faith to be ſuch, precious precepts, (a gracious yoke) promiſes of great fidelity, ſure to be performed, and ſuch as all eternity is concerned in; and the Church it ſelf a ſociety of holy men, obſervable for ſincere conſpicuous purity, ſuch as God, who ſees to the bottome of the heart, acknowledges and approves, and ſuch as men may behold and glorifie God for them, in both reſpects expreſs'd here by gold and glaſſe; gold in reſpect of the purity and value in the ſight of God, and glaſſe in reſpect of the tranſparency of it diſcernible both to God and man: ſee Tobit 13. 16.

19. And the foundations of the wall of the city were garniſhed with all manner of precious ſtones. The firſt foundation was Jaſper, the ſecond Sapphire, the third a Chalcedonie, the fourth an Emerald,

20. The fifth Sardonyx, the ſixth Sardius, the ſeventh Chryſolite, the eight Beryl, the ninth Topaz, the tenth Chryſopraſus, the eleventh a Jacinth, the twelfth an Amethyſt.]

19, 20. And the Apoſtles, which planted this faith, were repreſented in a moſt glorious manner, by all the moſt precious things imaginable, (ſee Tobit 13. 17. and Ezech. 28. 13.) the ſeveral intimations of each of which might have ſomewhat of propriety to each of the Apoſtles, but will hardly be appliable with any certainty, but all together certainly note that which is moſt precious, and ſignifie their memory (as themſelves in their life-time) to be ſuch in the Church of God, and any thing was taught by them to be accepted with veneration.

21. And the twelve gates were twelve pearls, every ſeveral gate was of one pearl; and the ſtreet of the city was pure gold, as it were tranſparent glaſſe.

21. And the governours of the Church, which had the power of admitting into the Church, or caſting out of it, v. 12. were each of them repreſented as very eſtimable precious perſons; and the ſtreets of the city, that is, the aſſemblies or congregations of Chriſtians in the Church, were like gold and glaſſe, (as before v. 18.) for purity of life and conſpicuouſneſſe of it, and even to God, that look'd through the bottome of it, approvable.

22. And I ſaw no Temple therein, for the Lord God * almighty and the Lamb are the Temple of it.]

22. And there was liberty to ſerve God in every city and place, and not as it was wont among the Jewes, only at Jeruſalem, but whereſoever Chriſtians met together, or in every mans own receſſe, they offered up prayers to God, and God in Chriſt was in the midſt of them, eſpecially in the Chriſtian Churches ſet apart for God's peculiar ſervice in every city and town, and not only in ſome one place for all to reſort to.

23. And the city had no need of the ſun, neither of the moon to ſhine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.]

23. And there was no need of ſun and moon, new waies of revelations for the enlightning this Church, for God by coming down, and pitching his tent (being in our humane nature preſent here) upon the earth, hath planted the faith entirely, and ſo his doctrine is the full light of his Church, the rule of all our faith, and ſo there is no need of any additions, or new revelations.

24. And the nations of them which * are ſaved ſhall walk in the light of it, and the kings of the earth doe bring their glory and honour into it.]

*eſcape σῳζόμενοι

24. And all the people of the world, that come to any ſenſe of their Idolatries and ſins, by all God's judgments fallen upon them, ſhall be content to live ſtrictly according to this rule, (Iſa. 60. 3.) and the Kings of the earth, (ſee Iſa. 49. 23.) the higheſt in all ſorts of power, and learning, &c. will ſubmit themſelves to it, and be glad to be members of the Church, and doe their beſt to ſupport it, and endow it with the riches of this world.

25. And there ſhall be a moſt ready hoſpitable reception at all times, for all that will come in to the faith by amendment of life.

25. And the gates of it ſhall not be ſhut at all by day, for there ſhall be no night there.]

26. And the Gentiles of other parts that are not ſubject to the Roman Empire, ſhall come in to the Church, and contribute their beſt to the flouriſhing of it, by endowing of the Church (which is ordinarily meant by honour, ſee Col. 2. note i.)

26. And they ſhall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.]

27. And this ſhall generally be done by all that have any reſolution of living purely and godly, and only they ſhall be kept out which are immers'd in all filthineſs, and abominable, unnatural, vicious practices, and in all kind of unjuſt dealings, (for ſuch cannot by the laws of baptiſme be received, and ſuch will not deſire to undergoe Chriſt's diſcipline.)

27. And there ſhall in no wiſe enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatſoever worketh abomination, † and maketh a lie, but they which are written in the Lambs book of life.]

a. Οὐρανὸς καινὸς καὶ γῆ καινὴ

V. 1. New heaven and new earth] That heaven and earth ſignifie no more then the world, hath been ſhewed in Note on 2 Pet. 3. b. and conſequently a new heaven and a new earth, in ſtead of the old, which is put away, muſt ſignifie no more than a new world. And this in the prophetick ſtyle is moſt proper to denote a flouriſhing ſtate and condition of the Church, as there in S. Peter the new heaven and new earth wherein dwelleth righteouſneſſe, is a pure Chriſtian Church planted by Chriſt, in ſtead of the old Judaical mode; but this here with ſome difference, noting the flouriſhing condition of it, in oppoſition to the former perſecutions it was under, the change conſiſting in that. And this from Iſai. 65. 17. where, creating new heavens and new earth, is ſending the Jewes a joyfull deliverance, and that a very permanent one, ch. 66. 22. To which is appliable that of the Jewes, who ſay that whenſoever שיר חדש the new ſong is mention'd, 'tis meant of the future age, that of the Meſſias, (ſo R. Solomon on Pſal. 96. 1.) and R. Gaon renders the reaſon, becauſe there ſhall be a new heaven and a new earth.

b. Ἱερουσαλὴμ καινὴ

V. 2. New Jeruſalem] The true meaning of the new Jeruſalem mention'd here, ver. 2. and again with the addition of holy, and the glory of God upon it, ver. 11. will be a key to the interpreting this chapter. That it ſignifies not the ſtate of glorified Saints in heaven, appears by its deſcending from heaven in both places, (and that, according to the uſe of that phraſe, ch. 10. 1. & 18. 1. as an expreſſion of ſome eminent benefit and bleſſing in the Church) and ſo it muſt needs be here on earth; and being here ſet down with the glory of God upon it, it will ſignifie the pure Chriſtian Church, joyning Chriſtian practice with the profeſſion thereof, and that in a flouriſhing condition, expreſs'd by the new heaven and new earth (ſee Note a.) In this ſenſe we have the ſupernal Jeruſalem, Gal. 4. 26. the new Jeruſalem, Rev. 3. 12. where to the conſtant profeſſor is promiſed that God will write upon him the name of God, and the name of the city of God, the new Jeruſalem, which there ſignifies the pure Catholick Chriſtian Church. To which purpoſe it is obſervable, that Euſebius in the ſetting forth the flouriſhing of the Chriſtian Church in Conſtantine's time, particularly the building of a magnificent Temple to Chriſt at the place of his ſepulture in Jeruſalem, ſaith of it, that it was καινὴ καὶ νέα Ἱερουσαλὴμ ἧς ἄνωθεν μακρόθι (I ſhould think it ſhould be ἐγγὺς) λόγοι μνεῖα δὴ ἐνθέοις πνεύμασι & θεσπίζουσι ἀνυμνοῦσι, the new Jeruſalem, concerning which the holy Scriptures propheſying by divine Spirit doe ſing many things, l. 3. De vit. Conſt. c. 32. Where there is little doubt but this book and place of this prophetick Revelation is referred to by him wherein this new Jeruſalem is ſo magnificently ſet out: And though his application of it to the building of that Temple at Jeruſalem (both there and before, ἡ νέα καλεσκάζετο Ἱερουσαλὴμ ἀντιπροσώπῳ τῇ πάλαι βοωμένῃ) be ſomewhat too much reſtrain'd, yet the time of Conſtantine is perfectly agreeable to the notion which we have given of it; and the flouriſhing condition of Chriſtianity, not only at Jeruſalem (of which the building that Temple was an inſtance) but over the whole habitable world (the full importance of it) is not any way excluded by this ſtricter accommodation of his, but is rather evidenced by theſe paſſages to have been the interpretation affix'd to this prophecie in thoſe times wherein he wrote. The only difficulty remaining will be, whether this Viſion being here placed after that other of chap. 20. concerning the thouſand years, and the Turks invaſions of the Church, it be here ſet to ſignifie any new change after that, founded in the deſtruction of the Mahometans, ch. 20. 9, 10. or whether it may not more probably be a repetition of the ſame thing more largely which is there ſet down, ch 20. 4, 6. And this latter may ſafely be pitch'd upon, notwithſtanding the placing of it after. For that which hath been obſerved of Joſeph concerning the King's dreams, Gen. 41. 32. that the two dreams being to one purpoſe, v. 25. 'twas doubled, to ſhew 'twas eſtabliſhed by God, ſo it hath been ordinary with the Prophets in the Old Teſtament, and oft exemplified here, that two Viſions ſhould belong to the ſame matter. And this here very pertinent to the one deſigne of all theſe Viſions, to fortifie the ſeven Churches of Aſia, by foretelling largely the flouriſhing condition to which God ſhould at laſt advance the Chriſtian Church, which being but briefly pointed at in the former chapter (and that with a mixture of the contrary) and only the ſpace of it for the thouſand years particularly and punctually inſiſted on, 'twas here fit to be more largely and rhetorically ſet down, being a thing of ſo great importance. That this is the meaning of the new Jeruſalem may further appear by an eminent monument in the prophecie of old Tobit before his death, ch. 14. 6, 7. where the third great period propheſied of by him is expreſs'd by the building up Jeruſalem glorioufly (of the former ſee Note on Mat. 24. c. and the Præmon.) the beginning of which is the converſion of the Gentile world, and their burying their idols, ver. 6. (which was the ſumme of theſe former Viſions, ch. 18.) and then follows, all nations praiſing the Lord, all people confeſſing God, and the Lord's exalting his people, and all thoſe that love the Lord our God in truth and juſtice ſhall rejoice, ſhewing mercy to our brethren, a ſtate of flouriſhing piety, magnifying, bleſſing, praiſing God, and of charity and mercy to all men, which is the ſumme of this enſuing Viſion, and (as that there, ſo here) the concluſion of all.

c. Ἰδοὺ ἡ σκηνὴ τοῦ θεοῦ μετὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων

V. 3. Behold the Tabernacle of God] The meaning of this phraſe, ἰδοὺ ἡ σκηνὴ τοῦ θεοῦ μετὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων behold the tabernacle of God with men, will eaſily appear by remembring the affinity of the σκηνὴ tabernacle, and the the Schechinah, appearance or preſence of God, called here ver. 11. δόξα glory, and oft elſewhere. God is wont to be ſaid in Scripture to be preſent where his Angels appear; accordingly the Pictures of the Cherubims in the Tabernacle, and after in the Temple, were notes of his peculiar preſence there. And ſo both the Jewiſh Temple and Chriſtian Church having the promiſe of God's peculiar preſence, is fitly ſtyled his Tabernacle here and ch. 13. 6. and elſewhere his houſe, both in the ſame ſenſe, a tabernacle being but a moveable houſe. And then behold the tabernacle of God with men, is no more but an interpretation of that which was repreſented in this Viſion, viz. that hereby was noted the Church of Chriſt, whoſe title is Emmanuel, God with us, or God with men, God incarnate; and the ἰδὲ behold, is a determination of it to what went immediatly before, thus, The bride adorned for the husband, is the Chriſtian Church (ſee ver. 9.) And then the promiſe that follows, he will dwell with them, &c. is his marrying, and endowing, and living, and dwelling with this ſpouſe, that is, continuing his favour and love and protection to the Church, as long as that continues faithful to him, performs the duties of a wife, obedience and fidelity to the husband. And then conſequent to that mercy and protection is the ceſſation of perſecutions that follows, καὶ ἐξαλείψει πᾶν δάκρυον, and he ſhall wipe every tear from their eyes, &c. remove all cauſe of ſorrow from the Chriſtians.

V. 8. Fearfull] The δειλοὶ cowardly here, which are ſet in the front of all theſe ſins, denote the renouncers of Chriſt in time of perſecution, ſet oppoſite to perſevering Chriſtians, v. 7. and here clearly ſignifie the Gnoſticks, or ſuch as they were, whoſe poſition it was, that 'twas an indifferent, and ſo a lawful, thing to forſwear Chriſt in time of perſecution, and to ſacrifice to Idols (here alſo noted by idolatry.) They are farther expreſs'd by ἄπιστοι unfaithful, that fall off from Chriſt; and more eſpecially by ἐβδελυγμένοι deteſted, and πόρνοι fornicators, and φαρμακοῖς ſorcerers, &c. ſee Note on ch. 2. b. & ch. 9. c. & 1 Joh. 4. a. So Tertullian interprets it in Scorp. contra Gnoſt. c. 12. Inter reprobos, imò ante omnes, timidis, inquit, particula in ſtagno ignis, Ap. 21. among the reprobates, yea before all them, the cowardly have their portion in the lake of fire.

V. 10. City] That the City is the Church is moſt evident in this Viſion, being before called the holy City, the new Jeruſalem, ver. 2. Now the wall is that which encompaſſeth the city, keeps all out which are not thought fit to be admitted, and guards and ſecures the city. And to this the Chriſtian doctrine is perfectly anſwerable: none are to be admitted or continued there which doe not acknowledge that; and ſo this likewiſe defends and fortifies the Church from the invaſion of Hereticks. And he that teacheth any other doctrine, let him be Anathema. As for the μέγα καὶ ὑψηλὸν, greatneſſe and highneſs of this wall, that ſignifies the excellence and even divinity of this doctrine, admirable precepts, divine and heavenly promiſes. And as this is a defenſative to the city, ſo the foundations thereof are the ſeveral preachings of the Apoſtles in all their travails, which being the ſame in all places, this one wall is ſaid to have twelve foundations, ver. 14. and on them the names of the twelve Apoſtles of the Lamb, to ſignifie thoſe doctrines that are not thus founded on their preaching, either by word of mouth, or by writing deduced from them, not to be fit for reception in the Church.

Μέγα καὶ ὑψηλὸν

f. Μέτρον ἀνθρώπου

V. 17. Meaſure of a man] That μέτρον ἀνθρώπου, the meaſure of a man, referres here to the ſtature of a man, appears moſt probable by the addition of ὅ ἐστιν ἀγγέλου, that is of an Angel. For as here the perſon ſeen in the Viſion was an Angel, ver. 9. ſo Ezech. 40. 3. where there is mention of this meaſuring reed, it was ſhewed him by a man whoſe appearance was like the appearance of braſſe, that is, a man in a glorious appearance, ſuch as Angels uſed to appear in. And then the μέτρον or meaſure muſt referre, not to the cubit, immediately precedent, but to the κάλαμος or reed, ver. 15. noting that reed by which he had meaſured the city to be about ſix foot long, and ſo the meaſure or ſtature of a man, or Angel in humane ſhape, as now he appeared unto him. That the reed or pole was of this ſize, that is ſix foot long, may be concluded from Ezech. 40. 5. There, as here, was a man with a meaſuring reed, ver. 3. and that reed was ſix cubits long, but that cubit not, as 'tis ordinarily counted, a foot and a half, but as it is taken by the meaſure of that bone which gives the denomination; Πῆχυς διάστημα ἀπὸ τοῦ ὠλεκράνου πρὸς τὸ καρπὸν, a cubit is the diſtance from the elbow to the wriſt, as Ariſtotle and the Anatomiſts determine, which is in well-proportion'd bodies the ſixth part of a man's ſtature. And that this was the acceptation of πῆχυς, as among the Grecians ſo among the Hebrews, appears by the account of Joſephus De bell. Jud. l. ε'. c. ιγ'. where having made the wall to contain 90. turrets, each of them 20. cubits long, and the ſpace betwixt each to be 200. cubits, (which muſt conclude the circuit of the wall to be 19800 cubits) he adds, Τῆς πόλεως δὲ ὁ πᾶς κύκλος σταδίων ὢν τριάκοντα τριῶν, the whole compaſſe of the city was thirty three furlongs: which concludes the allotment of 600. cubits to every furlong; and that we know among the Greeks contained 600. foot. So that the cubit is no more then a foot, or the ſixth part of a man's ſtature. So when Solinus ſaith of the walls of Babylon, * quorum altitudo ducentos pedes detinet, that they were two hundred foot high, and ſo † Pliny, * Oroſius ſaith they were fifty cubits broad, altitudine quater tantâ, four times as high, that is two hundred cubits; and ſo ſaith Herodotus, ὕψος δὲ διηκοσίων πηχέων, the height was two hundred cubits. That all this meaſuring of the city is myſtically to be underſtood, and not literally, there is no doubt; but what the myſterie is will not be obvious to determine. This may perhaps be it; that the conſidering or pondering, that is meaſuring of the Church, the duration, the extent, the flouriſhing of it, here deſcribed, as alſo of the walls thereof, the Chriſtian faith, is the work, delight, deſire of Angels, one of the number of thoſe things which the Angels deſire to look into, 1 Pet. 1. 12. Eph. 3. 10, 18, 19.

CHAP. XXII.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND he ſhewed me [a] a pure river of water of life, clear as cryſtal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.]

1. And in the ſame viſion I farther ſaw, by the Angels ſhewing me, or pointing to it, a font or baptiſtery, to which they that were admitted were bound to undertake all purity of living, and the power of admitting to that was intruſted to the Governours of the Church, by Chriſt communicated to them.

2. In the midſt of the [b] ſtreet * of it and [c] on either ſide the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month, and [d] the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations.]

2. And I ſaw alſo a place for Chriſtian aſſemblies; and betwixt that and

* thereof, & of the river, on this ſide and on that was the Tree of Life bearing twelve fruits, yielding

the font was the tree of life planted, noting theſe two to be great obligations, and advancers of piety in mens hearts, ſuch as ſhould bring forth all manner of fruits of holineſſe at all ſeaſons. And the viſible outward profeſſion and form of piety in the Church (perhaps diſcipline, and government, and ceremonies inſtituted in it) were to be of great uſe, as to attract others and bring them into the Church, ſo to keep men in a good healthy ſtate of ſoul, or reduce and reſtore them that are fallen from it.

c. 3. And for notorious ſinners, ſuch to whom the cenſures of the Church belong, they ſhall not be permitted to continue in it; for the Chriſtian judicatures ſhall never ceaſe, or be turned out of it, for the ſpace of the thouſand years, (as many other governments have failed) and all Chriſtians will ſubmit to it.

3. And † there [c] ſhall be no more curſe, but the throne of God and of the Lamb [b] ſhall be in it, and his ſervants ſhall ſerve him.]

[b] † any accurſed thing ſhall be there no longer

4. And ſuch as doe ſo ſhall have the favour of God, and ſhall be accounted true Chriſtian ſervants of his.

4. And they ſhall ſee his face, and his name ſhall be in their foreheads.]

5. And in this Church of Chriſt there ſhall be no more ſadneſſe or darkneſſe, no want of refreſhment or comfort, God ſhall be all in all unto them: and they ſhall never fail to enjoy this felicity of cheerfull Chriſtian living, this freedome of ſerving God, &c. expreſs'd by being Kings, ſee note on ch. 1. d. and by reigning with Chriſt, ch. 20. 4.

5. And there ſhall be no night there, and they need no candle, neither light of the ſun, for the Lord God giveth them light: and they ſhall reign for ever and ever.]

6. And the Angel then began to conclude and fold up his diſcourſe to me, and to ſumme up what I had ſeen in this viſion, telling me, That all this, as ſtrange and glorious as it was, ſhould certainly come to paſſe, and that that God which inſpired and gave commiſſions to all the prophets had now ſent an Angel to make this revelation, by way of viſion, of thoſe things that were ſpeedily to commence, and one after another to come to paſſe.

6. And he ſaid unto me, Theſe ſayings are faithfull and true. And the Lord God of the holy prophets ſent his Angel to ſhew unto his ſervants the things that muſt * ſhortly be done.]

* ſuddenly ἐν τάχει

7. And this conſideration of the ſpeedineſs of the completion of theſe prophecies, that of the proſperity of the Church under the Chriſtian Emperors and Kings within 250 years, but of thoſe that concerned the deſtruction of the Jews and Gnoſticks, the preſent enemies and perſecutors of Chriſtians, every where call'd the coming of Chriſt, (ſee note on Mat. 24. b.) now immediately approaching, is of ſo important conſideration to every one who now lives in the Chriſtian Church, that as 'tis the only way to felicity for a man to guide his actions by the contents of this prophecy, ſo 'twill go very ill with him that doth not.

7. Behold, I come quickly: Bleſſed is he that keepeth the ſayings of the prophecie of this book.]

8. And I that write all this book of viſions, by way of Epiſtle to the ſeven Churches of Aſia, am that very perſon that ſaw and heard all that is here ſet down: And when I did ſee them and hear them, I was ſo tranſported with the joyfulneſſe of the matter of them, that I did in expreſſion of a true ſenſe of that benefit, perform a moſt humble obeiſance to him that had been the meſſenger to conveigh it to me: ſee ch. 19. 10.

8. And I John ſaw theſe things, and heard them. And when I had heard and ſeen, I fell down to worſhip before the feet of the Angel which ſhewed me theſe things.]

9. But he would not permit me, ſaying, I am but a fellow-ſervant of thine, and but equal to the other prophets which are thy brethren, (thou thy ſelf being ſuch an one by being an Apoſtle, ſee ch. 19. 10.) and they that live Chriſtianly, and perſevere in the faith of Chriſt againſt all temptations, according to the deſigne of this book, are abſolutely ſuch as I am, the ſervants of God alſo. Let God have the thanks and praiſe of all that ſhall be done, and of all that is now revealed to thee.

9. Then ſaith he unto me, See thou doe it not, for I am thy fellow-ſervant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the ſayings of this book: Worſhip God.]

10. And then, methought, Chriſt himſelf ſaid thus unto me, Seal not, ſhut not up this prophecie (as ſealing is oppoſed to leaving open and legible, Iſa. 29. 11.) Lay it not up as a thing that only future ages are concern'd in: For the time of the completion of a great part of it is ſo immediately at hand, that 'tis fit the prophecie ſhould be open, for all to ſee and to obſerve the completions of it.

10. And he ſaith unto me, Seal not the ſayings of the prophecies of this book, for the time is at hand.]

11. And now the bad and good ſhall come to receive their ſentence: there remain not now any more ſeaſons of working changes on any, but he that is now an impenitent perſecutor of Chriſtianity, an impenitent carnal Gnoſtick, is like ſuddenly to be taken and dealt with accordingly: and on the other ſide, he that hath held out conſtant for all thoſe terrors and perſecutions, and deceits of carnal ſins, is ſuddenly to receive the fruits and reward of it.

11. He that is * unjuſt, let him be unjuſt ſtill; and he which † is filthy, let him be filthy ſtill; and he that is righteous, let him * be righteous ſtill; and he that is holy, let him be holy ſtill.]

* or, doe righteouſneſs, the King's MS. reads δικαιοσύνην ποιησάτω

12. And I ſhall not now make any longer delaies (as hitherto hath by ſome been objected againſt the fidelity of my promiſes, 2 Pet. 3. 9.) but haſten to reward every man according to his works, both good and evil.

12. And behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work ſhall be.]

13. I am the eternal God, that have deſcended ſo low to the very death of the croſſe, and having been my ſelf tempted, am ſure not to leave you in calamities; I am able to perform my promiſe, and ſhall not by any means be hindred from it.

13. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the firſt and the laſt.]

14. Thrice happy are they that receive the faith of Chriſt, and live according to thoſe rules of piety mentioned, ver. 2. and live quietly and Chriſtianly in the Church.

14. Bleſſed are they that † doe his commandements, that they may have * right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.]

21. I am now to conclude this Epiſtle to the ſeven Churches in the ſolemn form of Apoſtolical ſalutation, The grace, mercy and goodneſs of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.

Annotations on Chap. XXII.

a. V. 1. A pure river] The five firſt verſes of this chapter belong to the buſineſſe of the former chapter, the deſcription of the Chriſtian Church in its flouriſhing condition, and ought not to have been divided from it. And this firſt verſe hath a nearer connexion with that which immediatly preceded. There in the beginning of it is mention of entrance into the Church, and who they were that ſhould not be admitted to it. Now this entrance we know was by Baptiſme, and that is ſure expreſs'd here by the καθαρὸς ποταμὸς ὕδατος καὶ ζωῆς the pure river of water of life. The place wherein they baptized was firſt any great pool of water (typified, Ezech. 47. 5. by waters to ſwim in) where they might go in, as Philip with the Eunuch, and be put under water; from whence it is ordinarily by the antients call'd κολυμβήθρα a pool. In the times here referred to, that is, under Conſtantine, the Font was in the Court before the Church, Fountain-water running always into it. This Fountain-water is in the New Teſtament called ζῶν ὕδωρ living water, and here by analogie water of life, but that with the addition of a myſtical ſenſe (as when Ezech. 47. 9. it is ſaid, that every thing that moveth, whereſoever the waters come, ſhall live; or when Chriſt ſpeaks of ὕδωρ ἁλλόμενον εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, water leaping, or ſpringing, to eternal life) becauſe Baptiſme as an initiation into the Church, is an entrance into a Chriſtian and eternal life. And the water in the Baptiſtery or Font, maintained from the ſpring, is called here ποταμὸς river, a word by which any running water is called, and ſo that Ezech. 47. 5. And this river καθαρὸς pure, becauſe Baptiſme is a federal ſacramental undertaking of all purity of living, forſaking all ſin, and engaging of the ſoul to purity; and in the ſame reſpect it is alſo ſaid to be λαμπρὸς ὡς κρύσταλλος, clear as Cryſtal, being an obligation to all purity in the baptized. Now that this pure river is ſaid to proceed, not as Ezech. 47. 1. from under the threſhold of the houſe, but out of the throne of God and the Lamb, hath ſome more difficulty in it, which, I conceive, may thus be reſolved; The throne is a notation of power and judicature, as when God is introduced in the Viſion, c. 4. 1. ſitting on a throne; and ſo the throne of the Lamb is that power which is by Chriſt enſtated on the Governours of the Church, of which the power of baptizing being one ſpecial part, this river by which Baptiſme is expreſs'd is fitly ſaid to proceed out of the throne. To which purpoſe it muſt be obſerved, that the power of baptizing, though communicated to inferiour Prieſts and Deacons, was at firſt in the Apoſtles, and from them deſcended to the Biſhops, and never permitted to any but by appointment from the Biſhop. So ſaith Ignatius, οὐκ ἔξον ἐστὶ χωρὶς τοῦ Ἐπισκόπου οὔτε βαπτίζειν, &c. in Ep. ad Smyrn. 'Tis not lawful to baptize without the Biſhop: and Tertullian de Bapt. Dandi baptiſmum jus habet ſummus Sacerdos, qui eſt Epiſcopus; dein Presbyteri & Diaconi, non tamen ſine Epiſcopi authoritate. The chief Prieſt, who is called the Biſhop, hath the power of giving baptiſme, after him the Presbyters and Deacons, but not without the authority of the Biſhop. And S. Cyprian makes two parts of the power of the keys, (that ruling power, as of the œconomus, intruſted to the Governours of the Church, the ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles) the one to admit as by the key in Baptiſme, the other by Abſolution. And that moſt probably is the meaning of this place, where the baptiſmal water is in the Viſion ſaid to proceed from the throne of God, and of the Lamb.

b. V. 2. Street] What πλατεῖα the ſtreet denotes in this Viſion may be eaſily reſolved by obſerving that the ſtreets or broad places of a city are places of concourſe and reſort, and ſo συναγωγαὶ and ῥύμαι, aſſemblies and ſtreets, are uſed together in the ſame ſenſe, Mat. 6. 5. Accordingly the ſtreet or broad place here will be fit to denote the place of aſſembly in the Church or City of God, where the prayers are offered up, and the ſacrifice of the Church in the Euchariſt, and where inſtruction is reach'd out to them. πλατεῖα

c. Ib. On either ſide of the river] That the tree of life here mentioned (in ſtead of the very many trees in Ezechiel, ch. 47. 7) looks back to Paradiſe, where that tree was ſet, Gen. 2. 9. doth ſeem moſt probable, and well accords alſo with the river here joyn'd with it, as there v. 10. a river went out of Eden to water the garden. And therefore what is here meant by it in the prophetick notion, may be beſt learn'd from the allegorical interpretations which the antient writers ξύλον ζωῆς affix to it in the Old Teſtament; for thoſe will be moſt agreeable to the prophetick ſtyle, which we know is made up of figures. Now of the tree of life ſaith Philo, it ſignified θεοσέβειαν piety, or worſhip of God. And ſo Clemens Alexandrinus, that the tree of knowledge was ἐὰν παρανομῶμεν, if we tranſgreſſe, that is, it ſignified ſinne, of which whoſoever taſted, ſhould die, but the tree of life denoted piety, of which he that eat, ſhould live eternally. Other deſcants there are on it here, that it ſhould ſignifie the croſſe of Chriſt, or the enlivening grace of God: but this is the moſt agreeable to the Context, and the other circumſtances thereof. But it muſt here be enquired what is the meaning of the phraſe, ἐν μέσῳ πλατείας καὶ τοῦ ποταμοῦ, ἐνθεν καὶ ἐνθεν, which we render, in the midſt of the ſtreet of it, and on either ſide the River; but the words bear not that, and a great inconvenience there muſt be in ſo rendring them, for the tree of life, which appears to be in Paradiſe and here but one, and not many, as in Ezechiel, nor ſet on the bank of the river, as there, muſt yet be ſuppoſed to be on both ſides of the river, which is impoſſible. The beſt and moſt literal rendring will be this, ἐν μέσῳ τῆς πλατείας καὶ τοῦ ποταμοῦ, in the midſt of the ſtreet and the river, ἐνθεν καὶ ἐνθεν, (or, as the Kings MS. reads, καὶ ἐκεῖθεν) on this ſide and on that ſide, that is, not as in Ezechiel, the many trees on the one ſide and on the other ſide of the river, but ſo, as may be applicable to the one tree, and to the ſtreet, and river here named, one of them on one ſide, t'other on the other ſide of the tree. That this is the meaning of the phraſe may appear not only by the commodiouſneſſe of this ſenſe, and the abſurdities conſequent to the other rendring, but alſo by comparing it with another paſſage in this writer, Joh. 19. 18. where it is ſaid they crucified Chriſt, καὶ μεθ' ἑαυτὸν ἄλλους δύο, ἐντεῦθεν καὶ ἐντεῦθεν, μέσον δὲ Ἰησοῦν, and with him two others, on this ſide and on that ſide, and Jeſus in the midſt (A phraſe very near to this, ἐν μέσῳ here being all one with μέσον there.) There Jeſus is in the midſt of the two theeves, that is, between them, and that expreſs'd by the ἐντεῦθεν καὶ ἐντεῦθεν, as here; That muſt ſignifie there one of them on this ſide of him, and the other on that, and therefore it muſt in all reaſon be ſo here alſo, the ſtreet on one ſide, and the river on the other ſide, and the tree of life in the midſt, or betwixt them. This being thus far clear, for the literal underſtanding of it, and ſo the repreſentation not abſolutely the ſame with that in Ezechiel, but lightly varied from it in ſome few circumſtances, the myſtical or prophetical meaning of it will be clear alſo, that betwixt the place of aſſembling on one ſide, and the Font or Baptiſtery on the other ſide, ſtood Piety in the midſt, Baptiſme being on purpoſe deſigned to initiate, and engage us to piety, and by God's grace to enable us to perform it, and the ſervice of God in the aſſembly, the prayers and the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, and Chriſtian inſtruction deſigned ſo too, for the confirming our vows of new life, and to inſtruct us farther in our duty, and to bring down more grace for the performance of it. What is added of the δώδεκα καρποὶ, (not twelve manner of fruits, but) twelve fruits, is taken from Ezechiel alſo, ch. 47. 12. and is not to be applied to any ſet number of ſeveral vertues, as ſome would have it, but to the conſtant continual production of them, not at a few, but at all ſeaſons; for ſo the year being the meaſure of all time, bearing fruit as oft as there be moneths in the year, muſt needs ſignifie the continual, conſtant fruitfulneſs of it. And this was much for the honour of the tree, few trees bearing above once a year, few in the winter, but this every moneth in the year; and ſo the fitter to denote Chriſtian piety, to which our Baptiſme engageth us, and our living in the Church confirms that engagement on us, and both to continue to ſerve God in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe all the days of our lives.

Ib. The leaves of the tree] The leaves of a tree that beareth fruit are of uſe to guard and preſerve the fruit; and beſides they are many of them medicinal; and ſo both in Ezechiel and here they are ſaid to be εἰς θεραπείαν for healing or medicine. That which is moſt probably here meant by theſe leaves of this tree of life, is the outward viſibleneſſe and exemplarineſſe of piety, which accompanies the fruits of it. This in ſingle perſons is only the ſhining of their light before men, which is of great uſe to attract others (even the ἔθνη, if that ſignifie the Gentiles, unbelievers here) to Chriſtianity, who ſee their good works; whereas the ſcandalous ſins of Chriſtians are apt to alienate and deter others from that profeſſion. But in a Church theſe leaves may ſignifie more alſo, the publick and frequent aſſembling for the ſervice and worſhip of God, and the Canons and exerciſe of ſtrict diſcipline, &c. And that theſe latter, of the diſcipline and cenſures of the Church, are meant by theſe leaves, may be collected not only by the uſefulneſſe of them to the preſerving works of piety in a Church, (as leaves are for preſerving the fruit,) and ſecondly, by the propriety of them in order to curing of the diſeaſes of mens ſouls, the reforming of lapſed ſinners, which may here be expreſs'd by εἰς θεραπείαν for healing; but alſo by that which follows preſently upon it, v. 3. which moſt ſignally belongs to this matter of Cenſures, (ſee Note e.)

V. 3. Shall be no more curſe] That ἀνάθεμα, a curſe or execration, is ordinarily taken for the perſon to whom that Cenſure or ſecond ſort of Excommunication belongs, appears by the uſe of it in other places of the New Teſtament. Thus Rom. 9. 3. ηὐχόμην ἀνάθεμα εἶναι, I could wiſh to be a curſe, that is, accurſed, from Chriſt, ſeparate or excommunicate from the body of Chriſt, the Church. So 1 Cor. 16. 22. If any man love not—— let him be anathema; and Gal. 1. 8. If I or an angel ſhall teach any other doctrine, let him be anathema. In all theſe places the word Curſe is clearly put for an excommunicate or accurſed perſon, put under the cenſures or execration of the Church; and accordingly here in any reaſon πᾶν κατάθεμα every curſe muſt ſignifie every wicked perſon fit for the Cenſures of the Church: And then the οὐκ ἔσται ἔτι, ſhall be no longer, muſt ſignifie the exerciſe of ſuch diſcipline in the Church, in excluding all ſuch wicked perſons out of it, and ſo to the mention of Baptiſme, by the river, v. 1, 2. and of the Chriſtian aſſemblies, by the ſtreets, v. 2. adds the uſe of excommunication in the Chriſtian Church, for which we know Eccleſiaſtical Judicatories were erected in Conſtantine's time, and ſo continued under the favour of Chriſtian Emperors and Princes. By which appears alſo what is meant by the throne of God and the Lamb in this verſe, viz. Chriſtian Judicatories for the excommunicating of ſcandalous offenders, wherein the power exerciſed by the Biſhops is acknowledged to be the Power of God, or Chriſt, and this throne here the ſame with that v. 1. the power of Baptizing and of excommunicating, of admitting and excluding from the Church, being branches of the ſame authority, by Chriſt communicated to the Apoſtles.

V. 18. If any man ſhall add——] This form of ſpeech here uſed to conclude this Book is, Firſt, a Symbolical and prophetical form of expreſſing the certainty and immutability of this Prophecie; and Secondly, an expreſſion of the abſoluteneſſe and perfection of it in order to publick uſe, that it ſhould be the one prophecie given to the Chriſtian Church, which ſhould bring divine authority along with it, ſent with a commiſſion from heaven; and not only proceeding from a publick ſpirit, but ſent out with a publick charge, that (as Joſephus ſaith contr. Appion. l. 1. that after the time of Artaxerxes, though many excellent things were written, yet they brought not divine authority with with them, nor consequently were so received or believed, because there was not then a certain succession of Prophets, and * no body durst adde, or detract, or change any thing in the Old Canon after so long a time, so) though there might be some Prophets after S. John, (as Justin Martyr tells us, that the gift of Prophecie remained in the Church till his time) yet this book should be the last, and so the close and seal of all publick Prophecie, and that therefore no new doctrine was now farther to be expected by the Christian Church, and whosoever taught any as a rule of faith and life, and pretended Revelation for it, should fall under the censure denounced against false Prophets, Deut. 13. and under Saint Paul's anathema, Gal. 1. 8, 9. That this should be only an ὅρκωμοσία, or adjuration of the Scribe, as in the end of Irenaus in some Copies there is an adjuration not to add or diminish (and as 'tis said in Aristeas, that after the translation of the Septuagint, Demetrius perswaded the Jews to adde an imprecation on any that should change, or add, or transpose, or take away any word from it) was the conjecture of a learned man, Mr. Lively; and as it may very well be received, so need it not prejudge those other importances of it before mentioned.
